MEETING HELD AT OPERA HOUSE

Attorney Jacobson of Dayton Gives Talk on Home Rule and Prohibition.

SAYS PROHIBITION DOES NOT PROHIBIT

Speaker Quotes Statistics to Refute Claims Made by Opponents of Wet

I. L. Jacobson, a Dayton attorney, delivered a talk last evening in the opera house on prohibition and home rule. He was introduced by Arnold Kallmerten. The speaking followed the pictures which were shown free

The speaker dwelt mostly on the effects which he says will follow if Ohio goes dry. "Notwithstanding the fact that 200,000 people are now out of work, a certain class of people are trying to throw out that many more," was one of the first declarations made by the speaker.

"The governors of the nine prohibition states have to say that prohibition is a success. I am not opposed to township local option law and the township local option laws will be preserved by the home rule amendment."

"The Rose law was one of the most unfair acts of legislation ever passed. The county is made the unit and if a majority of the people vote dry, then the entire county goes dry. If a county goes wet, it does not make the places which were dry, wet. The drys are seeking to confuse the people by saying that the home rule amendment will repeal all liquor laws. The greatest lawyers say it does not. The two judges who say it will repeal the local option laws are Judge Davis and Judge Killeta."

"The prohibitionists cannot agree on the number of people which they claim die annually from alcoholism. Some claim 100,000, some 75,000. The statistics for 1912 give the number at 3,183. Don't accept any figures from the drys. Hobson is not telling the truth with his figures. Eighty per cent of poverty is not caused by liquor. It is the money the laboring man earns for his employer under the trust system which causes poverty.

"The next thing we know, there will be an agitation to prohibit the use of tobacco. The greatest condemnation of prohibition is that it does not prohibit. Prohibition does not prohibit in Kansas. More liquor is being consumed each year in despite of nine states going dry. No prohibition promise ever comes true. When a state or county goes dry, then the people drink patent medicines.

"Liquor is not the cause of crime. It is lust, greed, jealousy and revenge are the causes of crime. There are fewer church members in the prohibition states than in the license states. Prohibition is unreasonable. Muzzle the man who abuses the use of liquor. It is the abuse and not the use of liquor which makes the trouble. It is the man in front of the bar that makes the trouble."

Attorney Jacobson read numerous statistics to refute the figures which he claims the prohibitionists are giving out.—Mansfield News. Adyt.

An Autumn Wedding.

A pretty wedding occurred at an early hour Sunday morning at the home of Mrs. A. A. Carpenter, when her daughter, Miss Maude was united in marriage to John H. Kutscher, by the Rev. Chas. H. Mott.

The house was beautifully decorated with fall flowers and autumn foliage. After a vocal solo by Miss Blanche Stotts, the bridal company entered, accompanied by the beautiful strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Jessie Cole, and took their position under an artistic arch of fall foliage.

The impressive ring ceremony was used. The bride wore a silk crepe de chene dress and carried a bouquet of white roses; the groom wore the conventional black. The bride was attended by Miss Harriet Rogers.

After the ceremony a four-course wedding breakfast was served by Mrs. Hossler and Mrs. Brooks. The happy couple left on the 7:40 car for a brief honey-moon

The bride is a highly esteemed young lady of this community. The groom is a well principled, ambitious young man. They will make their home at Chillicothe, Ohio, where the groom will resume his duties as a commercial teacher in the High School.

These accomplished young people have the best wishes of their many friends.

Methodist Notes

Our church has experienced a great loss in the death of brother F. W. Ames, whose funeral will be held at the church Saturday morning at eleven o'clock.

A large congregation listened to a helpful sermon by Rev. Chas. Gallimore, district superintendent, on last Sunday evening.

After the large and cordial reception of Tuesday evening, the pastor and wife feel very much at home in Plymouth.

The organized Men's Bible Class of the Sunday School will hold a meeting Sunday afternoon at two o'clock to make plans for the future. All men invited.

Next Sunday evening the Epworth League will begin the study of Harry F. Ward's book, "The Social Creed of the Churches," which is a text book on Social Service. It will be well for you to plan to be present.

PASSENGER FARES

To Be Boosted December 1—Railroads Working to Complete Rate Sheet.

Increases in interstate passenger fares in Central Passenger association and trunk line territory, comprising the area east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio river to the coast will be put into force December 1 if the present plans of the railroad officials are carried out.

The rate clerks of the various roads have been notified to work with all speed possible in an effort to have the revised sheets in the hands of the interstate commerce commission by November 1, thereby giving the required thirty days' notice before December 1.

Because passenger rates are figured on a mileage basis it will mean hard work to complete the task of figuring the new rate sheets by November 1, every effort will be made to do it.

Roads in trunk line territory have made some advances which became effective October 1, but on ordinary tickets. Here the advances in that territory will be of less consequence than those in Central Passenger association territory because a large number of their rates are now on a basis of 2½ to 3 cents a mile, while in the Central Passenger association territory the interstate rates are on the 2 cent basis and have pulled down the interstate fares to some extent.

Fine Opportunity

Voters and Taxpayers All:

In the midst of the excitement, let's begin to think of No 1. Seventy-five per cent of us, in private conversation, advocate the election of a mixed county ticket. That's the way to get rid of the present old party machines in Huron county, that always "play politics" at our expense. Bill Kiefer and Turkey Buzzard Shively, as BOSSES, should look alike to the ones who foot the bills.

The Progressives favor the non-partisan selection of County Officials

BATTLES GO ON, ALLIES MAKING SLIGHT ADVANCE

No Cessation of Gigantic Combat Which Is to Determine Fate of Nations.

NAVAL LOSS ON BOTH SIDES

Germans Sink British Cruiser, Causing Loss of 350 Lives—Four of Kaiser's Torpedo-Boat Destroyers Go Down—French Report Claim Victories in the Fighting in Lorraine—German Mine Blows Up Japanese Cruiser.

Dunkirk, Oct. 20.—The report is current in northwestern France that the Germans are retiring from Ostend and its neighborhood. It is added that the town was not occupied in great force. It is impossible to obtain verification of this report, which, however, was from a reliable source.

From Dunkirk to Belfort the great battle upon which hangs the fate of the Germans' second drive on Paris raged during the day with undiminished fury.

On the French left the allies are said to have driven back the invaders a distance of ten miles, and have assumed new positions in front of Givenchy and Fromelles. Also they have retaken Armentieres, one of the most important cities near the Belgian border, and a railroad center of great stategic value.

To the north of Arras the French and British troops succeeded in breaking through the German cordon established there for the purpose of controlling the lines of railway stretching to the east, and so far have been able to hold the ground thus gained. Also between Arras and the River Oise the allied lines have been advanced perceptibly.

Belgians Repulse Germans.

Recognition of the active co-operation of the Belgians in the fighting on the border was contained for the first time in official dispatches when their success in repulsing repeated attacks directed by the Germans against the crossings of the River Yser was recorded.

Fighting has been renewed at Belfort, and two violent night attacks by the Germans to the north and again to the east of Saint Die were repulsed by the French with severe losses to the enemy.

The Germans are reported to have suffered new reverses in the fighting in Lorraine and to the east, where the army of the crown prince is in in extremely difficult position.

Saint Die, on the Meurthe, thirty-two miles northeast of Epinal, was the center of today's attacks, which resulted in a repulse for the Germans with heavy casualties. The borders of both Alsace and Lorraine also felt the shock of battle, and in the Vosges the famous French Alpine regiments were in contact with German columns.

Cut Off German Supplies.

The Alpines' greatest achievement in the recent operations was the cutting of railroad communication between Colmar, capital of Upper Alsace, and Muelhausen, thereby increasing the difficulties of the Germans in sending their wounded to the rear and bringing up supplies.

The Germans have brought up ten-inch mortars in this district, supposedly for an intended eventual siege of Belfort. In view of this possibility the French have renewed their attacks from the south and again advanced beyond Altkirch.

Biggest Battle is Now On.

The most gigantic engagement of the war is now being fought just across the border in western Belgium, but it is ignored in the official dispatches because of the lack of progress to report. The fighting is as yet in the preliminary stages, for the numbers actually engaged are too great and the weight of the support both in big guns and the enormous strength in men available is so evenly divided that the greatest deliberation is being exercised by the rival commanders.

German Official Statement.

The following official press bulletin issued at Berlin has been received in London by wireless:

"The main headquarters of the army reports under date of October 17 that immense quantities of war material were captured at Bruges and Ostend, including many rifles with ammunition and 200 locomotives quite ready for use.

Number of prisoners taken at Schirwindt in East Prussia, on Russian border, increased to 4,000.

Russian Official Statement.

The Exchange Telegraph company in London has received the following official statement issued at Petrograd:

"There has been no change in East Prussia and on the Vistula. Austrian attempts to cross the River San have been repulsed. Fighting continues south of Przemysl."

Heavy Tax on Ostend.

The Germans have established civil administrations in the German part of Belgium and are said to have demanded war levies from Ostend and Blankenberghe, Ostend being called upon to pay $1,000,000 and Blankenberghe to supply $25,000 worth of provisions for man and beast.

The Flushing, Holland, correspondent of the Weekly Dispatch, in a message dated Saturday, says:

"At an early hour today great forces of Germans began to pass through Ostend. The artillery in close formation consisted of about four hundred guns and there were 40,000 infantry and fewer cavalry. More guns arrived at noon.

"There are indications of a big movement against Dunkirk. German sailors arrived at Blankenberghe, a Belgian port nine miles northwest of Bruges, today."

FOUR GERMAN WARSHIPS SUNK.

London, Oct. 19.—Four German torpedo boat destroyers were sunk off the Dutch coast by ships from the British fleet. The names of the ill-fated craft are not known. The German crews, totaling about four hundred men, with the exception of 31, made prisoners of war, were lost, the British loss was only one officer and four men slightly wounded.

The damage to the British craft was slight.

The light cruiser Undaunted, commanded by Capt. Cecil H. Fox, who was in charge of the cruiser Amphion, which, after sinking the German armored cruiser Koenigin Louise, was itself destroyed by a German mine on August 26, won the signal victory and avenged himself for the catastrophe which overtook him in the North sea.

Captain Fox had as a convoy during his raid on the German ships the torpedo-boat destroyers Lance, Lenox, Legion and Loyal.

BRITISH CRUISER SUNK.

London, Oct. 17.—A German torpedo cost England her seventh cruiser and 350 men, the British admiralty officially announced. The cruiser Hawke was struck by a torpedo from a German submarine and sunk in the northern waters of the North sea. The cruiser Theseus was attacked, but the torpedo missed its mark.

The press bureau issued a list of 71 survivors of the 400 officers and men on the Hawke, and it is hoped that the loss of life may prove lighter. Lieutenant Commander Rosaman and 20 men were picked up from a raft and 50 of her crew were landed at Aberdeen.

It is believed the disaster occurred not far from that part of the Scottish coast although the admiralty report gives no time or definite location of the catastrophe.

British patrol ships located a German submarine off the east coast of Holland and sunk her.

The Hawke was commanded by Capt. P. E. T. Williams, and he and the chief officers of the cruiser are believed to be lost.

The Hawke was a cruiser of 7,250 tons, 300 feet long and 60 feet beam and drew 23 feet of water. She was launched in 1891. Her armament consisted of two 9.2-inch guns, ten six-inch guns, 12 six-pounders, five three-pounders, two machine guns and two torpedo tubes.

EACH SIDE CLAIMS SUCCESS.

London, Oct. 18.—Again the Russians and the Austrians flatly contradict one another as to the progress of events in the East.

A dispatch from Petrograd said the Russian general army headquarters issued the following announcement:

"On the front in East Prussia and on the Vistula there is nothing new to report. Austrian attempts to cross the San river have failed. South of Przemysl the fighting continues. At several points there were bayonet attacks in which we captured 15 Austrian officers and more than one thousand soldiers.

"Austrian re-enforcements are reported in the passes of the Carpathians."

Austrians Report Progress.

The Amsterdam correspondent of Reuter's Telegram company has forwarded the following Austrian official statement regarding operations in Galicia, which was given out in Vienna Saturday noon:

"The battle on the line running through Stary, Sambor and Medyn and on the River San are progressing favorably, as are also our operations against the enemy along the Dniester river. North of Wyszow the Russians were again attacked and repulsed.

"At Synowuckowysze our troops forced a crossing of the Stry river, conquered the heights north of Synowuckowysze, and pursued the enemy.

"We further occupied the heights north of Podzusz, southeast of Stary and Sambor, after severe fighting. Our attacks north of the Stry river are progressing. North of Przemysl on the east bank of the San river our troops are gaining ground. Up until now about fifteen thousand prisoners have been taken."

GENERAL NEWS OF THE WAR

British Lose Thirteen Thousand Men During the Month—German Fleet to Strike.

London, Oct. 19.—An official report by General French, commanding the British expeditionary force, gives the total of killed, wounded and missing from September 12 to October 8 at 516 officers and 12,980 men.

The war office issued tonight another casualty list received from headquarters under date of September 16. It gives 51 noncommissioned officers and men as having been killed, 149 men wounded, and 555 men missing.

Those of the killed belong entirely the Royal Scots, the Royal Irish and the East Surrey regiments. The East Surreys, the king's own Scottish borderers, and the Somerset light infantry figure largely in the missing list.

Of commissoiner officers the list gives four killed and five wounded.

To Strike Britain From Antwerp.

London, Oct. 18.—The Amsterdam correspondent of Reuter's Telegram company says it is reported from Sluis that Admiral von Tirpitz, German minister of the navy, is at Antwerp, where it is assumed he arrived soon after the fall of the fortress.

A dispatch from Rome on October 9 says that, according to German newspapers received at the Italian capital, the war against Great Britain would begin late in October, after the fall of Antwerp, when Belgium would become the base of operations against England.

The correspondent also credited the German press with the announcement that Admiral von Tirpitz had stated that he would go aboard the flagship of the German fleet and direct the operations of the navy.

Italy to Remain Neutral?

Rome, Oct. 17.—At a cabinet council this evening Premier Calandra assumed the foreign office portfolio, formerly held by the late Marquis di San Giuliano, and will retain it throughout the war. Hence the foreign policy of Italy will not be altered as a result of the Marquis di San Giuliano's death.

NAVAL LOSSES TO DATE

The following losses have been sustained by the British and German fighting navies in less than three months of war:

GREAT BRITAIN.

Cruisers (eight).
By submarine—Cressy, Hogue, Aboukir, Pathfinder, Hawke.
By mine—Amphion.
By gun fire—Pegasus.
By grounding—Warrior.
Torpedo gunboat (one).
By mine—Speedy.
Submarine (one).
By grounding—E 1.

GERMANY.

Cruisers (seven).
By submarine, Helo.
By gun fire—Magdenburg, Mainz, Coeln, Arlande, Augsperg, Panther.
Auxiliary Cruisers (two).
By gun fire — Cap Trafalgar, Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse.
By gun fire—U 15; one, designation unknown.
Destroyers (seven).
By gun fire—Designation unknown.
Mine-layer (one).
By gun fire—Koenigin Louise.

Roumanians Out for Allies.

Bucharest, via Paris, Oct. 18.—One hundred thousand Roumanians, who are members of the League of Roman Culture, met at Galatz in Moldavia and adopted resolutions declaring that the Roumanians desire a national policy with the triple entente and that their ideal is the reconquest of Transylvania and Bukovina.

British Seize U. S. Ship.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 20.—The British auxiliary Caronia arrived in port with the American oil tank steamer Brindilla, formerly the German steamship Washington, as a prize of war. It is claimed the Brindilla carried a cargo of contraband. A prize crew had boarded her. The capture was made by a British cruiser off the port of New York. The commander of the cruiser designated the Caronia to bring the ship to Halifax. The Brindilla is now at anchor in the harbor, flying the American flag.

May Surrender Tsing Tao.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Reports have been received here from semiofficial sources that the kaiser has ordered the surrender of Tsing Tao, the German city in Kaiuchau, China.

According to these reports, Tsing Tao is being battered from land and sea by the Japanese forces, and there is absolutely no hope that it can hold out much longer. The surrender was ordered, according to the advices received here, to save the German forces and civilians from certain annihilation if a defense by the garrison were to be attempted.

Jap Cruiser Blown Up; 272 Die.

Tokyo, Oct. 20.—Only 12 of the crew of 284 men aboard the Japanese light cruiser Takachiho were rescued after she struck a German floating mine in Kiauchau bay at night, it was officially announced here. The Takachiho was doing patrol duty outside Tsing Tao when she fouled the mine. Japanese destroyers heard the explosion and saw the flames that resulted.

They hurried to assist the cruiser, but she disappeared quickly. Twenty-eight officers, 54 non-commissioned officers and 189 seamen perished.

The German embassy at Washington received from a reliable source in San Francisco the news that the British battleship Triumph had been so heavily damaged by the fire from howitzers in the Tsing Tao forts that it had to withdraw immediately during a bombardment it was conducting with the aid of Japanese ships.

Claim Russ Lost 40,000 in Fight.

Vienna, Oct. 20, via Berlin and Amsterdam.—An official statement issued here estimates the Russian losses at Przemysl at 40,000. The statement follows:

"Our attack in the battle on both flanks of the Stryj river, south of Przemysl, was continued, and our troops succeeded in getting close to the enemy. At several points our troops were advancing as against a fortress. Several night attacks of the Russians were repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy."

Ostend Reported Taken by Allies.

London, Oct. 20.—The Morning Post published a report that Ostend has been recaptured by the allies. The news was received in London with great rejoicing, and while it has not been confirmed, great crowds have accepted it as true, and are parading the city, singing and cheering.

London, Oct. 19.—A casualty list dated October 15 and made public here tonight gives 12 officers as having been killed and 40 wounded in the recent fighting.

Austria Gives Out Losses.

Rome, Oct. 19.—Austrian losses in the actions against Russia, Servia and Montenegro until October 6 are approximately estimated as follows:

Officers killed, 435; wounded, 1,539; men killed, 4,234; wounded, 23,272. Total 4,769 killed and 24,811 wounded. Only eight officers and 132 men are state to be missing. The numbers who have been taken prisoners are not given.

These figures are official, but are declared to be approximate and are regarded as underestimated.

May Ship Food to Belgium.

Washington, Oct. 21.—Ambassador Gerard at Berlin notified the state department that the German foreign office has given its consent for the transmission of the American food supplies to Brussels. The food will be sent by way of London, and will be distributed all over Belgium under the direction of Minister Whitlock.

GERMANS' VIOLENT ATTACKS REPULSED

LOSSES ON BOTH SIDES HEAVY

Most Severe Test to Which Entire Line of French, British and Belgian Have Been Subjected Since Realignment Incident to Extension of Left Wing Northward.

Paris, France.—Seven distinct and violent attacks of desperate character were directed by the Germans Tuesday at points along the whole battle line extending from the Meuse to the sea, in a tremendous effort to relieve the constantly increasing pressure of the allies' front, but all their efforts were repelled. It was the most severe test to which the entire line of the French, British and Belgian armies has been subjected since the realignment incident to the extension of the left wing northward to the North sea. And the test proved its worth. It held at every point, the steel barrier still rigid. In the field of the great battle for German ascendency on the North sea coast the invaders suffered a still further shock. The Belgians held them impotent in a series of remarkably executed counter attacks which kept the Germans constantly disorganized and broke the force of their frontal attacks.

Positions Taken and Retaken.

At and in the immediate vicinity of LaBassee, to the southeast of Lille, the kaiser's troops directed extremely persistent and furious attacks against the French and British line with no success and at great cost in men and equipment. North of Arras the Prussians again resumed the offensive on a field in which positions of importance have been taken and retaken alternately by one and the other of the rival armies during the past three weeks. Further to the south, between Peronne and at the right, the Germans advanced as far as the village of Mametz, where they were checked and in the face of a deadly hail of lead and shell from the French quick-firers and field guns were compelled to withdraw to save themselves from disaster. East of the Argonnes, detachments of the army of the crown prince appeared for the first time in the vicinity of Vauquois, where they were met by French forces in equal strength but in entrenched positions and were driven back after a vigorous assault. On the heights of the Meuse, where the eastern wing of the French line has been heavily engaged for the past month, new offensive operations were begun by the invaders in a futile attempt to dislodge the defenders. In the region about Champion like disaster met the German effort. In the fighting, in which practically every unit in both lines, with the exception of the armies facing each other on the center, were engaged, the allies not only were able to hold their own, but where the counterattacks of the Germans were repelled with great violence the allied troops were able to take and hold ground at various points.

Carnage Has Been Terrific.

Interest still centers on the gigantic general engagement being fought in Belgium and in the vicinity of Lille. Particularly brilliant has been the defense offered by the Belgians, who, practically unaided, except for the assistance lent by the British fleet off Nieuport on Monday, have held their line along the Yser with distinguished bravery. The carnage in this field and near Ypres and between Ypres and Verune has been terrific. Destructive flames have added their horrors to those of war and the line of battle is marked by burning homes, reduced by shell and fire to clear the view of the gunners. Great trainloads of German wounded have been taken to the rear. One fugitive from the region northeast of Ypres (which at this point reaches 15 miles from the Franco-Belgian to the German positions) says that on Sunday he counted 17 trains of wounded and as many as 40 road vehicles loaded with maimed Prussians. Many are reported to have been taken to Ghent and even to Ostend, while Bruges, now practically emptied of able bodied Germans, who have been relieved of garrison duty to add their strength to the fighting line, has been turned into a city of hospitals. The Belgians, the French and the British are suffering only slightly less, if any. The losses admittedly have been terrific, but the war office at Bordeaux still refrains from letting the figures be known. Although the commandant of Paris, Gen. Gallient, will not admit that the allies have reoccupied Ostend, it is generally believed that this effort is only delayed until the convenience of the commander-in-chief shall dictate the movement. Continued German occupation of Ostend has not been seriously considered, as it is maintained that the French or British ships can dislodge the enemy at this point at will. The important news from the nosth is not whether Ostend is in German or French hands, but that the German sweep of the French north seasoast has been effectively checked.

French Consider Dunkirk Safe.

According to attaches of the official staff of a high French commander, who were in Paris Tuesday on a special mission, Dunkirk is considered safe and Calais in no danger in consequence. It is admitted that some inhabitants of the coast cities gave way to feelings of apprehension when Ostend was occupied by the Germans and commenced an exodus, but these fears have now been allayed and most of them have returned to their homes. The French are still advancing on Lille in great force and the situation is considered favorable, although the war office admitted that the Germans are holding strong positions in front of Lille in the direction of Armentieres, Fournes and LaBasse, all of which latter places are held by the French and British.

Offsetting the advantage held by the invaders at Lille is the extremely perilous position of Gen. Von Kluck. The leader of the "invasion of Paris" has failed utterly in his enveloping movement against the army of Gen. D'amade. In his attempts to cut through the lines of Gen. Sir John French, his troops have met with disaster and his fighting front now has been turned back at either end until it forms an arc, his center facing the southwest and his right facing west, while his left flank has been bent back until the morning sun—when it shines in the days of heavy mists—beams into the eyes of the soldiers in the trenches. Worse still, his lines of communication through Belgium have been cut and his retreat now would be attended by losses so severe as to demand his surrender for the sake of humanity.

Eagle Excites Crowds.

New York City.—Lower Broadway crowds were in a fever of excitement when a big bald eagle took a post of vantage on the ledge of the 27th story of the Woolworth building and [illegible] from time to time into a flock of city hall park pigeons. Each time the eagle swooped a pigeon rapture crawled out on the ledge and frightened the bird, which soon was lost to sight. It is presumed the eagle came from the upper Hudson.

TEUTONS SHELL FORTS SURROUNDING VERDUN

Capture Some of the Outer Redoubts, According to Berlin Report.

London, Eng.—Verdun appears to be doomed. The French fortified position, which is the main support of the French right wing army and from which the offensive operations of the defenders of France have been carried on along the Meuse and in the direction of Metz, has been under constant bombardment for over three weeks and Tuesday several of the forts in the outer ring of the city's defenses are reported in official dispatches from Berlin to have been reduced. Credence is given the German claim because it has been known from other sources for the week past that the outer redoubts, which had been bearing the brunt of the shell fire, had been seriously damaged and that the French commander was contemplating their abandonment and withdrawal of the batteries to the inner circle, where the main resistance upon which will hang the fate of the stronghold is to be fought.

The Berlin report says the Germans have captured "some of the forts surrounding Verdun" thus "opening the way for an attack on the main fortifications, preparations for which are now being made."

GERMANY AND ENGLAND BOTH LOSE WAR BOATS

British Submarine and Four of Kaiser's Destroyers Are Sunk at Sea.

Berlin (via wireless through Sayville, L. I.).—It was officially announced here that the new British submarine E-3 was sunk by German warships in the North sea on Sunday.

Acknowledging the loss of the German destroyers S-115, S-117, S-118 and S-119, the admiralty states that the worst feature of the loss was the death of the majority of the members of the crews, all especially trained men. The destroyers themselves, it is stated, were comparatively old.

This is the first report that has arrived of the British submarine. The E-3 went into commission in November, 1913. She was 178 feet long, 22.5 feet beam and her displacement was 810 tons. She had a speed of 15 knots, was equipped with four torpedo tubes and carried a crew of 16 men.

Tokyo, Japan.—The admiralty announces that the German torpedo boat S-90 was found aground 60 miles south of Kiau-Chau bay and was sunk by a Japanese cruiser.

Slaver Gets 40 Years.

Brooklyn.—Announcing his determination to discourage the tendency of Manhattan crooks to cross the river into Brooklyn, Judge Fawcett on Monday imposed a sentence of 40 years in Sing Sing on Joseph Angiulo, [illegible] "Joe," on a conviction on a white slavery charge.

Mrs. Florence Ryan and her two sisters, Lulu and Edna Herbert, testified that Angiulo had enticed them from their home in the Bronx and forced them into white slavery in Brooklyn.

FIGHT TO SPLIT BIG CONCERN IS BEGUN

PROSECUTION PRESENTS SIDE

Defense Files Brief Stating That What Competition Existed Among Companies Acquired by Corporation Was Greatly Limited—Denies Other Charges Made.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Argument in the suit of the federal government, which is seeking to break up the United States Steel corporation by separating into independent units all of its subsidiaries on the ground that their combination into one gigantic concern constituted a violation of the anti-trust laws, was begun here Tuesday before four judges sitting as the United States court for the district of New Jersey. Jacob M. Dickinson, former secretary of war, who has been in charge of the government's side of the case since it was instituted in October, 1911, took up the day in presenting the prosecution.

Prominently set out in the defendant corporation's brief is a denial of the allegation that advantage was taken of the 1907 panic to acquire the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co.

Charges Mammoth Combine.

Counsel for the government told the court that the billion dollar corporation, in magnitude and strength, is the greatest combination of capital ever brought together under one control. Mr. Dickinson told of the sharp competition that formerly existed in the iron, steel, tin plate and kindred industries; of how pools were formed in the steel rail field and how agreements were made among manufacturers of iron and steel to keep up prices; how these pools dried up and agreements were broken; how captains of industry schemed to put one another out of business; how one steel concern would absorb another and gradually led up to the formation of the gigantic corporation now under fire. Mr. Dickinson told how the five great industrial and financial interests came together and formed the steel corporation in 1901. The five great interests he named were headed by the late J. P. Morgan, Andrew Carnegie, W. H. and J. H. Moore, John W. Gates and John D. Rockefeller. He went into intricate detail to show how the steel corporation's capital of more than $1,400,000,000 was made up, and he charged that more than $500,000,000 of this is water.

Defense Denies Allegations.

The brief filed by the steel corporation reviewing the law which the government applies to the case and also reviewing the evidence, declares that what competition existed among the companies acquired by the big corporation was greatly limited. It is declared that the steel corporation's proportion of the country's total production of finished products in 1901, when the corporation was formed, was only 50.1 per cent; that it has since been reduced to 45.7 per cent of the country's production for all the markets of the world and to 40.9 per cent of the total production for the domestic market. The steel corporation's supply of ore in the Lake Superior district constituted only 43 per cent of the total amount of ore in the ranges of that district known in 1901, the brief states; that the corporation's present supply there constitutes only 36 per cent, and that of the total ores available for American iron and steel manufacturers the ores of the Lake Superior district constitute a small fraction. In denying that the steel corporation suppressed competition, the brief states that the organization of the company was but a natural and normal development from existing trade and manufacturing conditions. The price of its products, the brief continues, is shown to have decreased on the average about $8 a ton since it was formed.

RAID SLEUTH BUREAU

REPRESENTATIVES OF STATE'S ATTORNEY'S OFFICE ACT ON AUTHORITY OF GRAND JURY.

Chicago, Ill.—Representatives of the state's attorney's office raided the offices of the Detective Bureau and seized all correspondence and documents relating to crime and criminals. This action was a part of the campaign of the state's attorney to get evidence against police officials and detectives whom he accuses of participating in the booty of criminals. The order for the raid was issued on authority of the grand jury, which also demanded the presence of John J. Halpin and James H. Markham.

'Mother Prindle' Dies.

New York City.—Mrs. Almira Prindle, 78, known all over the United States as "Mother Prindle" on account of her lifelong work for the betterment of fallen women, died at her home in Brooklyn. More than 40 years ago Mrs. Prindle started mission work in Buffalo. Twenty-five years ago she assisted in the foundation of the Florence Crittenden Mission for Girls in this city, and since then assisted in the founding of many other missions. She personally founded the home in Newark, O.

Mrs. Thomas Watt Gregory, wife of the new attorney general of the United States, is a charming Texas matron and already prominent in the most fashionable circles of Washington society.

VILLA SEES END OF CONFLICT IN LAND

Mexican General Predicts Reign of Peace in the Mexican Republic.

Washington, D. C.—Gen. Villa has informed the United States that unless something unforeseen occurs hostilities in Mexico are at an end and that he will support any provisional government set up by the national convention at Aguar Calientes.

Won't Accept Carranza.

Villa said he would not accept Carranza as provisional president, but was satisfied he would not be chosen. It is believed Carranza does not want to be provisional president, wishing to be free to enter the presidential race in the next general election.

The latest official report to the state department describes the visit of Gen. Villa to the convention at Aguas Calientes. When the commander of the division of the north arrived, suspicions were awakened as to his purposes, but when he addressed the convention all doubt was removed.

Gen. Villa said he came to pledge his support to the acts of the convention and to take the oath, and that he wanted to go on record so no one could ever say that he was unpatriotic. He was received with storms of applause. Later he embraced Gen. Obregon, over whom Villa's break with Carranza occurred recently.

As the two generals greeted each other effusively the convention went wild with joy. Gen. Villareal, chairman of the convention, made a speech, saying the country owed a debt of gratitude to Gen. Villa's military achievements, but that they were as nothing compared to his patriotism.

Writes Name on Mexican Flag.

Then Gen. Villa wrote his name on the Mexican flag, as did all the other delegates, and kissed the banner, pledging again amid applause to abide by decisions of the convention.

Villa departed soon afterward for Guadaloupe, saying he did not wish his presence in Aguas Calientes to be misinterpreted.

To American Consular Agent Carothers, who accompanied him, Gen. Villa stated he thought permanent peace in Mexico was in sight. Mr. Carothers reported the fighting general's visit had produced a profound impression on the delegates. Villa's statement that he would support any man chosen except Carranza is taken to mean he has withdrawn his original demand that no military man be given the provisional presidency. The prevalent belief here is that Gen. Antonio Villareal will be elected.

Dug Safely Out of Quicksand Tomb.

Ware, Mass.—Maurice Allen was dug safely out of a living tomb of quicksand 25 feet below the surface Monday. He had been held prisoner by the shifting sand since Saturday, and only the fact that a diver's helmet had been placed over his head as he sank slowly out of sight kept him alive. Fifty firemen, policemen and volunteers participated in the rescue of Allen while air was pumped to him in his helmet and food was sent down through a tube paralleling the air tube.

Allen was digging a well when he sank into the bed of quicksand.

Jury Acquits Pastor.

Detroit, Mich.—Rev. Joseph A. Cottam, former pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church in Dearborn, near Detroit, charged with arson in connection with the burning of his parsonage, was acquitted Monday. After the jury had deliberated on the case 20 minutes.

On the night his home burned Rev. Mr. Cottam was to deliver a widely advertised sermon on "Why I am a Protestant." The defendant maintained that persons of contrary religious views were responsible for the fire.

MUSTERING GREAT SCHOOL ARMY

BOYS ARE IN THE LEAD

Ohio Has Made a Substantial Gain in Her Army of School Youth During Year.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Columbus, O.—Ohio has made a substantial gain in her army of school youth during the past year. It now aggregates a total of 1,271,443. This breaks all previous records. In 1913 the state was able to muster a total of 1,245,000, so it will be seen that the gain for this year over that of the preceding one is in excess of 26,000.

The boys outnumber the girls. There are 651,897 boys and 619,546 girls. These are between the school age of six and 21 years. The enumeration of the state, just compiled by the state school commissioner's office, shows the total number of school youth. It was tabulated by Professor H. D. Sygert, statistical secretary.

Saturday State School Comissioner Frank W. Miller certified the enumeration to the state auditor's office. It is given by counties. For every child of school age the county receives $2 from the state. This comes out of the school fund. Many counties receive more money for school purposes from the state than they contribute to the fund in taxes.

The amount they draw from the state fund for the education of their children is not based on their tax duplicate, but on the number of school children, as shown by the enumeration. Schools in counties where the stork is more active profit most under this plan. Some of the larger counties file some pretty vigorous protests to the general assembly every now and then because they are called upon to give more money than they get back, but the answer they usually get, in effect, is, raise more children and you will get a bigger divvy out of the school fund.

WOMEN PRAY FOR PEACE

W. C. T. U. Speaker Urges Strike Against Motherhood.

Newark, O.—Prayers were offered by delegates to the state W. C. T. U. convention here for the cessation of the war in Europe. State Secretary Viola D. Romans, of Columbus, closing a plea for world-wide peace, said: "Let the women of the nations go on a strike. Let them refuse to bring children into the world until the world disarms."

More than a thousand delegates were present. Reports were received from the various offices. The annual oratorical contest with speakers from various parts of the state was held.

LOWER RATES ARE DEMANDED.

Columbus, O.—Forty citizens of Marysville complained to the State Public Utilities Commission that electric rates allowed by a new council ordinance and charged by the Marysville Light and Water Co. are excessive. They ask that council be compelled to reduce the charges. The company by terms of the ordinance may charge for domestic lighting 10 cents for the first 50 kilowat hours, 9 cents for an amount between 50 and 200 and 7½ cents for an amount exceeding 500.

ADDITION TO THE HOSPITAL.

Hamilton, O.—The county commissioners decided to build a $3,000 addition to the county tuberculosis hospital. The hospital is now crowded and there are many patients waiting to get admitted. The addition is badly needed and the act of the commissioners in granting it is a most humane one.

MONSTER ORDERS ARE PLACED.

Cleveland, O.—French government agents are touring Ohio and other states and placing monster orders for quick delivery of auto trucks, tents, searchlights, shoes, clothing, harness, canned foodstuffs and other articles necessary to feed and equip an army.

AGED MAN IS KILLED BY TRAIN.

Findlay, O.—Jacob Buss, aged 82, was instantly killed at Rawson by a Lake Erie and Western freight train. He was married five times and lost every wife by death.

COMPLETES AN INVESTIGATION.

Fremont, O.—C. H. Bryson, member of the state civil service commission, completed a three-day investigation of charges preferred against the Fremont commission by C. Vollmer, editor of [illegible] ber, who alleges a fraud in an examination held to depose Albert Figelist, city superintendent of parks. Although denied by the mayor, it is alleged that the effort was made to remove Figelist because he refused to contribute to mayor's campaign fund.

SAMUEL VINING IS DEAD

Celina, O.—Hon. Samuel J. Vining aged 50, ex-speaker of the house of representatives, secretary of the Mercer County Agricultural society, and one of the most prominent Democrats of this section of the state, died here. He was recently operated upon for appendicitis.

STATE NORMAL SCHOOL

First Normal Extension School at Canal Winchester.

Canal Winchester, O.—A state normal school was held at Canal Winchester. At this school four teachers from the home economics department of the College of Agriculture, at Columbus, instructed the rural school teachers who attended the normal school in home economics. The instruction was given with the view of assisting the teachers to teach this subject in the rural schools this year. Specific directions were given for the teaching of one lesson a week throughout the school year. The selection, preparation, and value of food materials such as meat, bread, vegetables, fruits and salads, were taught. The rural teachers were not only told about these food stuffs, but were shown how to prepare and serve them and how to interest and teach the same subjects to students in the rural grades.

FOREIGNERS ARE BARRED

From Hunting in Ohio, Says Game Warden—May Oust Officials.

Cleveland, O.—Deputy State Game Warden Louis Kuertz charged that several township clerks in Warren county were violating the law by selling hunters' licenses to foreigners. "We may make an effort to oust these officials. In any event we shall exert a closer supervision over the business of disposing of these permits," said Kuertz. "Only American citizens are allowed to hunt in Ohio. Each must pay $1.25 for a license. It has come to our notice that the township clerks are giving Italians licenses. Let the foreigners go to Europe if they want to do any shooting. They do not let Americans hunt in their countries. In retaliation we keep them from hunting in Ohio." The rabbit season opens November 15.

IRONTON MINISTERS ENDS LIFE

Ironton, O.—Rev. Calvin Warren, Methodist minister of this city, jumped from a wharfboat at Ashland, Ky., and was drowned. This became known when his clothing was found in a clump of willows on the river bank. Rev. Mr. Warren had been living at Logan, Ohio, but came here for a visit. He was employed by an insurance company at Logan.

U. S. MAIL POUCH IS RIFLED

Dayton, O.—A mail pouch filled with letters and cards was stolen at the Union depot and the contents rifled. How many letters were taken and the value of these are unknown. The torn and empty sack was found in a box car near the Union depot.

TWO MEN ARE FOUND STABBED

Lima, O.—An unidentified man was found unconscious on the Main street bridge with a stab wound in his head. Frank Smith, 34 years old, an employe of the Lima Locomotive Works, was found lying unconscious in the same place with a stab wound in his abdomen.

CRIPPLE SUES FOR DAMAGES.

Tiffin, O.—Dr. Robert D. Reynolds, of Green Spring, was made defendant in a suit for $50,000 damages for personal injuries, the plaintiff being Wm. Springer, a carpenter. Last May Springer fell from a scaffold, breaking his back.

SKULL IS CRUSHED BY CAR

Lancaster, O.—Mrs. Ada Moore, aged 70, was run over by a street car and her skull was badly crushed. She was taken to the Park street hospital in a precarious condition. She is the mother of nine children.

MAN SHOOTS HIS FORMER WIFE.

Lancaster, O.—Thomas Stewart met his divorced wife on the street here and shot her in the head twice and then turned the weapon upon himself.

ALMOST A MISTAKE

By CLARA INEZ DEACON.

They were going to have a new weather man at Point Hope. The one that had been in charge for a couple of years was addicted to the habit of occasional sprees, and when they happened his predictions of the weather to come for the next three days were terrifying.

Point Hope was a village of 1,000 inhabitants, and was inclined to be social. The weather man, whether married or not, was expected to take a hand in the social game.

Meanwhile the head of the weather bureau was talking to Burt Hudson, who was to fill the place.

"Young man, you have done well at your other stations, and I'm hoping for the same or better at Point Hope. And remember, always consider your dignity."

"I certainly shall do the best I can," was the reply.

In due time Mr. Hudson arrived at Point Hope. The population turned out to meet him. He was himself until within ten miles of the town, and then he became somebody else. He put on the mantle of dignity as advised by his chief. How it worked was told in the comments of the people when they came to compare notes.

"I told him I'd like to play checkers with him," said Uncle Riley, "and he glared like a January blizzard."

"When he came in I was for shaking hands with him and asking about his family," said the landlord of the inn, "but he sorter drawed away as if I was second class. I don't believe he'll eat prune sass once a week."

Two of the most interesting people in Point Hope were the Widow Welcome and her daughter Marian. It was said of them that they had the nicest house and the most money, and no one disputed that the daughter was the handsomest and best educated young lady among them.

Two weeks after Mr. Hudson's arrival he was being discussed by mother and daughter. A young man had escorted Marian and another girl to the signal station and introduced them. They were received with altogether too much courtesy and dignity to please them.

"He is a gentleman, mother," said the daughter, "but he freezes one. I don't believe the governor puts on the dignity that Mr. Hudson does."

"Well, dear, he may be quiet and undemonstrative among strangers, but let us hope he will thaw out as he gets acquainted."

A gathering took place and Mr. Hudson was there. He thawed out considerably, but not enough to escape censure. The majority said that his attitude belonged in a New York drawing room. Miss Marian met him with a smile, but at the look of dignity on his face she froze up and was like an icicle the rest of the evening. The mother was the only one of the party who read the young man truly. After the guests had gone she said to her daughter:

"I think I can read Mr. Hudson aright."

"Then you can read a rock!" was the sulky reply.

"He is acting a part in being so stiff and formal."

"I shan't put myself out to entertain such a polar bear!"

"You see if he doesn't begin to thaw out soon. If he is acting a part, as I believe he is, he can't hold to it many weeks. You'll see a change in him when he calls and finds us alone."

When Mr. Hudson had held the station six months all the people agreed that he had thawed out at least one-half. This, they contended, was doing pretty well, but it was not enough to satisfy Miss Marian, who said to her mother:

"When Mr. Hudson shows that he is human as other men, maybe I shall begin to like him."

Queerly enough, there was evidence of it next day. He appeared at the house and challenged her to ride with him on his new tandem bicycle. She accepted at once, and they had a five-mile spin, to her delight. It was repeated in a few days, and they had been out half a dozen times, when the sudden, terrific and awful change she had hoped for took place.

They were trying to get home before a thundershower, when the bicycle ran over a hog on the highway and the riders were sent flying into the bushes. Marian was not much hurt. As she tried to gather her wits she heard some one exclaiming. As she sat up she recognized Mr. Hudson's voice. As she dragged herself to her feet and hung to the bushes she saw him "belting" the hog with a club, and heard him say:

"—— your eyes, take that!" And also: "Lie in the road, will you, you nuisance!" And likewise:

"Uncle Sam and his old weather can go to Texas! I'm through with this dignity nonsense!"

And when the girl reached home she said to her mother: "It shall be engaged to Mr. Hudson within four weeks!"

IF you feel that you are smoking too many cigars, try Fatima cigarettes. They cost less, last longer, and are more wholesome.

Anecdotes.

Speaking of humorists brings us to the fact that no man living can look quite so solemn when producing humor as Irvin S. Cobb, the well known comedian of the Saturday Evening Post. When Cobb was on the staff of one of the big New York newspapers he did various news assignments, some of them mighty serious and others that gave him a chance for comedy. It was a standing joke about the office that anybody could look at Cobb as he bent over his typewriter and tell which kind of yarn he was writing. If his face was all wrinkled up with solemnity like a bloodhound's, with a sad lock about the eyes such as one rarely sees except in an undertaker's hostler, Cobb was preparing something that would make hosts of people laugh.

Cottages.

"Cottage accommodation," in the sense in which Mr Runchiman's bill deals with it, is a phase that would hardly be understood in the United States. Professors Greenough and Kittredge of Harvard, in their book on the ways of English words, points out that "cottage," in the strict sense of a laborer's dwelling, has never been adopted into popular American use, because America has never really had the thing. The word over there has always had literary and sentimental associations, and finally has come to be used for the most magnificent summer residences. This has gone much farther than the use of the word in England to mean a villa. In America a "cottager" definitely signifies a person who is above staying at a boarding house or hotel, and has his own summer home.—London Chronicle.

War Observer.

"What's the matter; scared o' that boy that's chasing you?"

"No."

"Then what are you running away from him for?"

"I'm not running away. I'm just retreating for strategical purposes."—Detroit Free Press.

Warned.

"Tommy, how often must I tell you to wash your hands?"

"You needn't at all, mother."—Judge.

A Magnate, Perhaps.

"He keeps open house, you say?"

"Yes, but it's almost impossible to get into his office."

FOUND OUT.

A Trained Nurse Discovered Its Effect.

No one is in better position to know the value of food and drink than a trained nurse.

Speaking of coffee, a nurse in Pa., writes: "I used to drink strong coffee myself, and suffered greatly from headaches and indigestion.

"While on a visit to my brothers I had a good chance to try Postum for they drank it altogether in place of coffee. After using Postum two weeks I found I was much benefited and finally my headaches disappeared and also the indigestion.

"Naturally I have since used Postum among my patients, and have noticed a marked benefit where coffee has been left off and Postum used.

"I observe a curious fact about Postum when used by mothers. It greatly helps the flow of milk in cases where coffee is inclined to dry it up, and where tea causes nervousness.

"I find trouble in getting servants to make Postum properly. But when it is prepared according to directions on package and served hot with cream, it is certainly a delicious beverage."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled, 15c and 30c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, made a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

The state utilities commission has called a meeting of representatives of Ohio interurban railways for Oct. 23. An announcement set forth as a reason the high mortality toll taken by railroads during the past eight months, the average being more than two deaths each day.

Game wardens over Ohio are at a loss to know how to account for the killing of so many mother squirrels at this season of the year. It was believed that the season was made late enough to eliminate all danger. In a large number of localities the old squirrels have been killed and the young have perished as a result. It has already been suggested that the season be changed so that it will not open until October 1, instead of September 15.

An exchange suggests that one day a month be set aside, in our public schools, to be known as "Mother's Day." All mothers of children who are attending school should be invited to visit the schools on that day and become acquainted with the teachers and the work. It would have a tendency to increase interest on the part of the parents and would be an encouragement to teachers and pupils. The suggestion is very good, but why not include poor, old dad.

Traveling at express train speed, a special train of 26 cars went through Avery over the Nickle Plate yesterday en route from Kenosha, Wis., to New York. Each car contained two special automobile trucks, which are being delivered under a bonded time contract to the French government for war service. It is estimated that the train load was worth in the neighborhood of $200,000 and is one of the most valuable that has ever been handled by the road. The cars will be shipped on a chartered vessel immediately upon their arrival at New York.—Reflector.

Kissing Shields.

And if, under the plan of those eugenists, paper shields are to be used for kissing, on whom will the expense of the "protection" fall? Most young men will be interested in learning whether they will have to carry their own shields with them, or whether the girl's dad will be expected to provide them.

Plymouth On the Nautical Map.

Plymouth was represented at the opening of the Davis lock at the "Soo" Oct. 21. The new Davis lock is 1350 feet long and 80 feet wide. Mr. Vance Judson of our village, whose boat the James A. Farrell, was the first down bound boat to pass through the new lock, carrying 11,745 tons of iron ore.

Diptheria Bacilli Found.

In regard to the diptheria situation here, Dr. Geo. J. Searle has received the following telegram from the State Board of Health in regard to the Chronister case:

Plymouth, O.
"Diptheria bacilli were found in Chronister specimen."

E. A. MERKEL,

Republican Candidate for County Surveyor.

To the Voters of Richland County:

This is my second attempt to defeat a man who has had four terms of public office and is now asking the voters to give him public support ten straight years.

The County Surveyor's office of Richland county is one of the best paying offices in the county and why should this office continue in the hands of one man indefinitely?

I have had over twenty-two years experience and if elected will use all of my energy to promote and construct firstclass public improvements.

The temperance people are fortunate in securing the services of E. R. Worrell, of Chicago, for an address on Monday night, Oct. 26. He is a temperance advocate of national reputation.

Huron County Clerk Blackman is having a serious time of it at his home in Norwalk. Just as his wife was recovering from a case of appendicitis his little son developed a case of diphtheria and as a result Clark Blackman has been quarantined in for the past ten days. The little boy is getting along nicely and the quarantine will be lifted within a few days, however, not in time to allow the Clark to do much campaigning for his second term of office.

Dr. Ruby wears the belt as the best and most successful skunk hunter in this locality. Two of these rodents had camped on his street and were devouring his neighbor's chickens nightly, but when they reached his premises they met their undoing by coming in contact with a torpedo or "mine" which the doctor had placed for them, that was charged with the proper amount of strychnine and on their first raid they met disaster, leaving the carcasses of two of the fattest, slickest skunks ever to his credit.

Gov. James M. Cox had a very strenuous time getting through the mud and rain on his campaign tour throughout Huron county last week Saturday, and as a result was much behind his schedule. He was billed to speak in Plymouth in the evening at 8:30, but, however, it was nearly 10 o'clock before he reached here and as a result less than one hundred was present to greet him upon his arrival and listen to an address of less than twenty minutes. He was taken to Shelby by automobile where he caught the 10:15 Big Four train for Columbus.

Over in Dunkirk they have a commendable spirit among the high school boys. In the senior class there was a boy who had a widowed mother who was ill, and on this account they were unable to hire the corn cut and continue the boy in school. He belonged to the football squad and was ever ready to help win the game and was one of the most reliable players. In order that they might not lose him from the school, the boys got together and went out and in two nights they had the 17 acres of corn in shock. Mighty fine spirit. That beats having corn roasts, and marshmallow toasts.

Voters in this end of Huron county should bear well in mind that Plymouth has a candidate for county office in the person of Jacob Brewbaker, who is running upon the democratic ticket for the office of county commissioner. Mr. Brewbaker has been a life-long resident of Plymouth and Huron county, and a successful business man, has held numerous offices of trust in our city's administration and filled the same with satisfaction to all, and if elected to the office to which he aspires the county's affairs would be fully as well safeguarded as well as those of the village while he was in office. Plymouth is entitled to a commissioner in this end of the county and no better man could be had than Mr. Brewbaker, so voters in this end of the county should vote and throw their strength to him.

Mrs. Bloom Buck and her two little children and Mrs. Charles Pannabaker, says the Shelby Globe, had a narrow escape from serious injury Tuesday morning at 9:45 o'clock, at the East Main street crossing of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. Mrs Buck and children and Mrs. Pannabaker were coming up town and when they reached the crossing a north bound freight train was passing. The train cleared the crossing, and the caboose was about two feet north of the sidewalk. The gateman raised the gates and the two ladies proceeded across the track. Just as Mrs. Buck and her two children and Mrs. Pannabaker reached the tracks the train backed suddenly and the caboose struck the two women and children, knockingthdm down. Fortunately the train only backed one and a half feet and the parties were not seriously injured.

Temperance Meeting.

Under the direction of the Richland County Dry Organization, arrangements are in progress for a rally of temperance forces at Hamilton's Hall for Monday evening, Oct. 26.

Mr. E. R. Worrell of Chicago, Ill., a heavy weight champion of the dry cause will be on hand to address the people. He comes recommended as one of the best temperance speakers on the American platform. Don't miss the opportunity to hear this address, for you will have no better chance this season, not even in a large city.

Hopeless Lung Trouble Cured.

Many recoveries from lung troubles are due to Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. It strengthens the lungs, checks the cough and gives relief at once. Mr. W. S. Wilkins, Gates, N. C., writes: "I used Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey in a case given up as hopeless and it effected a complete cure." Get a bottle of Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. If your cough is dry and hacking let it trickle down your throat, you will surely get relief. Only 25c at your druggist.

SYNOPSIS.

Bud Hooker and Phil De Lancey are forced, owing to a revolution in Mexico, to give up their mining claim and return to the United States. In the border-town of Gadsden Bud meets Henry Kruger, a wealthy miner, who makes him a proposition to return to Mexico to acquire title to a very rich mine which Kruger had blown up when he found he had been cheated out of the title by one Aragon. The Mexican subsequently had spent a large sum of money in an unsuccessful attempt to relocate the vein and then allowed the land to revert for taxes. Hooker and De Lancey arrive at Fortuna, near where the Eagle Tail mine is located. They engage Cruz Mendez to acquire the title for them and begin preliminary work. Aragon accuses them of jumping his claim. Hooker discovers that matrimonial entanglements prevent Mendez from acquiring a valid title. Phil, who has been paying attention to Gracia Aragon, decides to turn Mexican and acquire the title. Aragon fails in his attempt to drive them off the claim. Rebels are reported in the vicinity. A rich vein of gold is struck and work on the mine is stopped until the title can be perfected. Phil is arrested by Manual del Rey, captain of the rurales and suitor of Gracia's. He is released on promise to stay away from Gracia. Phil is forced to enlist in the rurales. He asks Bud to take care of Gracia. The rebels are defeated in a fierce battle near Fortuna. Phil deserts and returns to the United States. Bud turns Mexican and takes steps to secure title to the mine in his own name. Hired assassins of Aragon make an unsuccessful attack on Bud and four of them are killed.

CHAPTER XXI.

On the morning after they had laughed at the comic paper and decided that all the world was fair, Hooker and Amigo were squatting by the fire and eating a man's-size breakfast.

The creek, swollen by yesterday's torrential rain, had settled to a rivulet. The wind had not risen and the sun was just over the hill when, with a rush and a scramble, Amigo threw down his cup and was off in a flash for the rocks.

A moment later two men rode down the canyon, and then two more, and two more. It was a column of men, all armed with rifles, and they cast envious eyes at Copper Bottom as they halted before the camp. As for Bud, he saluted gravely, for he knew them for what they were.

These were the lost forces of Bernardo Bravo and Salazar, Rojas and the other bandit chiefs, and they marched, as he well knew, upon Fortuna. They marched quietly, and the great whistle had not blown.

It would make a rich prize, Fortuna, if they could take it by surprise! The ransom for the Spanish haciendados alone would amount to thousands of dollars, and the mine-owners could afford to pay anything in order to save their works.

A box of dynamite under the giant concentrator and the money would be produced at once, and yet the scoundrels halted at a one-man camp to steal a single horse.

A flicker of scorn passed over Hooker's face as the leader came dashing up, but the Texan greeted him with a slow smile.

"Buenos dias, general!" he said; "you have many men."

"Enough!" observed the "general" hurriedly, "but some in the rear are on foot. As I suppose you are in sympathy with our great cause, I will ask you for that horse. Of course, I will give you a receipt."

He fetched out a blank-book as he spoke and motioned to a ragged beggar at his heels. Bud checked the man's rush with a look.

"One moment!" he said, and as the soldier turned back his general glanced up sharply.

"Only this, Senor General," answered Bud. "You are welcome to anything I have—food, blankets, money—but I cannot give you that horse."

"But, senor!" protested the general, regarding him with arrogant pig eyes that glinted wickedly, "this poor soldier's feet are sore. Surely you would not make him walk. Only name your price and I will give you a receipt for him, but my man must have the horse."

There was a pause and men began to dismount and move in closer. At a word from their commander any one of them would draw and kill him, as Hooker very well knew, but his love for Copper Bottom made him obdurate.

"If the man is lame," he said, "I will give him another horse—but he cannot have this sorrel."

He stepped quickly over to the corral and turned with his back to the gate, while the commander spat out orders in Spanish and armed men came running.

"Senor," he said, advancing brusquely upon the defiant Hooker, "I must trouble you for that pistol."

"No, senor!" answered the cowboy, keeping his hand upon his gun, "not to you nor no man—and I'll never give it up to a Mexican!"

"Caral!" exclaimed the officer impatiently, "you are an Americano—no?"

"Not only that," rumbled Bud, drawing himself up in his pride, "I am a Tejano also, and if any man touches that horse I'll kill him!"

His voice trembled with anger, but his hand was steady and the Mexicans did not deceive themselves.

"Ha, un Tejano!" murmured the men who stood about, and one or two who had started to climb the fence thought better of it and dropped back to the ground.

Bud knew the fate of several men who had proclaimed themselves Americans to the insurrectos—boastfully done, it was said to be the quickest way there was of drawing a Mexican bullet. But to be a Texan was different—somehow the very name suggested trouble to their minds and an Alamo fight to the death. Hooker saw that he had made an impression, and he was not slow to follow it up.

"If you need a horse," he said to the general, "let your man go up that arroyo and he will find one hobbled on the flat. Then give me your receipt for two hundred dollars gold and I will contribute a saddle."

It was a reasonable concession, under the circumstances, and, best of all, it saved the general's face. The hideous frown with which he had regarded the American changed suddenly to a look of pompous pride. He jerked an imperious head at his ragged retainer and drew forth his receipt-book with a flourish.

While he waited for the horse to appear he turned upon his snooping men and drove them to their mounts with curses. Evidently it was no sinecure to command in the army of the liberation, and the veiled mutterings of his followers showed that they were little better than tigers in leash.

Mounted upon horses, mules, and even burros; armed with every conceivable weapon from a musket to standard repeating rifles, they were a tatterdemalion army, more fit for "treason, stratagems and spoils" than the sterner duties of war.

Bud looked them over closely, well satisfied to have his back against a wall, and when the low-browed retainer came hurrying back with the horse he quickly took the worthless receipt and watched them on their way. Then, as the last camp-follower disappeared, he ran for his saddle and rifle and within a minute he was mounted and away.

There were rebels below him—very likely there were more to come—the only safe place for Copper Bottom was over the hills at Fortuna. Without stopping for path or trail, he headed straight northwest over the ridges, riding as the cowboys do when they rake the range for cattle. Hardly had he topped the first high crest when he came in sight of Amigo, loaded down with his cartridge-belts and carrying his heavy Mauser.

In a long, shambling trot the Yaqui was drifting along the hillside with the free grace of a wild creature, and when Hooker pulled down his horse to keep pace with him he laughed and motioned him on. Taking the lead, he loped on over hogback and barranca, picking out the best trail by instinct and setting such a pace that Bud was hard pressed to keep up with him.

He had heard it said that in the Yaqui country no white man, no matter how well he was mounted, could outdistance the Indians on foot, and now he knew it was true. But why this killing haste on the part of Amigo? He had neither friends nor kin in town; why, then, should he run so fast to warn them of the enemy?

They racked on, up one hill and down another, while the insurrectos followed the canyon that swung to the south, and finally, in a last scramble, they mounted a rocky ridge and looked down upon old Fortuna.

Already the hard-driven peons were out in the fields at work and smoke was rising from the mescal still. Aragon was busy, but his labors would be worse than wasted if the red-flaggers took him prisoner. As Bud breathed his horse he hesitated whether to ride back and warn him or press on and notify Fortuna; but even for that time spent the Yaqui could not wait.

"Adios," he said, coming close and holding out his black hand; "I go this way!" And he pointed along the ridge.

"But why?" said Bud, still at a loss to account for his haste. Then, seeing the reticence in the Indian's eyes, he thrust out his hand in return.

"Adios, Amigo mio!" he replied, and with a quick grip the Yaqui was gone.

With that same deceptive speed he shambled through the bushes, still lugging the heavy rifle and making for higher ground. Bud knew he had some purpose—he even had a sneaking idea that it was to take pot-shots at Captain del Rey—but six months in Mexico had made him careless, and he half hoped the Yaqui would win.

The captain had it coming to him for his brutality, but with Aragon it was different—Aragon had a wife and daughter—and, with the memory of Gracia in his mind, Bud sent his horse plunging down the ridge to warn them before it was too late.

There were some brush fences to be jumped, but Copper Bottom took them flying, and as they cut into the river trail he made the mud-puddles splash. Across the fields to the south Bud could see the peons running for cover—the insurrectos must be in sight beyond the hills.

He was going south, they were moving west, but it was five miles north again to the town. Speed was what was needed and Copper Bottom gave his best. They dashed into Fortuna like a whirlwind, and Hooker raised his voice in a high yell.

"Insurrectos!" he shouted. "Ladrones! Pronto a Fortuna!"

There was a rush, a moment's silence, and then heads appeared from every window and women ran screaming with the news. Aragon came rushing from the store and confronted him angrily; then, reading conviction in his tones, he called for horses and ran frantically into the house.

A shrill screech came from the hillside, where a serving-woman had scampered to view the valley, and, as she pointed her finger and screamed, mothers laid hold of their little ones and started up the valley on foot.

Still the men ran about in the horse-pen and Aragon adjured his womenfolk in the house. Burning with impatience, Bud spurred his way to the corral where they were fumbling with reata and rigging and dropped a rope on the first horse he saw. Then he snatched a side-saddle from a trembling peon and slapped it on the brute's back. Grabbing up the bridle, he led the horse back to the house and bridled it while he shouted for haste.

Still the women tarried, and the sound of galloping came from the south. Then, as all seemed lost, the Mexicans came bumping out from the stable with the family coach, Aragon and his wife leaped in, and Gracia, neatly attired in a riding-skirt, came tripping down the steps.

Even in such times as these she seemed to realize her first duty to herself, and Hooker had to gaze for a moment before he helped her up. She offered her foot and vaulted lightly into the saddle; the coach went pounding on ahead; and as the servants scattered before her she galloped off at the side of Bud.

Behind them the rumble of distant hoofs rose up like the roaring of waters, and the shrieks of fleeing women echoed from the roadside, but once safely in the canyon their lead was never lessened and, with coach-horses galloping and postilions lashing from both sides, the whole cavalcade swept into the plaza while the town of Fortuna went mad.

Already the great whistle was blowing hoarsely, its deep reverberations making the air tremble as if with fear. Americans were running back and forth, distributing arms and rushing their women to cover; Don Juan, his chin quivering with excitement, was imploring all comers to be calm; and the Aragons, coming flying up to the door, added the last touch to the panic.

They with their eyes had seen the rebels; they were riding in from the south! Other men, equally excited, swore they were coming from the north, and a disorderly body of Sonora miners, armed as if by magic with guns which had long lain hidden, banked themselves about the store and office and clamored for more and more cartridges. Then a rip of gun-fire echoed from across the canyon, and the miners made a rush to the attack.

The whistle, which had obscured all sound as a cloud obscures the light, stopped suddenly in its roar, and the crowd at the hotel became calm. The superintendent, a wiry, gray-haired little man, with decision in every movement, came running from his fort-like house on the hill and ordered all the women to take shelter there and take their children with them.

So, while the rifles rattled and stray bullets began to knock mud from the walls, they went straggling up the hill, rich and poor, patrician and peon, while the air was rent by the wails of the half-Indian Mexican women, who held themselves as good as captured by the revolutosos, concerning whose scruples they entertained no illusions.

The women of the aristocracy bore themselves with more reserve, as befitting their birth and station, and the Americans who gathered about them with their protecting rifles pretended that all would be well; but in the minds of every one was that same terror which found expression in the peon wail and, while scattered rebels and newly armed miners exchanged volleys on both sides of the town, the non-combatant Americans sought out every woman and rushed her up to the big house. There, if worst came to worst, they could make a last stand, or save them by a ransom.

So, from the old woman who kept the candy stand in the plaza to the wives of the miners and the cherished womenfolk of the landowners, they were all crowded into the broad halls of the big house; and seventy odd Americans, armed with company rifles, paced nervously along the broad verandas or punched loopholes in the adobe walls that inclosed the summer garden behind.

Along with the rest went Hooker and Gracia, and, though her mother beckoned and her father frowned sternly, the wilful daughter of the Aragons did not offer to leave him as they scampered up the hill. In fact, she rode close beside him, spurring when he spurred and, finally, when the shower of stray bullets had passed, she led on around the house.

"Won't you help me take my horse inside the walls?" she asked. Bud followed after her, circling the fortress whose blank adobe walls gave shelter to the screaming women, and she smiled upon him with the most engaging confidence.

"I know you will have to go soon," she said, "and I suppose I've got to be shut in with those creatures, but we must be sure to save our horses. Some bullets might hit them, you know, and then we could not run away!

"You remember your promise!" she reminded, as Bud gazed at her in astonishment. "Ah, yes, I knew you did

Women and Children Took Shelter There.

—otherwise you would not have picked such a good horse for me. This roan is my father's best riding horse. You must put yours inside the wall with him, and when the time is right we will get them and ride for the line."

"What?" cried Hooker incredulously, "with the country full of rebels? They're liable to take the town in half an hour!"

"No, indeed they will not!" responded Gracia with spirit. "You do not understand the spirit of us Sonorans! Can't you see how the firing has slackened? The miners have driven your rebels back already, and they will do more—they will follow them up and kill them! Then, when the rebels are in flight and Del Rey and his rurales are away, that will be a good time for us to slip off and make our dash for the line!"

"Nothing doing!" announced Hooker, as he dismounted at the corral. "You don't know what you're talking about! But I will leave my horse here," he added; "I sure don't want him to get hurt."

"But you promised!" protested Gracia weakly.

"Promised nothing!" retorted Bud ungraciously. "I promised to take care of you, didn't I? Well, what's the use of talking, then? You better stay right here, where you're safe. Come on, let's go to the house!"

"No!" cried Gracia, her dark eyes turning misty with imminent tears. "Oh, Mr. Hooker!" she burst out, "didn't I keep them all waiting while I put on this riding-skirt? I thought you had come to take me away! What do I care to be safe? I want to be free! I want to run away—and go across the line to dear Phil!" she faltered. Then she looked up at him sharply and her voice took on an accusing tone.

"Aha!" she said, as if making some expected discovery, "so that is it! I thought perhaps you were afraid!"

"What?" demanded Bud, put suddenly upon the defensive.

"I might have known it," soliloquized Gracia with conviction. "You are jealous of dear Phil!"

"Who? Me?" cried Hooker, smiling down at her grimly. "Well, let it go at that," he said, as she regarded him with an arch smile. "I'd certainly be a fool to take all those chances for nothing. Let him steal his own girl—that's what I say!"

"Now that, Mr. Hooker," burst out Gracia in a passion, "is very unkind—and rude! Am I a woman of the town, to be stolen by one man or another? Am I—"

"That's what you would be," put in Bud, with brutal directness, "if these rebels got hold of you. No, ma'am, I wouldn't take you out of this town for a hundred thousand dollars. You don't know what you're talking about, that's all! Wait till the fighting is over—goes! Did you hear that? Come, on, let's get into the house!"

He ducked suddenly as a bullet went spang against the corrugated iron roof above them and, seizing her by the hand, he half dragged her through a side door and into the summer garden.

Here a sudden outcry of women's voices assailed their ears like a rush of wind and they beheld peon mothers running to and fro with their screaming children clasped to their breasts or dragging at their skirts. A few helpless men were trying to keep them quiet, but as the bullets began to thud against the adobe walls the panic became a bedlam.

Gracia stood and surveyed the scene for a moment, ignoring the sulking Bud with disdainful eyes. Then she snatched her hand indignantly away and ran to pick up a child. That was all, but Hooker knew what she thought of him.

He passed through the house, hoping to discover where she had gone, but all he heard was her commanding voice as she silenced the wailing women, and, feeling somehow very much out of place, he stepped forth into the open.

After all, for a man of his build, the open was best. Let the white-handed boys stay with the ladies—they understood their ways.

CHAPTER XXII.

The superintendent's house stood on a low bench above the town, looking out over all the valley, but protected by a high hill behind, upon the summit of which was placed a mammoth black water tank.

In its architecture the casa grande was an exact replica of a hot-country hacienda, a flat-roofed, one-storied square of adobe bricks, whitewashed to keep off the sun and presenting on three sides nothing but dense trees planted near for shade. Along the front was a long arcade, the corredor, graced by a series of massive arches which let in the light and air. Inside were low chambers and long passages; and, behind, the patio and garden of orange and fig trees.

Built for a sumptuous dwelling, it became in a moment a fort and, with men on the high hill by the tank, it was practically impregnable to direct assault.

As Hooker stepped out on to the covered porch with his saddle-gun in his hand he became simply one more of a band of excited Americans, all armed and ready to defend the house to the last. Some were pacing back and forth in the corredor, others were hurrying up from the Mexican quarters with a last belated handful of women, but the major portion were out on the open bench, either gazing north and south at the scenes of the distant firing or engaging in a curio-mad scramble for any spent bullet that struck.

The fighting, such as there was, was mostly up the canyon, where a large party of Sonoran miners had rushed in pursuit of the rebels. The firing down the canyon in the direction of Old Fortuna had died away to nothing, and for the moment it seemed as if the futile charge and retreat was the beginning and the end of the battle.

A party of rebels had penetrated clear into the town, but it was apparently more by accident than intention, and they had been quick to beat a retreat. As for the main command of the insurrectos, they were reported at Chular, six miles up the railroad, where they had surrounded and taken a small mining camp and captured a train at the summit.

The column to the south—the one which Hooker had encountered—had taken to the high hills west of the town, and, along the skyline of the buttelike summits they could now be seen in scattered bands making their way to the north.

The defenders of Fortuna consisted of a rag-tag garrison of twenty federals and the hot-headed, charging miners. But apparently that was a combination hard to beat, for, while the federals entrenched themselves behind the black tank on the hill and prepared to protect the town, the Sonorans in shouting masses drove everything before them and marched on to attack Chular.

But in this they made a mistake, for the rebel scouts, seeing the great body of defenders pressing on up the narrow canyon, rode back and informed the tricky Bernardo Bravo. He would be a poor general indeed who could not see the opening that was offered and, while the valiant Sonorans pursued the rebel cavalry up the pass, Bernardo Bravo sent the half of his thousand men to cut off their retreat from behind.

Along the broad top of the mountain above they came scampering by tens and twenties, closing in with a vastly superior force upon the now defenseless town. In the depths of the canyon below the miners were still chasing the elusive cavalry, their firing becoming faint as they clambered on toward the summit and the rebel headquarters at Chular.

They had, in fact, been handled like children, and the Americans joined in contemptuous curses of their mistaken bravery as they beheld in what straits it had left them.

Forbidden by the superintendent to participate in the combat, yet having in their care the women of the camp, they were compelled to stand passively aside while rebels by the hundred came charging down the ridges. Only in the last resort, and when all diplomacy and federal defense had failed, would they be allowed to so much as cock a rifle. And yet—well, twenty determined Americans might easily turn back this charge.

Taking advantage of his Mexican citizenship, Hooker was already on the run for the trenches when the superintendent stopped him with a look.

How to Plaster.

To repair holes or cracks in walls, secure some fresh mortar. Clean out the holes with a brush, remove all loose plaster thoroughly, wet the slats and old plaster with a sponge, fill up the hole or cracks with fresh mortar, pat down even. In a few hours go over again with knife or trowel. Close holes in woodwork with a paste made of glue and fine sawdust.

A NURSE TAKES DOCTOR'S ADVICE

Euphemia, Ohio.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when verging into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 16 years old.

"I went to Kansas to live with my sister and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicines was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 18 years.

"The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I cannot tell you or any one the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month and during the last 18 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blest with excellent health for a woman of my age and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it.

"Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse and being wholly self-supporting I cannot over estimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and nursing. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss EVELYN ADELIA STEWART, Euphemia, Ohio.

ON NON-PARTISAN JUDICIAL TICKET

MILLION AND HALF BALLOTS CONTRACTED FOR BY COUNTY ELECTION BOARDS.

NAMES WILL BE ROTATED

Each Board Must Contract for 25 Per Cent More Ballots Than There Are Voters.

(By Denny Donovan.)

Columbus.—The non-partisan judicial ticket which will be voted upon at the November election will contain the names of nine candidates for places on the supreme court. The Democrats, Republicans and Socialists will each present three candidates.

For chief justice, the candidates are Hugh L. Nichols, present chief justice, who is a Democrat; Frank Taggart, Republican, and John C. Madden, Socialist. For the two associate judgeships to be filled by election the candidates are J. Foster Wilkin, up for a second term, and Phil M. Crow, member of the court of appeals, both Democrats; Thomas A. Jones and Edward S. Matthias, both judges and Republicans, and P. E. Riegel and R. H. Smith, Socialists.

The names of all judicial candidates will be rotated, and will not appear on the ballot in alphabetical order, as in the case of nominations made at the August primary election. This will give one candidate as good a chance as any other.

A million and a half ballots will be contracted for by county boards for the November election. Each board must contract for 25 per cent more ballots than there are voters. This is to make it certain that there will be no shortage of ballots. By not later than the second day after the election it will be shown absolutely who were elected and what the results were on the four constitutional amendments. No doubt on election night it will be known who won for senator and governor, but unless pluralities and majorities are decisive there will be some of the day's results in doubt. Under a new law an unofficial report of the vote must be sent to the secretary of state by mail by each election board the day after election.

Teach Mining Engineering.

Although it is not located in a mining district, the Ohio State university is one of the few schools in the country which offers a complete course in mining engineering. The student spends four years in this course and studies every phase of engineering which pertains to the operation of mines. To aid the student in securing a practical knowledge of the work of a mining engineer, a laboratory has been equipped with instruments and apparatus used in mining engineering. There is a collection of models of mine machinery and supplies to which additions are being made constantly. A large drafting room is provided with a desk for each student where he is personally taught the making of maps, the plotting of actual surface and underground surveys, the making of drawings, tracings and blueprints.

Time Limit Is Set.

According to a ruling announced by the state civil service commission, state employes now filling positions who fail below the required grade in the non-competitive examinations that are now being conducted, will be separated from the service within not less than 15 days and no later than 30 days after their names are certified to the department chief under whom they serve. This is designed to prevent any official taking advantage of an employe's failure to pass the examination by dismissing that employe without proper notice, should there be an element of dislike between them. It will also prevent an official retaining a favored employe in spite of the failure at examination.

Denies Jurisdiction.

The Erie Railroad Co. denied the jurisdiction of the state public utilities commission to investigate the complaint against it by the Newburgh and South Shore Railway Co., a belt line of Cleveland, involving right to maintain joint freight charges. The Erie road's contention was contained in its answer filed with the commission.

Honor Convicts Leave.

Charles Camburn, Jackson City horse thief, and Antonio Cosentino, convicted of cutting to wound in Cuyahoga county, walked away from the "honor squads" of the penitentiary. Camburn was at the Junction City brick plant and Cosentino at the Delaware stone quarry. Both were serving indeterminate sentences.

Complain of Gas.

Farmers residing in the neighborhood of the road running west from the Union cemetery northwest of Columbus have made a very unusual complaint to the board of county commissioners. They say that there contains a big gas main leading to Cincinnati, and that the main leaks very badly, and that they are afraid to pass along the road at night for fear that their lanterns will ignite the gas and cause an explosion. The road because of this situation is practically abandoned during the night.

Pardon Board Meet.

The State Board of Pardons Thursday rejected the plea for a pardon made by John Yearion, of Lockland, who killed his father, and was sent to the penitentiary for second-degree murder in January, 1913. It was contended for Yearion that, in order to protect his sister, he had concealed at his trial the real reason for killing his father. This reason was, it was said, an attack that the elder Yearion had made upon his daughter. The Pardon Board heard the plea of Mrs. Marie Knorr, of Cincinnati, for the life of her brother, Harley Beard, 17, who killed three members of the Massie family in Ironton, O., last June. Mrs. Knorr is represented by Attorneys Peacock and Grischy, of Cincinnati. Affidavits were presented in an effort to show that Beard is not mentally responsible. The board will announce six weeks hence whether Beard may live or must die in the electric chair.

Decisions Help for Justice.

In no single department of state government have greater changes been effected in a decade than have been made in the Ohio supreme court. This is the verdict of lawyers who have studied the trend of the cases that have been decided, particularly those involving the application of criminal statutes. Wholesome reforms these newer decisions are, the students add, sweeping as they do to one side a mass of technicalities that made of reviewing courts "first aid to the accused." Through the list of decisions there are many exhibits that demonstrate the changed attitude of the supreme court toward criminal charges. When the Cameron case was decided it may be said that the law of embezzlement that had been known to the legal profession was completely revolutionized. None the less, radical changes have been made in other branches of the criminal law.

Washington and New York.

About three thousand preliminary judging blanks from Ohio boys who participated in the corn-growing contest this year had been received by the State Agricultural Commission. Announcement was made that definite preparations for the trip to Washington and New York November 30 to December 5, which is to be the prize for the contest and naming the winners, will not occur for several weeks.

T. P. Riddle, of Lima, who has general charge of the corn boys tour, has made arrangements to accommodate all persons, either adults or children, on the special trains even if they are not winners in the contests. These will have to pay the costs of the trip, which will be about $60 for adults and $50 for boys or girls.

May Gain Education.

A high school and college education for a 16-year-old girl now teaching country school has been made possible by the state industrial commission, which has granted an award of $2,496 for the death of Charles Wesley Hughes, of Massillon. He was killed in the plant of The Buckeye Cereal Co. at Massillon. Miss Maud Hughes, a daughter, has been teaching a country school since his death to gain money to further her own education. By means of the award, to be paid in bi-weekly installments of $16 for six years, she will be able to obtain an education.

More Pharmacy Exams.

Hereafter the state pharmacy board will hold four instead of three examinations annually. This was decided upon at the regular meeting and examination of the board. "We will hold this extra examination early in April and will have an examination once every quarter," said F. H. King, the Arcanum member of the board. "This will help to prevent the congestion that we always have at the June examination." The board will meet the first week in November to grade the papers of the applicants who were examined during the past week for licenses to practice pharmacy.

New Officers Chosen.

Big Bond Issue.

Applications were filed with the state utilities commission for authority to issue notes and bonds totalling in the vicinity of $12,000,000 by the Columbus Railway, Power & Light Co. and the Hocking Valley Railroad Co. The Hocking Valley has applied for authority to issue $4,000,000 in one year, 6 per cent gold notes to retire a maturing issue authorized by the commission some years ago. The Hocking Valley case will be heard October 22.

Trainmen Will Help.

A new feature in fire prevention work has been inaugurated by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Trainmen are ordered to render every assistance in putting out fires in property adjoining the railroad, as well as along the right of way. In addition, should a trainman discover a small blaze in the grass along the right of way not sufficiently dangerous to justify stopping the train, he must fill out a blank form, locating the blaze, and throw it off to the first track gang, track walker or station agent.

DIARY TELLS OF GERMAN ADVANCE ON AND CAPTURE OF ANTWERP

London.—In the form of a diary, the story of the siege of Antwerp and the German plan of attack are given in the following dispatch received by the Central News from its Ostend correspondent:

"Saturday, Sept. 26.—The Belgians retired from their positions east, south and west of Malines to the line of outer forts.

"Sept. 27.—The Germans bombarded and occupied Malines.

"Sept. 28.—Bombardment of Forts De Waelhem, De Wavre-St. Catherine and other forts on the southern line by 11-inch howitzers.

"Sept. 29.—Magazine of Fort De Waelhem blown up by shell fire. Fort De Wavre-St. Catherine put out of action. Forts at Lierre bombarded.

Forts Are Destroyed.

"Sept. 30.—Forts De Waelhem and Wavre-St. Catherine are completely destroyed. Waterworks behind Fort De Waelhem blown up. The Belgian infantry continued to hold their intrenchments in the face of a veritable hell of shell fire. The water supply in Antwerp is greatly curtailed.

"Oct. 1.—The Llerre forts destroyed. The German infantry attacks were repulsed with heavy losses.

"Oct. 2.—There was a heavy bombardment of the Belgian trenches. The Belgians retired at night in good order and lined the River Nethe. The Germans began to occupy the outer ring of forts. A German aeroplane flew over the city and dropped pamphlets urging the inhabitants to surrender and save themselves suffering.

British Troops Arrive.

"Oct. 3.—Arrival of fresh British troops, who relieved fatigued Belgians on the southeastern section. Here the Germans concentrated their attack, which is now almost exclusively an artillery attack.

"Oct. 4.—Quiet until evening, when the Germans began a furious bombardment of Lirre and the river bank trenches.

"Oct. 5.—The Germans cross the river and occupy Llerre and Duffel. The main Belgian army began retirement westward.

"Oct. 6.—Departure of King Albert, the government, and the foreign ministers. Heavy bombardment of the allied position. The allied troops retired during the night on the second line of forts.

City Is Occupied.

"Oct. 7.—Governor General de Guise announces that a bombardment of the city is imminent. The Germans emplace batteries for their purpose and at midnight a heavy bombardment begins.

"Oct. 8.—Exodus of the population. The bombardment of the town is continued with violence. The petrol tanks are ablaze. Berchem, a southern suburb, is in flames, as also are many houses in the city. The defending troops on the southwest section are offering violent resistance. It is decided to evacuate the city, and the British and Belgian forces leave during the night.

"Oct. 9.—The fall and occupation of Antwerp.

Took Two Weeks.

"It will thus be seen that the Germans took a fortnight to drive their wedge into the southeastern section of the defenses," the correspondent continues, "and this speaks volumes for the stubbornness of the defense. British marines were hurried across last Sunday and conveyed to Antwerp with all speed. They came without overcoats or kits, but cheerfully endured the cold and rain as well as the pulverizing fire.

"After Monday it was merely a question of enduring the terrible fire as long as possible. A large proportion of the Belgian troops went westward on Monday and Tuesday to insure an eventual line of retreat. A large additional force of British marines arrived Tuesday morning.

Mount Their Big Guns.

"Eventually the Germans mounted their 42-centimeter guns. They were enabled to fire with great accuracy, thanks to their observation balloons, although owing to the cold and heavy rain their operations were sometimes suspended. The British gunners brought one balloon down with a round of lyddite, after shrapnel had proved ineffective.

"Ability to hit back weight for weight was the one crying need at Antwerp, whose fate points to one irresistible conclusion—that the day of forts is over. The supposed impregnable forts proved broken reeds against the giant howitzers.

"One of Brialmont's great works sank almost bodily from sight in consequence of the cavities made all around its foundations by the terrific explosions. The others are shattered beyond recognition.

"I understand that the British naval force saved all its wounded and guns. The Belgian army is still intact."

DEFEND UNTIL FIRE BECOMES MASSACRE

By F. BANISTER.
International News Service.

Ostend.—I was right up on the firing line near Lokeren when the Belgians were ordered to retreat from the trenches and was carried along in the frantic rush for shelter beyond the range of German shells. Infantrymen, jaded, heavily weighted by accoutements, stumbled across the fields, sweat pouring from their faces, and sank, exhausted, to lie for a few moments and then scramble to their feet and stagger forward again as shells continued bursting around them.

They fought bravely and well. The trenches were not vacated anywhere till the rain of German shells meant sheer massacre if the defenders remained.

In the retreat of the field army which had been defending Antwerp, along the one road still kept open to the west, were many soldiers who had been fighting continually 14 days, snatching hurried sleep on the bare earth or pavement. Hundreds collapsed on the march and had to be left behind at various points, to follow on after treatment and rest. The Germans have not yet reached Ostend.

Horse meat has been substituted for beef at most of the hotels and restaurants. Otherwise there is no lack of food at normal prices.

Every day, spies are arrested in and near Ostend. One man was seized after chalking in a corner of the village railway station some figures the interpreters supposed indicated the strength of the allies in the neighborhood. He was dressed as a simple peasant and showed evidence of being a man of superior education, which, with the incriminating memoranda and the chalk marks at the station, sealed his doom.

A German officer was arrested in the main street of Ostend yesterday wearing a Belgian officer's uniform. He was nearly torn to pieces by the huge crowd before he got to the police station.

The only route out of Antwerp after the bombardment began Wednesday was the River Scheldt. The people would not stay in the cellars of the houses, as advised by the authorities, when they found the shells from the great German guns often fell right through the houses and exploded in the cellars.

Trains and barges, perilously overloaded, till Friday bore the people to Holland. It is clear that a vast majority of the population of Antwerp did not believe till the very last minute that the city would be bombarded.

One shell shattered like a house of cards the Hospital of St. Camille, burying all the nurses and wounded in the pile of ruins.

GERMAN LOSS AT ANTWERP IS HEAVY

Paris.—The Germans lost 40,000 men in the capture of Antwerp, according to Paul Erio, special correspondent of the Journal, who writes:

"The heroic Belgian defense of forts Waelhem, Wavre and Llerre, forming the outer ring, cost the Germans very dear. General von Beseler threw compact masses of troops into the inter walls, where the Belgians poured a withering infantry fire on the assailants.

"South of the third line of defenses German bodies are now piled in heaps. This happened at the beginning of the assault. South of Fort Bornheim the Belgians interred 3,200 German corpses.

"When Von Beseler managed to cross the Nethe and install 16½-inch guns on the north banks, shells fell in Antwerp like hailstones. Most of the remaining population then retired to cellars with food, placing mattresses and sacks filled with earth against the doors and window gratings.

"As soon as Antwerp was occupied the Germans began to fortify it. If given a little time they will, with the help of their heavy artillery, make it practically impregnable."

Kaiser's Cattle Captured.

London.—A dispatch to the Star from Petrograd says that among the remarkable war trophies arriving at Smolensk is the entire stock of Emperor William's famous pedigreed cattle and horses, captured by the Russians from the emperor's estate at Rominten, East Prussia. They were taken to Moscow and presented to the Russian Agricultural institute for distribution among agricultural breeding associations.

TRAPPED IN SWAMP, GERMAN BATTERY LOST

Rome.—An incident of the battle between the French and Germans near Esternay and Sezanna is thus described in a Paris dispatch.

"A German battery, which had been caught in a swamp, and which for this reason had been cut off from the main force, managed finally to free itself from the mud. Instead of surrendering it continued single-handed the fight against the advancing French. The German artillerymen beat their assailants off with a hellish fire, which the French artillery tried in vain to silence. Until late in the evening the battery continued its deadly work until its ammunition became exhausted and the men were either dead or wounded.

"When I arrived the brave crew had already been buried, and the guns still rested on trees which the men had placed under the wheels in order that the pieces might not disappear in the mud."

Korea.

Korea has practically become a part of the Japanese empire. At any rate the Japanese control in that country is complete, and the chances are that that control will never be withdrawn—not, at least, until Russia dominates the whole Asian mainland, if that time ever comes. The population of Korea is 12,000,000, and the area 82,000 square miles; nearly twice that of the state of New York.

No Trouble.

"And you actually went to ask old Bollinger for his daughter's hand?"

"Yes, I did."

"How'd you get along?"

"Fine. Not the least bit of trouble. He talked war talk all the time I was there, and never gave me a chance to say a word."

HEAD IN WATERY PIMPLES

R. R. No. 1, Kyles, Ohio.—"My baby's head when about a year old began to break out with small watery pimples causing her head to itch. She would scratch her head till the blood came causing the top of her head to be in almost a solid eruption. The pimples at first were nearly as large as a pea and in patches which would inflame and fester and when they would come open would leave a kind of wet scales there for a few days. Then when it dried up it would leave scales on her head that caused her hair to fall out just in great bunches.

"One day I happened to see Cuticura Soap and also Cuticura Ointment advertised in a paper and I ordered a sample of each. They seemed to help her head so much that I purchased a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and in two weeks' time her head was sound and well. Her hair had stopped falling out and was also free from dandruff." (Signed) Mrs. J. L. West, Feb. 20, '14.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

Nothing More to Be Said.

A traveling man tells of his sojourn at a "hotel" in a western town.

When, on the evening of his arrival, he entered the dining room and was shown to a table by a waiter, the latter asked, when he had brought the customary glass of water:

"Will you have some pork and beans?"

"No, I don't care for them," said the traveler. "I never eat pork and beans."

"Then sir," said the waiter, as he moved away, "dinner is over, sir."

The Cause Laid Bare

Tea and coffee drinkers often notice backache, headache, rheumatic pain, dizziness, drowsy, tired feelings, disturbed urination and other signs of kidney weakness. The constant use of narcotic or alcoholic drinks is very apt to irritate the kidneys and weak kidneys need prompt help to avert all danger of dropsy, gravel or fatal Bright's disease. Avoid the use of stimulants, drink more water, get more rest, fresh air and exercise. To tone and strengthen the tired kidneys, use Doan's Kidney Pills, the most successful and highly recommended kidney remedy.

An Ohio Case

Mrs. Catherine Kantz, 232 Center St., Findlay, Ohio, says: "I was afflicted with kidney trouble. The kidney secretions were in terrible shape and my health was all run down. I had intense backaches, headaches and dizzy spells and felt weak all the time. After doctoring and using different remedies without benefit, I took Doan's Kidney Pills. They acted like magic and before long restored me to good health. The cure has been permanent."

Nervous Emotional Dizzy Depressed ?

WOMEN who are restless, with constant change of position, "fidgetiness," who are abnormally excitable or who experience fainting or dizzy spells, or nervous headache and wakefulness are usually sufferers from the weaknesses of their sex.

DR. PIERCE'S Favorite Prescription

is the soothing, cordial and womanly tonic that brings about an invigorating calm to the nervous system. Overcomes the weakness and the dragging pains which resemble the pains of rheumatism. Thousands of women in the past forty years can bear witness to its benefits.

Mrs. Addie Cortsinger of Cedar St., Cairo, Ill., writes Dr. R. V. Pierce as follows:

"I send 31 cents for your 'Common Sense Medical Adviser' for my daughter who has recently married and I know the book will be of much value to her. I have read and used for 25 years the valuable treatment contained in the 'Medical Adviser' and have taken many bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and have been restored to health each time I used it. It is a great remedy for women as a strength builder, fine for the nerves and general health."

Your dealer in medicines sells it in liquid or sugar-coated tablet form; or you can send 50 one-cent stamps for a trial box of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription tablets. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

Ripley Items.

Clifford G. Knight has built a new barn and is now ready for winter.

L. W. Cline and wife attended the races in Lexington, Ky., last week.

The Ripley football team "did up" Shiloh in a score of 31 to 0, two weeks ago.

C. H. Silliman was operated on last Saturday for a pus gathering in his injured hip.

Mrs. Minnie McMullen and daughter, Teresse, were visitors of her brothers in Cleveland last week.

Fred Case and wife, who have been visiting relatives in this vicinity have gone to visit a brother in Canton, Ohio.

The stewards' meeting in North Fairfield last Monday was attended by some of the members of the Delphi church.

Lee Duffy, wife and child, of New Haven, were Sunday afternoon callers at the home of his brother, W. E. and wife.

R. R. Jenkins of Chicago Junction delivered a temperance address in the Delphi church last Sunday eve. The attendance was satisfactory.

The Ripley matinee association will entertain all who will come this week Friday afternoon. They are expecting horses from Norwalk and Monroeville.

Mrs. Riber of Celeryville was a caller in Delphi last Sunday. Mrs. R. has 7 sons, and no doubt W. B. Ross anticipated our neighborhood's need of help. Thanks to W. B.

Aaron Black, who is assisting Geo. Brinson husk corn, used Tuesday as a holiday and visited his friends in Delphi. We are always glad to sit down and have a chat with him.

Lizzie Carson of Mansfield, visited her mother from Wednesday until Sunday. Her mother expects to leave in the near future to spend the winter with her daughter, Agnes, in Baltimore.

At the temperance meeting last Sunday eve at the M. E. church, W. G. Blackmore and J. J. Underwood were appointed a committee on meetings. G. A. Hassinger on finance and literature.

Do not forget! Two interesting meetings in Ripley next Sunday evening, one at the Congregational church and one at the Delphi church. The music will be furnished by a "Flying Squadron" of young singers from New London, at the Congregational church and by the "Flying Squadron" from Chicago Junction, at the Methodist church. Everybody invited. A free admission to all. We are unable to announce the names of the men who will address the meetings, at this writing.

After a married life of 25 years last Thursday, night, Oct. 15, our hustling neighbor, B. A. Boardman and wife, were almost caught napping by their children, relatives and friends to the number of about 60, who rushed in on them to tell them that they had dropped in as a surprise to help them celebrate their silver wedding anniversary. The evening was spent in social chat, games, feasting and giving of remembrances, and at a late hour bid the genial bride and groom good luck and many more anniversaries.

L. D. Crum was operated on recently for the removal of pus from his lungs and at present is a great sufferer and the probabilities are that he may not be long with us. There is one thing of which we are fully cognizant whether his time here be long or short, his life has been a splendid contribution to our community. He has been closely connected with all the departments of the church. He stood for many years at the head of the Sunday Schools of the township, as S. S. superintendent, most always a teacher, served several years as teacher in the public shools. He was not selfish to his own church and community but he and his devoted wife were always inspiring in the missionary society. We have found him conservative, generous and kind. He believes in Paul to the Galatians. "If a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, consider thyself, lest thou also be tempted." The writer has always found him a trusted adviser and counselor. The young people always loved him and trusted him. The fact is L. D. Crum's path through life is marked with deeds of kindness. Truth is the inspiration of his life, and by kindness he is showing forth its matchless worth. Our hope and prayer is that God may spare him to earth, not as a sufferer, but as a healed worker. We need such men.

The famous little pills.

Obituary.

Alma Loretta Bland was born near New Washington, Ohio, March 21, 1871, and died October 15, 1914, aged 43 years, 7 months and 13 days. Four years ago she had an attack of rheumatism which left her almost a helpless invalid, scarely able to move but nevertheless, she always tried to make others happy never thinking of her own affliction.

She was married to Oscar Chronister, Oct. 31, 1893. She leaves to mourn her death four children, Stella of Chicago Junction, John H., Willis E. and Oscar E. of Mansfield, one child, Margaret, dying in infancy, her father, mother, two brothers and two sisters, besides a host of relatives and friends.

She was always a kind and loving mother always trying to do something for the welfare of her children, and even after her sad affliction, she was always ready to aid them as far as her condition would permit. She was buried from the home of her parents, Oct. 16, interment being made in Greenlawn cemetery.

Sleep on, dear friend,
Such lives as thine
Have not been lived in vain,
But shed an influence divine
On those which still remain.

CARD.

We desire to extend our heartfelt thanks to the friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted us in the illness and death of our dear mother and daughter, and also for the beautiful floral offerings.

SAMPLE BALLOT CORRECTLY MARKED.

If you believe in HOME RULE you should be sure to vote not only "YES" on the first amendment appearing on the ballot, but also "NO" on the last, thus:

MARK YOUR BALLOT LIKE THIS

Proposed Amendments to the Constitution.
X	Yes	ARTICLE XV., SECTION 9a
	No	Home Rule on the Subject of Intoxicating Liquors.
	Yes	ARTICLE XII., SECTIONS 1 and 2
	No	Limitation of the Tax Rate and for the Classification of Property for Purposes of Taxation.
	Yes	ARTICLE V., SECTION 1
	No	To Extend the Suffrage to Women
	Yes	ARTICLE XV., SECTION 9
X	No	Prohibition of the Sale, Manufacture for Sale, and Importation for Sale of Intoxicating Liquor as a Beverage.

If the majority of the votes cast on each of these two amendments is "YES," then the amendment receiving the greater number of "YES" votes will become a part of the Constitution and the other amendment will be dead.

That is why YOU should vote "YES" on the Home Rule amendment and "NO" on the State-wide Prohibition amendment.

Every "NO" vote on the Prohibition amendment kills one "YES" vote on that amendment. Failure to vote "NO" on it amounts to half a vote "YES" for it.

Don't fail to ask for the separate Constitutional amendment ballot when you go to the polls.

THE OHIO HOME RULE ASSOCIATION.

HON. ARTHUR W. OVERMYER

Hon. Arthur W. Overmyer of Fremont, Democratic nominee for congress in the Thirteenth district, comprising Wood, Seneca, Sandusky, Huron and Erie counties, was born and reared on a farm in Sandusky county, O. He is thirty-five years old and his life has been one of great activity and aggressiveness. He began teaching at sixteen and continued seven years, meanwhile taking a course in law at the Ohio Northern university, from which he graduated as a lawyer in 1902, and at once located at Fremont. He was seven years secretary of the Sandusky County fair; in 1908 secretary of the Ohio Fair Managers' association, and is now president of the Ohio Fair Boys' association, an organization of more than seventy fairs in Ohio. The past six years he has been clerk of the horse and speed department of the Ohio State fair. His fair work and sincere and deep seated interest in agriculture and its allied interests has given him a wide acquaintance throughout the state. From 1906 to 1910 he was clerk of the Fremont board of health, and in 1909 was elected city solicitor and re-elected in 1911 without opposition from either party. In every campaign since becoming a voter he has participated as a speaker in behalf of the Democratic ticket. The remarkable vote given him in the primary is the best testimonial of his worth. He is an able and conscientious lawyer, with a broad general knowledge gained in the field of experience; a clean and courageous fighter; a splendid public speaker, an aggressive campaigner and will make a good congressman.

The Night Hawk.

The night hawk is a voracious feeder and is almost wholly insectivorous. It destroys numbers of malaria mosquitoes and such other well known pests as the Colorado potato beetle, cucumber beetle, chestnut, rice, clover leaf and cotton boll weevils, bill bugs, squash bugs and moths of the cotton worm.

NOTHING BETTER FOR WEAK WOMEN

"I Never Spent Any Money That Did Me So Much Good as That I Spent for Vinol."

Bellefontaine, Ohio.—"I wish every tired, weak, nervous woman could have Vinol for I never spent any money in my life that did me so much good as that I spent for Vinol. My nerves were in a very bad condition, making me very weak, tired, and worn out and often drowsy headaches. I had tried cod liver oil, doctor's medicines, and other preparations without benefit.

"One day a friend asked me to try Vinol. I did and soon my appetite increased, I slept better and now I am strong, vigorous and well and can do my housework with pleasure."—Mrs. J. F. LAMBORN, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

Nervous, weak, tired, worn-out women should take Mrs. Lamborn's advice and try Vinol for there are literally thousands of men and women who were formerly run-down, weak and nervous, who owe their good health to Vinol.

It is the medicinal, tissue building elements of the cod's livers, aided by the blood making, strengthening influence of tonic iron, contained in Vinol, which makes it so efficient in all such cases.
