THE NIGHTS.

Oh, the summer night Has a smile of light, And she sits on a sapphire threne,
While the sweet winds lead her
With garlands of odor,
From the bud to the rose o'erblown!

But the autumn night Hed a piercing sight And a step both strong and free;
And a voice of wonder,
Like the wrath of the thunder,
When he should to the atormy sea.

And the winter night Is all hold and white, she singeth a song of pain. Till the wild bee hummeth And warm spring cometh con she dies in a dream of rain!

O the night, the night 'Tis-a lovely sight Whatever the clime or
