Plymouth, Phio, Saturday Morning, March 25, 1854.

Fair Tattletown! Alas, that stars so bright so s Time was, its borders knew no sin or harm, But that was only—when it was a farm.

Yet all was safe,
While nought was said or done to vex or chat
And people were content to buy and sell,
And mind their business quietly and well.

And still it grew; church was built and cke a tavern too And oft, in sooth, as elsewhere in the land Their punch ann piety went hand in hand.

Rolled on a year; With health, and harmony and social cheer; And then, alas, mysterious and sad, All Tattletown seemed suddenly stark mad.

As you have seen,

As you have seen,
Some mastiff and grimalkin on a green,
With growland scowl each other fiercely spy;
So these grim neighbors each would each

O grievous fate,
Such steady people in so queer a state,
No bead could nod, no eye could kindly glance
Good friendly chat was scarce as Dutch in France.

All ties were rent;
The fondest love grew cold and discontent;
The tarern raved like bedlam in despair,
Cold.hatred triumphed in th' house of prayer.

How passing strange! What could have wrought such melancholy

change;
What witch, or wizard, fiend or spirit foul,
Had made each friendly chum a churlish owl.
