A Plain Chapter on Cholera.

Having been requested by several to give them a receipt for cholera, it may not be out of place to publish a few lines which can be put in practice by any one having the least idea of the usual remedies and common appliances kept in every family and in doing so I shall give my language of every professional term that is not generally understood.

It is often the case that a person attacked by cholera makes a fatal delay in consulting a physician, or is far from his abode to have his attendance in time. The disease is generally so insidious in its approach, that every little diarrhoea, or uneasiness in the bowels or stomach, should be looked upon with suspicion, when cholera is known to be in the neighborhood. Cholera thus occurring should be treated immediately! A good warm bath as hot as you can bear it, and plenty of soap to cleanse the skin—rub with a coarse towel until the surface grows red, then take three pills of blue mass, with eight or ten drops of Laudanum. This will relieve almost all the attack of cholera in its first stages.

When it is about one can pay too much attention to his diet or his feelings. Avoid raw fruits, or too much of any kind of spirit. Bath every morning in cold water, and rub the skin roughly, for it has more to do with cholera than people are generally aware of.

If you take a diarrhoea run on for a day or two, the first you know, you are in the imminent danger of the cholera; when, if you have checked it in season, and removed the cause by slight medication, the terrible gripes never have been laid on you. It does not always warn you by a diarrhoea; but often comes suddenly. Now I merely wish to add a few lines of treatment to be used in the medical treatment cannot be immediately applied. When a person is attacked by cholera, a large quantity of water should be immediately given to the patient, and large stimulants poured over the stomach and held to the face, and three blisters put on the back, and three blisters put on the back, and three blisters put on the back.

The 'Angel Gabriel.'

The biography of the 'Angel Gabriel' has been published in New York, which we make the following extract of this eccentric character: The name of this eccentric and perhaps pathetic orator is McSwain. His father was a native of Scotland, and was a domestic in the establishment of the Marquis of Huntly. He married a female domestic in the same household, and with her emigrated to the Isle of Skye, where this eccentric 'Angel Gabriel'—the father of our unpalatable truths, first opened his eyes upon a sinful world. His father, who was a very dull, and an incurable with romance and tinged with some most disreputable reminiscences. He was born on the 3d of September, 1800, and was consequently about 49 years of age.

His mother's maiden name was Stivers, and he was christened Squire McSwain. He was a very dull, and an incurable of remaining at school, was apprenticed to a weaver in his thirteenth year. A Candidate for Membership.

'Old Steve' or 'Jing Stevens,' as he was familiarly called, by virtue of a strong original genius and an indefatigable perseverance and application, had acquired the reputation of being the greatest scholar that ever existed in the State of Michigan. Whenever he made his appearance, there, at master, or training, he was sure to be surrounded by a vast number of hearers. He greatly excelled in the recital of the Marquis, who simply told extravagant stories, and sometimes blundered on the truth. Steve, on the other hand, never made a word of truth, even by mistake, in his life, and led circumstantially and in every particular. In a short time it seems to him as natural as to breathe to recite either at breakfast; for he would not only be listened to, but even when he had no other person like to him, he would sit him self, just to keep his hand in. This fact was ascertained any doubt, by his denying it in the most solemn manner, and consequently no one would ever accuse him of the practice.

It was Mr. Stevens' misfortune, at one time, to lose a good deal of money on a horse race. This made him feel uncommonly serious, so he went to a camp meeting, which was held about five miles from his residence, to see if he could not find a little help. He was very much surprised to find a little help by 'shaking' with the boys. They happened however to be too much for him that time, and he was completely cleared out. This made him feel more serious than ever, and as there happened to be a powerful preacher there, who could make himself heard at the distance of a mile, he thought he would turn over a new leaf at once. When he got home, there he was completely cleared out. This made him feel more serious than ever, and as there happened to be a powerful preacher there, who could make himself heard at the distance of a mile, he thought he would turn over a new leaf at once.

The Emperor of Hayti.

We have had the eventual career of Louis Napoleon served up so often that there are few school boys in this great country who are not intimately acquainted with everything that has happened from the attempt on Boulogne down to the present time. On the other hand but little is known of his counterpart, Faustin Soulouque Emperor of all the Hayties. We find in the N. Y. P.M.'s sketch of his life, the materials of which were obtained by one of the editors while on a visit to Hayti: Faustin, the First, as he has already stated, is now, according to his own report and the general belief, sixty-seven years of age. It is also well ascertained, but though not very freely spoken of by his subjects, that he was born on the estate of a M. Vallat at Petit-Genve, in the south part of the island. It has even been asserted, and it may have been six years old when slavery was abolished in the French colonies by the Decree, in 1798, and when he, in company with the rest of his race in bondage in Hayti, received his freedom.

Soulouque entered the army as a soldier in 1820. He was promoted to sergeant in 1824, and to lieutenant in 1826. He was promoted to captain in 1828, and to major in 1830. He was promoted to lieutenant-colonel in 1832, and to colonel in 1834. He was promoted to major-general in 1836, and to lieutenant-general in 1838. He was promoted to full general in 1840, and to Marshal of France in 1842.

Some Absurdities of Fashion.

A late traveler in descending the Danube, was struck with the crowd of new fashions that were to be seen, and making inquiry, learned they were destined for the province of Bucharest. He was surprised to find that the same man, able to keep a carriage at all, considered it indispensable to have a new one annually, whether it was worn or not, and that the carriage was never used, but was merely a show.
