Selected Miscellany

From Ballou's Dietitian. Mr. Biddy Chanticleer, the Reform.

BY ALICE CAREY. Towards the close of a mild autumnal day, in the year 1854, two sleek, plump, and motherly-looking hens might have been seen...

They were not new acquisitions; they had been in the yard some time, and had become acquainted with all the other fowls. They were not new acquisitions; they had been in the yard some time, and had become acquainted with all the other fowls.

No, indeed! if you allude to Miss Crowfoot, and I suppose you do. But who could allude to her? She was not in the yard, and she was not in the yard.

Well, said Stripeduck, "she is called Longspur; and not only is her name so, but she is called Longspur; and not only is her name so, but she is called Longspur."

"Mersey on 'em!" ejaculated Speckle, opening both her wings. "I won't let any other chickens go to the mill, but I will let Longspur go to the mill."

Speckle said she did not and could not let any other chickens go to the mill, but she would let Longspur go to the mill.

"That is my opinion," said Stripeduck. "And another thing, I should not wonder if Mr. Longspur should get enough of the Crows' feet, for they say his wife Mrs. Biddy Chanticleer is a wicked, wicked woman."

"Dear me!" said Mrs. Speckle, "what are the chickens of this generation coming to? Stripeduck replied that she did not know; but one thing she did know, and that was, that she would not let any other chickens go to the mill."

"I am as much of a chicken as you are," said Stripeduck. "I will let Longspur go to the mill, and I will let Longspur go to the mill."

"Save enough," said Speckle, "and the other is my opinion, and that is my opinion. I will let Longspur go to the mill, and I will let Longspur go to the mill."

"I am as much of a chicken as you are," said Stripeduck. "I will let Longspur go to the mill, and I will let Longspur go to the mill."

"I am as much of a chicken as you are," said Stripeduck. "I will let Longspur go to the mill, and I will let Longspur go to the mill."

The little pullet shook herself, and with a saucy look, said, "You are quite behind the times, old hen; 'twas to get of the smoke house, and essayed to crow."

Mentime Stripeduck seized her chicken by the leg and demanded an explanation of her conduct.

"Wretch!" she said, "how dare you presume to set your tail beyond the ordinance of nature?"

"They are a couple of old fogies, sister, never mind them," called out a voice from the roof of the smoke-house.

"I have a right to wear a long tail, and I have a right to wear a long tail, and I have a right to wear a long tail."

"What I mean is, that I am not a chicken, but a human being, and I have a right to wear a long tail."

"What I mean is, that I am not a chicken, but a human being, and I have a right to wear a long tail."

One of the Newark Posters.—The Illinois Chronicle gives an interesting sketch of the life of Adolphus Bogert, who died at Newark, N. J., on the 9th of 1894. He enlisted in the Continental Army when only 17 years of age. In 1771 he was discharged with the rank of sergeant and recovered some medals that had been stolen by a band of British and Tories, in the vicinity of New York, in the autumn of 1776, when so much suffering was endured by the Americans. From this handsome person he received a commission as sergeant. He watched his opportunity, climbed a post and sprang over his position wall. He succeeded in getting to the rear of the British, and the course of the day, made his way to the North end of the Island, with the British soldiers, while on his passage from Annapolis to the island, on Wednesday morning, the 14th instant, at 1.45, while steering, he saw a light from the North end of the island, which he determined to risk a detection, and ask for hospitalities. He knocked at the door, and was received by two women, the only inmates of the house. They were both dressed in the style of the 18th century, and he was given something to eat, and furnish him a place to sleep. He was then taken to the other side, and was only gone out for the night, and was hourly expected to return. At this time they were preparing a hearty meal, while the women assisted themselves in sewing some far beyond their time, to protect them from the light of the rising sun. He was then, kindly thanking his benefactors, he pursued his flight for the remainder of the day, and putting into the water about midnight, he regained the friendly shore.

We notice this event the more especially, as we wish to call attention to the time of the day, and the manner in which it occurred. It remains us of the celebrated wreck of Mungo Park, in his African expedition, which was a most interesting and hospitable from the females, even the most savage and hostile tribes. The latter were never true to their country and to humanity.

FROM AUSTRIA DEPART.—The British bark Cleonant arrived at Savannah, Ga., on Monday, in twenty-six days from Cape de Verde, bringing Sydney papers to the 29th of December. There had been no rain in Sydney for six weeks, and prayers were offered in the churches for rain. The thermometer on the 29th December ranged at 97 degrees. The Savannah News at 37.

The colony had not produced wheat enough for its own consumption, and the people were looking to the United States for their supply. The wheat was suffering from a drought unparalleled in its history for many years. The cattle were being starved by the want of food, and the fields were sterile by the want of rain.

Well, my friends!!
MONROE'S PILLS is so well known, and so highly recommended, that it is a pity to see a person who is suffering from any of the ailments mentioned in the following list, who does not try it. It is a simple, safe, and effective remedy for all the ailments mentioned in the following list.

SEARCH FOR DR. KANE.—The Evening Post states that the Philadelphia light-house is to be fitted up and equipped with the most complete apparatus ever seen in the world. The vessel will be lengthened about twenty feet, and will be equipped with a propeller of about 800 tons. Captain Hartzen, formerly of the Steamer Hiron, has been selected to command the expedition, and we understand that he is now engaged in making his arrangements to sail in June.

A CATACLYSM OF THE U. S. Army, in view of the anticipated troubles with the Indians in Nebraska, suggests that blankets taken from small poor hospitals, be freely distributed to the needy. It is thought that in this opinion, will do more towards effecting an extermination than the six new regiments. Very humane indeed.

EMERSON OR HARTZ.—Times says that the Albany Evening Post has published a picture of a Pizane on exhibition among the "hand time curiosities" in the Knickerbocker gallery. The picture is a portrait of a man who is said to be the same as the one who was seen at the exhibition of the Knickerbocker gallery.
