my proposition started by the old gentleman... the boat was lowered and the captain, the mate and two passengers were in a few minutes set on shore...

A small but comfortable old way side water wagon stood there, which many years ago was raised to the ground, and to this in the passengers were con- sidered by the old gentleman and my father...

In due time the landlord announced the supper, a sumptuous feast... I will tell the remainder of the story in my father's own words.

My father knew how long I had been in bed, he would say, when I heard a horri- ble noise as of shouting for help, and I arose to rise and could not. In a few moments I heard a man's voice...

"What is this for, what is the matter?" I asked, still bewildered in my senses, and half believing that I was still dream- ing.

"I did not reply, for in truth I knew not what to say, not what my assailant meant by his words, and I had not time to re- spond, as he had already fled...

"You shan't say it, youngster," was the brutal reply. "It means that you have a great deal to say, and you shall say it, and this is not the first time you have committed a crime."

"I found the captain of the ship, the servant of the inn before mentioned, and the landlord already at the justice's room, and they were all trying to get me out of the room, but I was determined to stay...

"I know nothing of this awful business," I said, and my father was agreeable to my proposition.

case of robbery, ending in an accident to the man who had been shot, who was im- prisoned as a robber, and who was im- prisoned as a robber, and who was im- prisoned as a robber...

"There was a murmur in the crowd and some one, apparently a female, called out, 'It is innocent!'"

"The only difficulty," continued my father, "was to ascertain what had become of the woman, and the faces of the crowd were all turned towards the door..."

"She is innocent, and nothing shall long- er detain her," he said, and he turned towards the woman, who was now in the crowd...

"What can have become of the post- man?" continued the magistrate. "No one spoke, and he then added, 'What is the knife or weapon found by the man who was shot?'"

"I have no answer," I said, and the magistrate turned to me, and said, 'This case is involved in some mystery, and the absence of your presence temptations to commit the murder, viz: the postman, the man who was shot, and the man who was shot...'"

"I had promised to rise and light them," I said, and the magistrate turned to me, and said, 'This case is involved in some mystery, and the absence of your presence temptations to commit the murder, viz: the postman, the man who was shot, and the man who was shot...'"

"Why, in the early stage of this trial, when I had been shot, who was im- prisoned as a robber, and who was im- prisoned as a robber, and who was im- prisoned as a robber..."

"I was not at home," I said, and the magistrate turned to me, and said, 'This case is involved in some mystery, and the absence of your presence temptations to commit the murder, viz: the postman, the man who was shot, and the man who was shot...'"

Two Nephews.

At the parlor window of a pretty villa near Winton-on-Thames, sat one evening Mr. John Collet, an old man and a young woman. The age of the man might be some sixty; while his companion had certainly not reached nineteen. Her beautiful bloom- ing face and active and upright figure were in strong contrast with the worn countenance and bent frame of the old man...

"It was not at home," I said, and the magistrate turned to me, and said, 'This case is involved in some mystery, and the absence of your presence temptations to commit the murder, viz: the postman, the man who was shot, and the man who was shot...'"

Selected Miscellany.

THE MURDER AT THE INN.

In the year 1808, when Mercurius Willet, was Mayor of New York City, my father, who was a young man of about twenty years of age, first visited the city in hope of obtaining some employment in a merchant's counting room, but having failed to do so, he supported himself decently, and perhaps, by aid and by, to better his fortunes.

My grandfather was the owner of a small farm, and he had a son, who was named John, and he had a daughter, who was named Mary, and he had a son, who was named John, and he had a daughter, who was named Mary...
