Whom should look out for... Absalom Nipper was a widower and...

Little by little, the habit of self-indulgence grew upon the luxurious noble...

He was one day at table, surrounded by the richest viands and the rarest wines...

Terrored upon the hearts of the vassals, even before the eyes of their lord...

An aged slave flung himself at his feet. 'Mercy, my lord, mercy!' he exclaimed...

The Count Sitor was as brave as he was high-born, and riches had poured in upon him...

It should not be that he hunted with a great retinue among the mountain fastnesses...

The hunt of the Sitor was merry, for the sport had gone wild throughout the day...

As they talked idly of the day's hunting, however, one widow at the great hall...

'Away with him!' he said sternly, as he lifted his goblet to his lips...

A year went by in festival and pride; the day on which that monstrous crime had been committed...

'There was a feast in the castle; and Sitor, who month after month gave him...

The guests drank for a time, and made merry at the insensibility and helplessness...

Meanwhile, a work of agony and death had been delegated to that dark-ripped Sitor...

'Add thou, leave,' said the noble, 'best thou doest to give; if the master will have little...

'I take thee at thy word, Count Sitor; I will have them, yea, on the crest of the hill...

'I take thee at thy word, Count Sitor; I will have them, yea, on the crest of the hill...

'I take thee at thy word, Count Sitor; I will have them, yea, on the crest of the hill...
