Selret Poetry.

The morning, first dawn was all glowing.
And purple and gold tinged the sky;
The Summer's soft three, see were blowing
And waving the tree tops on high;
With music the groves were all ringing.
The grave was all spangled stip daw,
By the side of the path weetly skiliging.
Sat a next wirl milking her cow.

Eat a wester was manuage ner cow.
Like the morning her fair check was glowi's
With the ruse's most delieste hue,
Her hair like the golden clouds flowing,
a Her eyes like the drops of bright dew.
Her locks, by the morning breeze parted,
A forehead disclow'd white as smow,
And now were more gay and light hearted
Than the pretty girl milking flee cow.

The lack, his glad hyum to the morning, Was 'quiging abot' in the sky; And rolus, the carol returning. Sat preliable on the tree top hard by; And sparrows were fitting as lightly, And chirping their notes sweet and low, Internote of the rich all sung more sweetly. Than the pretty girl milking the cow.
