Select Poetry.

Two Four to Play. We were so poor when baby died, And mother stilled his shried. The other in their aged eyes, With spruce wool and wool!

Innocent in the extreme. The wind crept freely, and his companion seemed to enjoy the sport hugely. Several times LeGrant cast a reproving look at Savage, and the latter noticed it, but instead of becoming more decent, he only tried the passenger to displease and annoy the quiet passenger.

Select Miscellany.

FROM THE LOOK OF AN OLD SEAMAN. My ship cleared for Liverpool, and I wound for the Indies. In the cabin I had some dozen passengers, most of whom were army officers, who had been home on leave or furlough.

This event exert a sort of cloud over the spirits of the passengers for several days, and though Savage refrained from most of his profanity, yet, I could see that notwithstanding his outward calmness, he was inwardly suffering from the loss of his companion.

That evening when we went down to supper, no one could have told by the appearance of Walter LeGrant that any thing had happened to him. He sat at the same table as of old, and his face was all the same calm and serene.

Now, men of Heaven, show the blood of our prophet! Every bead bowed low, for they were his high tones—clear, ringing and distinct. I remember how LeGrant looked at that moment. He had just looked at his mother below when he spoke, and then he turned upon the crew. His head was wet, his teeth set, his finely chiselled nostrils dilated, and his eyes brightly emitting fine streams of fire.

By this time the night was nearly gone, and the moon shone brightly. We had struck down to the opposite side of the deck. By this time the night was nearly gone, and the moon shone brightly. We had struck down to the opposite side of the deck.

for the noble youth who had not only been the direct agent of saving our ship and crew, but who had also the moral courage to do his duty, even though it brought upon the herald seat of his companions against him.

The widow's mother had followed her son on deck, and had seen all that had transpired, and never shall I forget the strange look that dwelt upon her countenance as she clasped her hands and raised her arms to heaven with a cry that was a wail, of joyful pride and ardent gratitude such as words cannot tell.

By the time we arrived at Calcutta without further trouble, and from that evening of recollection, I heard not a profane word or ribald jest fall from the lips of Captain Savage. He was a better and a happier man.

From the New York Sunday Dispatch A STRANGE DREAM IN REAL LIFE. We have just received the particulars of a singular story which has become the talk of no little group in a neighboring city, and the chief actors in which have a way heretofore been known to possess the highest degree of moral respectability.

Delivered in the Know Nothing Convention, Philadelphia, Dec. 1858.

Mr. Garrison: I feel much embarrassed when I read that I am to present the views of the mighty West on this vexed question of Slavery, under circumstances which I feel that I cannot gentlemen more competent to the task than I undertake it.

The gentleman who preceded me have all mistaken the policy of the founders of this Republic. Freedom means not to tolerate Slavery, or even to be responsible for its existence.

The Honorable gentlemen from Tennessee and Alabama have said that we, the North, were generally opposed to the establishment of the Missouri Compromise at the time the compact was entered into in 1820.

The gentleman over the way asks me to reconcile that position. I will, Sir, The history of the South is a history of that compact is already signed, yes, signed, all over.

But the damning deed is done; and regarding the rights of the States under the Constitution, we cannot change it now. And now, after our solemn protest, our four-year term to that inquiry, you cannot forward and initiate this renewed outrage upon us.

Gov. Brown of Vermont, said he had signed that same wrong and unjust to resist that same agitation on the subject of Slavery.

Several gentlemen confessed in substance that they were in favor of the Fugitive Slave Law. Mr. Ford pronounced by saying that an "open confession" was "good for the soul."

By your confession this day, coupled with your action, you place yourself in the condition of a thief who, having been detected, has confessed his crime, and begs for mercy.

Know Something Or Not? Officers of the "Know Nothing" Convention in Cleveland last week, adjourned Friday, to meet again in Buffalo, on the second Wednesday in June, 1856.

The following are the main points of the platform to be read first: A pledge of the honor of the candidate required; a promise to be twenty-one years of age and a citizen of the United States, and not a Roman Catholic.

Of the officers elected for the ensuing year, the following were elected: Hiram Griswold of Cleveland, National President; Ex-Governor Rowell of Urono, Mass., President of the State.

The following is the National Platform adopted at Cleveland, June 14, 1856. As servility to the Slave Power characterized the administration of President Pierce, and the servility to the Slave Power characterized the administration of President Buchanan.

PLYMOUTH, O.
SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 1855.

Speech of Capt. Ford.
To the exclusion of each other, we publish this week the able speech of Capt. Ford of Mansfield, delivered at Philadelphia. Our readers will not regret it is the speech of the Convention thus far.
Capt. Ford is to be envied. He enjoys the honor of being the first northern man, in a hand-to-hand combat with the South has preserved the original strength of the back and knees. Through the whole session he promulgated the slave prolegomena, and his northern co-convention sat on her knees mostly for quarter. The South on her knees must have been a refreshing sight.
Three cheers for Capt. Ford. He merits the thanks of his state for the boldness and energy with which he defended the principles dear to seven-tenths of his people. Read his speech by all means.

FAIRFIELD.—We paid a visit, last week, to this thriving village, and must confess we were surprised at its rapid growth and advancement. Instead of a quiet country village, we found a rapidly improving place, about twenty inhabitants fully up to the times, if not a trifle ahead, and full of improvement and progress. We were particularly struck with the beauty and tastefulness of the residences. Every house has something about it that strikes the eye and arrests the attention of the passer-by. The town commands a full share of business—the result of a fertile enterprise that pervades the place. Among the merchants are Black & Seymour, Stores, Howard and Dry Goods, Ed. Evans & Stillman, Dry Goods and Groceries, D. Johnson & Son, Dry Goods and Groceries. (By the way, with the last-named firm, John M. Haskett, formerly of this place may be found.) Hiram Barnard and Roberts, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Boots and Shoes, and D. G. Jennings with everything that can be required of a Merchant Tailor. J. N. Waters has a fine Harness and Saddle Establishment. Burgess, Durr & Co. are proprietors of an extensive Chair Factory. They employ about twenty men, and turn out a vast amount of work. N. Birch carries on the Foundry and Machine Business. The Trustees are extensively engaged in the manufacture of Agricultural Implements. The Railroad House, by A. C. Allen, is a fine house, and is kept in No. 1 style. The traveler cannot but be satisfied with the fare and accommodations of this House. The Fairfield House, and its landlord, Mr. Rolit Curtis, have been long and favorably known to the public. These matters we care will be well provided for.

We doubt if there is a more pleasant village in Northern Ohio than North Fairfield.
STORM.—Last Saturday, this section of country was visited by a very severe storm. It commenced about 3 P. M., the rain pouring down in torrents, accompanied by terrific thunder and lightning and furious winds. The rain continued falling all Saturday night. On Sunday morning everything was under way. The ground had overflowed, the fields were low, and losing their way, were running loose over the meadows and fields, carrying away fences, lumber, &c. A light draught steamer might have navigated the Huron River, easily.
The storm did much damage. The dam of Culp's Mill north of this village was carried away. South of it, near Eaton Station, the storm devastated a strip of country for miles. The timber on the farms of David Long, Wm. Tucker, and others, was prostrated, and the grain lodged. The oldest inhabitant can not remember a storm so severe.

Folsom's College.—Our readers will find in another column the advertisement of Folsom's Mercantile College, of Cleveland. We cordially commend this Institution to the attention of our readers, knowing it to be one of the best in the country. Mr. Folsom is one of the most experienced and successful of the science of Accountancy we have ever known. He possesses the rare faculty of imparting his knowledge to others. Young men wishing to become thorough accountants will do well to place themselves under the charge of Mr. Folsom and his able assistants.
MORRY.—We want and must have money, immediately. Those indebted to us will confer a favor by squaring up. Such of our agents as have money in their hands belonging to us will please remit. Our subscribers in Michigan will find their bills in this week's paper. We hope of a patron will attend to this matter.
IF THAT SOME D—N Abolitionist? Down with him!—Down with his feathered accomplices!
If that some D—N said a friend "it's only a false preaching saying the Catholics and Foreigners,"
If that some D—N said "Virginia, don't let him go plant,"
The application can be made by those who see the point.

Agricultural Meeting.
At a meeting of the citizens of Plymouth and vicinity, held at Smith's Western Exchange, pursuant to notice for the purpose of organizing an Agricultural Society, S. TRAUGER was called to the chair, and D. R. Locke, appointed Secretary.

On motion, the officers of the Society were constituted a committee to solicit subscriptions, and to report at a meeting of the Directors and those having subscription papers held at the Advertiser office, on Saturday, June 30.
Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be published in the Plymouth Advertiser. S. TRAUGER, Pres't.
D. R. LOCKE, Sec'y.
