SCHOOL NEWS.
(Conducted by the Superintendent.)
The first and second grades have had for visitors to date, Mes James Alton Becker, C. H. Gilmore, H. R. Sykes, Frank Davis, and Samuel Fate.
As a school we wish to take this means of expressing our heartfelt sympathy to the parents of Harry Keeler, a pupil of our primary school, whose sad death is still fresh in our minds.
We regret very much that Barton Lenhart had his arm broken Thursday morning while playing with the foot ball. This accident occurred while the boys were kicking and running with the foot ball; not in a game. We are very sorry and the parents have our sympathy.
Our first literary program of the school year will be rendered on Friday of this week, beginning at 12:30 p. m. Visitors are welcome.
Mrs. Edward Barr was a visitor in third and fourth grade room this week.
The superintendent wishes to make this public statement regarding his views on foot ball playing. The boys of every high school are determined to play foot ball if they can muster up enough players in the school. If the school authorities prohibited the organization of a school team, the boys will join a team of some kind, either playing with and against players bigger and rougher than themselves. Under the circumstances it has been thought best to let them play with young folks of their kind, and let the teacher supervise the playing. Then fair and clean playing is more possible.

Presbyterian Church.
No preaching service will be held at the above church next Sunday morning. Preparations are being made for a "Christian Endeavor Rally" day service at 7 p. m. The program will consist of speeches by Rev. Griffiths and Mr. Danner, S. S. Superintendent. Round-table talks. Reports of various committees, and in addition an excellent musical program has been arranged. We want to break all records in this Society for attendance by having
EVERY MEMBER PRESENT
We can do it if you will help. Come yourself and help "Round-up" all members of the Society.
HAVE A PERFECT ATTENDANCE.
Here are the Rally Day aims:

1. To get up the standards and program of work for fall and winter.
2. To call everyone connected with each society in some part of the society's program.
3. Rally day for the young People's Societies is not just a "Gurrah Meeting." It is to be a decision day as regards policy and plan of future work.
4. Rally Day should give the best start toward better meetings. A 100 per cent membership, increased knowledge of our Church and her work, more efficient methods, and more devoted, concentrated service for the Master. All congregations. Laymen. Rally Day is the best plan for better meetings.

What's finer than a walk in the country in autumn?
The rich fields the meadows have been gathered, but in the meadows cattle and sheep are still grazing, a restful picture of peace amid plenty.
Here and there the foliage shows early suggestion of the scarlets and yellows that are to be the brilliant notes in the great symphony of frost-tinted nature. Amid the tree the squirrels are leaping in their quest of winter food. Across the rich blue of the unclouded sky birds have begun to wing toward the south. Sun and sky are of a golden hue.

An Honored Life Ended.

Daniel M. Beelman was born January 15, 1845, in Cambridgeport, Pa., and departed this life at his home in Plymouth, Sept. 24, 1914, aged 65 years, 8 months and 9 days.
He moved with his parents to Ohio at the age of 19 years, locating near Chicago Junction, where he lived until 1879.
He was united in marriage with Susan J. Upp, Dec. 28, 1871, and to this union was born seven children, four girls and three boys.
From Chicago Junction he moved to the farm south of Plymouth, and resided there until nine years ago, when he moved to Plymouth and has lived a retired life till the day of his death.
Mr. Beelman was a man of stalwart character, honorable in his dealings, and a splendid citizen. He loved his family and looked well to their comfort.
He leaves one brother, an affectionate and faithful wife, 5 children, 11 grandchildren, and a host of friends to mourn his death.
Funeral services were held from his late home on High street, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. R. H. Balmer, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, the services being attended by a large concourse of relatives and friends, who had gathered to pay their last respects to their friend, neighbor and highly respected fellowman. Interment was made in Greenlawn cemetery, six of the nephews of the deceased acting as pallbearers.

Fish and Then Some.

Thirty Knights of Plymouth went to Plymouth Friday night in automobiles and enjoyed a pleasant evening, being royally entertained by the Plymouth Knights. The Shelby boys say the Plymouth lodge is composed of royal entertainers, and the manner in which they looked after the comfort of their visitors proved it. When the lodge was called to order the routine business was disposed of and two candidates were initiated. The work was put on in excellent style by the Shelby degree team; and they stood out as the best of the good material and favored the lot with an address which interested everybody. Two candidates were given the first degree and two were put through the second.
When this work had been completed the members were entertained at a fish dinner, the like of which the Shelby boys never enjoyed before. A large tub full of fresh fish had been prepared in grand style and the members consumed fish to their hearts' content. The Shelby Knights are loud in their praises of the work in which they were entertained in the neighboring village—Shelby Globe.

Daniel Hoover, examiner of chauffeurs in this district, has received an opinion of the attorney general in regard to a new law regarding the registration of motor vehicles.
In his opinion Attorney General Hogan says every person operating a motor vehicle for hire is included as well as every person operating a motor vehicle as an employee of the owner. The first class includes the owner of the motor vehicle who personally operates the same for hire, so that persons in the livery or taxi-cab business are required to procure chauffeur registration even though the machine be operated by the owner or hireling.

Jersey Heifer.
Gave Birth to Twins May 28 and to a Third Calf Four Months Later.

J. W. Firewood, living on a farm in Jackson township, furnishes the Globe with a cow story which has not been equaled in this locality, nor any other we know of. He is well known among the farmers in this part of the county and they will readily understand that the story is true. Mr. Firewood gives the Globe his word that the facts are correct as stated.
He owns a 2 year old Jersey heifer which gave birth to twin calves May 28, and September 24 the same cow gave birth to a third calf. He says that in all his years of experience as a farmer nothing like this ever happened before. Stephen Keeler purchased one of the twins, and S. L. Stroup the other. He still has the third calf at his farm, Shelby Globe.

Passenger Rates Ready Oct. 1.
Regarding the recent announcement that interstate passenger fares were to be increased in both eastern and western territory, word has been received from Washington that the new tariffs are expected to be ready for filing by October 1.
The information received by the interstate commerce commission is that the straight fare between New York and St. Louis, for instance, will be advanced 12 cents, the fare between New York and intermediate points will be based on the increase between New York and intermediate points will be based on the increase between the two large terminals.
The fare to Chicago will be based entirely on a two and one-half-cent-a-mile rate, and just as far as is practicable the fares between New York and intermediate points will bear a like mileage charge. Because of the laws of some intermediate states being the maximum of intrastate fares at 2 cents a mile, some difficulty is being experienced by railroad officials in working out the details of the proposed advance in intrastate rates, but it is expected that these difficulties may be solved.

NEITHER SIDE CLAIMS GAINS IN CONFLICTS

Germans and Allies Slaughter Each Other Without Definite Results.

ADMIT THE LOSS IS HEAVY

Frontal Attacks and Repulses Cost the Lives of Thousands—Germany Firmly Able Without Strain to Maintain War for Year—Cost to Her Is $5,000,000 a Day—Russian Claims Rout of Austrians.

Paris, via London, Sept. 30.—Details of the French and British fighting on the left wing, along the Aisne, where the allies have repulsed for days the attacks of the Germans, who endeavored to take the positions by assault, are disclosed.

Word from the front describes the encounters. On one occasion the French and British held positions within a quarter of a mile of the German front, where they were not in danger from the heavy German artillery and were sheltered from the machine guns unless they came into the open.

One of the most furious German assaults turned upon the trenches occupied by British regiments, which calmly awaited the onslaughts of the line of Germans, meeting them with sustained rifle and machine gun fire and sometimes at the point of the bayonet, which did great execution.

The British, however, did not bear the whole brunt of the fighting, for the French troops, including a division of the famous colonial infantry and the Turcos, as well as many battalions of French regulars and others composed of territorial troops, also faced successfully prolonged attacks, which were delivered with great fierceness.

The vigor and spirit of the soldiers were considered remarkable after such an exhausting campaign, during which they had scarcely a full day's rest. When not actually engaged in fighting many of the regiments marched thirty miles daily for several days in changing position to carry out new movements.

Germans Deny Allies Advances.

The German official statement declares that "reports concerning a victorious advance of the enemy are untrue."

"The Germans suffered enormous losses in the last engagement," says the Bordeaux correspondent of the Reuters Telegram company. The message continues:

"German prisoners say that some companies of the guards have dwindled to 100 men and are commanded by young officers, as they have lost all their former officers since the beginning of the war."

Other dispatches confirm the report that the Prussian guard has been cut to pieces during the fighting. The strength of some companies has been reduced from 250 to 100 men. Two battalions have been annihilated.

The supreme clash of arms denoting the approaching close of the tremendous fortnight of practically unceasing battle, along the four rivers flowing through northwestern France has been in progress forty-eight hours without a decisive result.

RUSSIANS CLAIM SUCCESS; IS DENIED AT BERLIN

London, Sept. 30.—A Central News dispatch from Rome says that the following telegram has been received there from Petrograd:

"The right wing of the Austrians has been driven back beyond the Carpathians into Hungary, where they are being pursued by the Russians. The Austrian debacle is complete and they have lost all their artillery. The Austrians left wing has retreated to Cracow. The Russians have occupied two of the forts of Przemysl."

The hour for the battle which will determine whether the Russians will make their proposed invasion of Germany with Berlin as the final objective appears to be drawing near.

A wireless dispatch to the Marconi company from Berlin gives the following official statement issued in the German capital:

"There is no change in the situation in any of the theaters of war, and reports concerning a victorious advance of the enemy are untrue."

"Reports of the fall of two of the Przemysl forts are inventions." The Austrian government has protested to the allies and neutral powers on the use of dumfries.

EXPECT FIGHT TO LAST; WAR'S COST TO GERMANY

Berlin, Sept. 30, via London.—The correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger in a dispatch published here today points out that a decisive turn in the battle which has been raging in the western theater of war need not be expected for some time. Subordinate actions of a decisive character are becoming more general, the correspondent declares.

The losses of the Germans have been extraordinarily heavy, and the fact that those of the enemy have been greater is poor consolation. The troops are confident that in the end they will win the action.

A long column of French prisoners of war arrived during the week from the direction of Reims. Monday the correspondent met a column of about a thousand men whose faces showed that they were glad to have at last escaped the turmoil and terrors of this great war of modern battlefields.

Berlin, Sept. 30, via London.—The response of the German public to the efforts of the government to raise a war fund of 5,000,000,000 marks ($1,250,000,000) it is asserted here, has removed all anxiety the nation may have had regarding its ability to meet financial obligations due to the war.

Originally the reichstag allowed a war credit of 5,000,000,000 marks in addition to the war treasure, and of this amount 4,500,000,000 has been subscribed by the public without straining seriously the financial resources of the empire.

According to military authorities, the war is costing Germany about twenty million marks ($5,000,000) a day, inclusive of the money spent on behalf of those who have been deprived of their bread-winners.

BRIEF DISPATCHES TELL OF MINOR HAPPENINGS

(Special Correspondence.) There is strong evidence from the inside of Brussels that something is expected by the Germans there. For instance, all the English nurses and doctors who have been here since the occupation have been ordered to depart. Some have already gone.

It is reported that all the wounded, irrespective of their condition, have been moved out of the city, and that some of them died in the moving.

The Japanese legation at Peking announces that Japanese troops, after fighting on Saturday and Sunday, occupied a position within seven and one-half miles of Tsing Tao, the seat of government of Kiaochow, the German leased possession in China. A German report, dated but evidently having to do with the same engagement, says that the Germans retired only from their outpost positions to the first line defenses of the city.

The Russian ministry of the interior today gave out figures on the harvest for 1914, according to which the food products reached a total of more than 64,285,000 tons.

A Bordeaux dispatch to London says a report has reached there that the German commander at Hiltshausen, in Alsace, has committed suicide in despair over the fact that he was unable to pass the Vosges. He had previously telegraphed the German general staff to come and see the difficulties for itself.

The correspondent of the Giornale d'Italia (Rome), who has entered Pola, the great naval port and arsenal of Austria, reports that all the woods around the harbor have been cut and burned, country houses and villas have been painted gray and intrenchments have been dug and traps have been laid everywhere.

The troops centered at Pola, says the correspondent, total 300,000, and a fleet is assembled there.

The Berliner Tagblatt's military critic admits that "the German army in the Verdun region is menaced on three sides by the French."

"It is officially announced that French forces in equatorial Africa have recaptured the greater part of the Congo territory ceded to Germany by the treaty of 1911," says the Havas (Paris) correspondent at Bordeaux.

A dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Venice, dated Sunday, says that the French fleet at that time had been in action for the last forty-eight hours bombarding the port of Cattaro and the fortified island on the Dalmatian coast.

A dispatch from Rome to London says a message from Budapest assigns the minister of the interior has announced fifteen new cases of cholera in the Hungarian city's military hospital.

The operators of a German Zeppelin dirigible dropped a bomb into a schoolhouse at Belostok, Russia, yesterday, killing eleven children, according to a dispatch from Petrograd to the London Morning Post.

A dispatch to the Cologne Gazette from Igal, Dalmatia, asserts that the Austrian forts at Cattaro on Sept. 19 sunk a big French warship. The forts had intercepted a wireless message concerning the movement in the direction of Cattaro of fifteen warships and three cruisers. The Austrians awaited their arrival fully prepared. A salvo from the first fort sank the warship and the other vessels in the fleet hastily retreated.

"Advantage has been taken of the arrival of reinforcements to relieve by fresh troops the men who have reports on the firing line for some time," reports an Austrian dispatch.

Despite official denials by Austria, it is positively known that the Austrian forces on the Italian frontier are being strongly re-organized. All of the regiments made up of troops of Italian birth or from the frontier itself, where Italian sympathy is strong, have been transferred to the battle line in Galicia. Their places have been taken by Hungarian regiments and those of the Russian frontier, who are being sent to the front in a similar manner.

ALLIED ARMY MAKES FURTHER PROGRESS

Germans Defeated at Every Point of Contact, Says French Report.

TEUTONS' ATTACKS REPULSED

Climax of the Great Battle, in Which Thousands of Warriors on Both Sides Have Been Killed and Wounded, Appears Near at Hand

Paris, France.—The Germans were defeated at every point of contact Tuesday and the allies were able to make further appreciable progress. In a desperate effort to break through the allies' left, repeated counter attacks were repulsed by the German and right wing against the British and French, but each was repulsed. Between the Heights of Albert and Comblies the allies have pushed forward until the enemy operating to the north of the main fighting line has been forced to retreat within 45 miles of the Belgian frontier. On the right bank of the Meuse, the French, by successive and vigorous attacks, have regained all they lost when the Germans made their raid across the Meuse and succeeded in securing a foothold on the lower heights of the Meuse.

One unofficial report received from the north was that the German right has been in full retreat since Sept. 23, and that Gen. Von Kluck had made an offer to surrender to Gen. Joffre on condition that the German troops be allowed to return to Germany with their arms, they agreeing not to take up arms again during the war. This report had it that Gen. Joffre, in reply to the reported offer, had ordered the shelling of the enemy's position and that the next day the German right wing retreat was in full retreat, pursued by the allies. The report added that the pursuers were using rapid-fire guns mounted on armored automobiles. No confirmation of this report is obtainable in official circles. The war office, in its midnight official statement, ignores it, confining itself to the declaration that there is nothing new in the situation.

Climax of Battle Near. The climax of the great battle, which is now in its 18th day, appears near at hand. The French and British troops, especially on the French left, are beginning to bring home the finishing blows in anticipation of a supreme effort which it is believed the Germans will make before finally abandoning the advantage that still remains to them after their enforced withdrawal from in front of Paris. All indications are that, with the conflict in which hundreds of thousands have been killed and wounded drawing to its close, the ultimate victory will rest with the allies. It is confidently predicted in Paris that the Germans either will have to surrender their right wing army or trust it to a hazardous march over lines which already are threatened at several points by the allies.

Final Test of Strength. That the final test of strength is but a question of hours is indicated by the reticence of the French war office, in refusing itself to messenger general statements which give no part of the gigantic movement, now believed to be in progress, to dislodge the invaders from their positions. Night and day the Germans have been making vigorous attempts to pierce the constantly tightening lines of British and French who are effectively engaging Gen. Von Kluck in what appears to be an inextricable position. Not only is Gen. Von Kluck threatened, but also the reinforcing army of Gen. Von Boehm, while Gen. Von Boehm is declared to be in grave danger in his position on the right center of the German line. In a separate page, on the center, and in the region as far east as the forest of Artois, fierce cannonading was resumed by the enemy Tuesday. East of Arras, toward the Meuse, the enemy occupied, strongly fortified positions and but slight progress was reported by the French commanders.

Germans Renew Operations. Both armies are making desperate attempts to bring this battle to a conclusion before the cold winter sets in. The Germans are reported to have renewed their operations in upper Alsace and fierce fighting is in progress near Muehlenhausen. Also sporadic German attacks against the Verdun-Tour line of fortifications have been reported.

Well-authenticated reports are entirely absent of any fighting with the allied forces have ventured to estimate the casualties in the battle of the Aisne. In killed, wounded and missing at about 150,000, while those of the allies will probably reach 140,000.

ADMITS MURDERING GIRL WITH HATCHET

Former Rubber Worker, Out of Job, Confesses Crime to Police Officials.

Petrograd.—The Russian government has just issued this statement: "In the woods near Arquevior our troops are successfully advancing, keeping up a running fight with the enemy. Near Osnovitsa, on the morning of Sept. 27, the first of the enemy's big caliber guns reached considerable intensity. The attempt of the German infantry to get close to the fortress was checked. In Silents the enemy has been considerably strengthened and is making great activity. The Austrian sorties from Przemyel remain unsuccessful. In the retreating Austrian army considerable disorganization is noticeable, units being broken and mixed up. We continue taking prisoners in large numbers as well as capturing guns and war material of every description."

The fan-like Russian advance is still sweeping across Galicia, closing in and forcing the Austrians through the passes of the Carpathians and into the plains of Hungary. An official communication issued at Budapest admits that the Russians have succeeded in crossing the Hungarian frontier at several points. In the Ung district despite the fact that reinforcements have been sent against them. Ung is a county in the northeastern part of Hungary.

Berlin Claims Gains Says Military Operations in France Has Settled Down to Artillery Duel.

Berlin, Germany, via The Hague.—The war office, in its latest official statement, stated the operations in France have settled down to a general artillery duel interspersed with frequent assaults at the vital points along the line.

"While the fighting is general," the report says, "it is not so intense at any point of the line of battle that the conflict has entered into deciding stages. The German right has been subject to severe pressure, but every attempt to penetrate it has been repelled with great loss to the enemy. On the center front there has been no decided change for nearly a week, while on the left the fighting continues. Our forces continue to make gains along the lines of the Meuse."

Of Russian operations the war office reports: "The fortress of Przemyel holds out against all attempts on the part of the enemy to take it, and in a series of successful sorties the garrison has inflicted great damage on the enemy. In one of these sorties it is reported the garrison managed to disable two of the main Russian siege guns, whose fire was damaging the outer walls of the fortress."

ADMITS MURDERING GIRL WITH HATCHET

Former Rubber Worker, Out of Job, Confesses Crime to Police Officials.

SAYS ROBBERY WAS MOTIVE

Prisoner Declares He Thought Victim Recognized Him, So He Used Ax to End Her Life—Slayer, After Being Arrested, Tries to Kill Himself.

Akron, O.—Through the arrest and confession of Harry Boomer, a former rubber worker, the police Tuesday night solved the mystery of the murder of Miss Minnie Becker, found dead in a rear room of her brother's tea store in Sarageset.

Boomer admitted that he killed the young woman. "I made a wooden mallet with the intention of stunning her, so I could rob the store," he said, according to the police. "When I hit her she recognized me, so I killed her with a hatchet I found on the floor."

Boomer was arrested in East Akron by Detectives Ackerman, Goolier and McCannell after the police and detectives endeavored to solve the mystery of the murder. When taken to his room, Boomer attempted to kill himself. He reached for his bloodstained coat hanging on a chair and then flung himself under a couch, where he had hidden a revolver.

"Let me die," he screamed as the police struggled with him and forced him to give up the weapon. Miss Becker was killed early Monday afternoon. Mrs. Elmer Brown, a friend who intended to make a purchase in the store, found the young woman's body in the back room with the ax in her hand. It was found that $67 had been stolen from the cash register, and it was thought that robbery was the motive. Later a note was found on the counter, but it was determined that this had been written by the admiral of Miss Becker and had nothing to do with the tragedy.

The police had about given up the robbery theory and were working on the assumption that the victim was slain by a demented man, when the detectives arrested Boomer and the confession followed.

When given the third degree at the police headquarters Boomer told of the crime. He is 24 years old and a rubber worker. For the last six months he had been employed at various times by Fred M. Becker, the murdered woman's brother, running errands and delivering packages.

"I had been out of work the last few days," he said in his confession, according to the police, "and I needed money, so I determined to rob the Becker store. I made the mallet out of wood I picked up and hid it under my coat. I went in the store at a time when I knew Miss Becker would be alone. I didn't intend to kill her. I just wanted to stun her, take the money and get away."

"I walked in the front door and there was no one in the store. Miss Becker was in the back room and did not see me. I hit her on the head with the mallet, but she turned and I thought she recognized me. I was afraid she would tell on me so I picked up the hatchet and killed her."

"After I had gone to the cash register and taken out the money I walked out of the front door just as I had come in."

Later the police placed a charge of first degree murder against the man giving his name as Harry Boomer. He lives in Akron now and formerly lived in Marietta.

One of the most difficult tasks in a newspaper office is getting the facts relative to births, deaths, and marriages in a community. Many people take it for granted that when a person dies, the editor is familiar with every detail of the life of the deceased and his activities, when as a fact he knows absolutely nothing about him, but he has to get the information from other sources, same as other people would have to do. It is the same with regard to marriages or other more or less important happenings in the community. In almost every case the editor has to dig up the particulars of the matter by himself and the readers of the paper with a meager and inaccurate account. The average editor of a country newspaper has something like a hundred and one things to do and think about in a week and the editors can hardly estimate how much he appreciates any effort they make in furnishing him the facts for news items.

He was an engineer at one of the pumping stations and in some manner got caught in the engine and killed. There was no one a witness to the accident and just how or when it occurred is not known.

F. L. Becker and family will eat their flapjacks this winter minus maple syrup, some one having entered their cellar a few evenings ago and appropriated three gallons of maple syrup besides a quantity of canned fruit. The syrup cans have the label of Frank Kenestrick on each and no doubt the thief can give Frank a good testimonial this coming spring on his pure production of maple syrup. The thief, besides helping himself to the molasses and canned goods, also picked a quantity of grapes and peaches.

Beginning with Wednesday evening, Oct. 7, and for ten consecutive weeks thereafter, Manager Deisler of Wonderland Theater, has arranged for a 4-reel special, the offering Wednesday evening being "The Conspiracy," or a $4,000,000 Downy. The outline of this four-reel drama is as follows: The daughter of a banker is intent on marrying a "tute," conceals a diabolic plan to rid herself of her rival. To what depths the conspirators descend to accomplish their fiendish purpose is graphically told. During the action of the play the spectator is carried through a succession of startling and surprising episodes, culminating in a gigantic fire scene in which the arch villainess is consumed by the flames. Beside the Wednesday evening specials there will also be specials on Saturday and Sunday evenings.

The Land of Broken Promises

A Stirring Story of the Mexican Revolution

By DANE COOLIDGE
Author of "The Fighting Post," "Hidden Waters," "The Tacticians," Etc.
Illustrations by Don J. Lavin

SYNOPSIS.

Bud Hooker and Phil DeLancey are forced, owing to a revolution in Mexico, to give up their mining claim and return to the United States. In the city of Ciudad Guzman they meet Henry Kruger, a wealthy miner, who makes him a proposition to return to Mexico to acquire title to a mine that Kruger had been blown up when he found he had been cheated out of the title by one Aragon. The mine is situated on a large tract of land which Kruger had bought from the vain and then allowed the land to revert to taxes. Hooker and DeLancey arrive at Fortuna, near the Pacific coast, where they are met by Aragon. They agree to return to Mexico to acquire the title for them and begin preliminary work. Aragon accuses them of jumping his claim. Hooker suggests that international entanglements prevent Aragon from acquiring a valid title. Phil, who has been paying attention to Gracia Aragon, decides to turn Mexican and acquire the title on his own. He is successful in the vicinity. Rich veins of gold struck and work on the mine is stopped until the title can be perfected. Phil is aided by Manuel del Rey, who is the rurales and squire of Gracia's. He is bound on promise to stay away from Gracia.

"I wonder where that dogged Indian went to," he said for the hundredth time, as the deep shadows gathered in the valley. "By Joe, Phil, if Amigo comes back I'm going to go ahead on that mine. I want to keep him around here, and we might as well get out some ore, if it's only for a grub-stake. Come on—what do you say? We'll open her up—there's nothing to hide now. Well, I'll do it myself, then—this setting around is getting on my nerves."

His far-seeing eyes, trained from his boyhood to search the hills for entice, scanned the tops of the ridges as he spoke; and while he sat and pondered they noted every rock.

Then at last he rose up slowly and stepped at that mine, he wanted to keep his arm, backing the distant point of blackness to come in, and soon from arroyo points in the canyon the Yaqui appeared, bearing a heavy Mauser rifle on his arm.

Across his broad breast hung the same smaller cartridge-belt, two more encircled his hips, and he walked with his head held high, like a warrior that he was.

Evidently his fight had led to the place where his arms had been hid, for he wore the regulation knife-bayonet at his hip and around his waist was the red ribbon of his people. But he was too polite to ask him about his journey. Since his coming the Yaqui had always maintained a certain mystery, and now, though his eyes were big with portent and he smiled at the jester's jest, he simply waved his hand to the south and east and murmured:

"Mechos revoltosos!"
"Seguro," answered Bud jokingly, "but have you killed any?"
"Not yet!" returned the Indian, and he turned to go.

"I wonder what that Indian is waiting around here for?" remarked Phil in English. "He must have his eye on somebody."

"Yeah, I bet," agreed Bud, regarding his savage friend with a speculative interest. "What do you think, Yaqui? Was he far from the mine? He tried to try before they rounded them up. I reckon he's looking for the man that had him deported."

"Tired, Amigo?" he inquired in Spanish, and Ignacio gratefully acknowledged that he was. "Then drink plenty coffee," went on Hooker. "Eat lots—tomorrow we go to work in the mine."

"Tomorrow," repeated the Indian, as if considering his other engagements; "good!" He nodded a smiling consent.

After a month and more of idleness Bud and Amigo performed prodigious labor in the cut, rolling down boulders, lifting them up on the tram and clearing away the face of the cliff. Their tram was ramshackle, their tracks the slender rails from old iron workings, and their tools little more than their hands, but by noon the last broken fragments were heaved aside and the shattered ledge revealed.

A low cry of wonder escaped the Yaqui as he gazed at the rich vein of ore, and as he saw the grim smile on Bud's rugged countenance he shook his white teeth in sympathy.

"How bueno!" he murmured. "How good!" gathering the precious fragments in his handkerchief.

When they crushed the pieces ore in a mortar and sifted it through the crack, and for the first time DeLancey dropped his air of preoccupation as he stared at the streak of pure gold. Like a yellow sun it lay along the edge of the last fine tailings, and when splashed with water he left it behind it gleamed like a jewel in the sun.

"By Joe, Bud!" he cried, "that's the real stuff, and it goes a dollar to the ton!"

"Sure thing!" assented Bud. "Let's get a lot of it and wash it as we go. Then we'll have some grubby money to get us back to the States."

"Well, so you!" answered Phil, and he turned toward him as he saw that he had been found up a piece of ore and was twisting the dirt in his hands.

"That's the real stuff, and it goes a dollar to the ton!"

town has been put under martial law, and the captain is in full charge. They quarreled over the favor of a lady, and now your friend is in jail."

"I didn't see him when I come by," observed Hooker.

"Ah, no—not in the care—in the courts—the guardhouses of the rurales!"

"Much obliged!" nodded Bud, and rode on through the town. The street of the Mexican quarter was filled with strange people hurrying to and fro; long packtrains loaded with casks and curious bundles came winding up from below, and a pair of rurales, looking fierce under their huge sombrero sturd guard by the curial door.

"Where is the captain?" demanded Hooker. After requesting him to hang the pistol-belt on his saddle-horn, a messenger showed him to a street.

Manuel del Rey was very busy with papers and orders, but as the American appeared in the doorway he rose and greeted him with a bow.

"Ah, good morning, senior," he said, with one swift glance to read his mood. "You are in search of your friend—"

"SI, senior," answered Hooker, but with none of the animosity which the captain had expected. "Where is he?"

"I regret very much," began the officer, speaking with military formality, "but he is unable to inform you, the Senior DeLancey has left Fortuna. Last night he did me the honor to enlist in my company of rurales—he is now on his way to the north to assist in guarding the railroad."

"He shot Bud, hardly able to believe his ears. But when the captain repeated it he no longer doubted his Spanish.

"But why?" he cried; "why did he join the rurales?"

"Ah, senior," shrugged Del Rey, "was he not a Mexican citizen? Very well, but he could be summoned for military service. But the circumstances were these. Your friend came yesterday to this town, where I am at present military commander, and made an unprovoked assault upon my person. For this, according to law, he should have been shot at sunrise. But, not wishing to offend an unpleasant man with the Americans now residing here, I offered him the alternative of military service. He is now enlisted as a rural for a term of five years."

"Five years!" exclaimed Hooker; then, instead of starting the expected rough-house upon which the rural guards were prepared to jump on his back—he simply threw down his hat and cursed. Not anyone in particular, but everything in general; and at the end of it he turned once more upon the watchful captain.

"Disgraceful, senior," he said, "this is the truth, is it?"

"SI, senior," returned Captain Del Rey. "But before leaving with his detachment your friend wrote this letter, which he requested me to deliver to you."

He offered with a flourish a sealed envelope, from which Bud extracted a short note.

"When you get this I shall be far away. I must have been mad, but it is too late now. Rather than see you I have enlisted as a rural. But I shall try to be of use to her. Take care of her. Bud for me, Phil!"

Bud read it through again and meditated ponderously. Then he folded it up and thrust it in his pocket.

"Such a gracious, senior captain, he said, smiling and turning upon his heel, and while all the Mexicans marvelled at the inscrutable ways of Americans, he mounted and rode away.

CHAPTER XVII.

There was a world of Mexicans in the plaza when Hooker rode down through the town. Never, it seemed to him, had he seen so many or liked them less.

To the handful of Americans who remained to man the mill and mine, they were easily a hundred to one; and though their eyes were wide with the interest of rebels, they had an evil way of staring at him which he did not relish.

Even at the hotel, where the Spanish-Mexican aristocracy was massed too deep, he sensed the same feeling of veiled hostility and wondered vaguely at the mystery. If Philip DeLancey, for making love to a girl, was drafted into the army, what would happen to him if these people should ever break loose? And did they have the courage to do their worst?

He lingered around the door for a while, hoping to meet Don Juan or some character who would tell him the news; then, disgusted with everything, he flung away and left them to themselves. Fortuna was not a white man's country—he could see that without a diagram—but at the same time he longed to hold his mine until he could hear from Phil.

Let the tides of insurrection come and go, let the red-fingers take the town and the federalists take it back again—at the end he would still be found at the Eagle Tail, unless Phil returned to him.

As for Aragon, whose fine Italian hand he perceived behind the sudden taking off of Phil, let him make what trades he would with the rurales and Manuel del Rey, even to the giving of his daughter's hand; but if, taking advantage of the unusual times, he dared to try to steal their mine, then there would be war to the knife.

It is a fine, comforting thing to be single-minded and of one purpose. All the rest of life is simplified and ordered this way. It is a man's nature to raise his hand and when to hold it back.

In his letter Phil had said nothing about her mine, but he was a Mexican citizen still, and his mine was his mine. Bud was his partner and the room—but for the love of God, tell me, where is Phil?"

"I don't know," answered Bud, trying to lower his big voice to a kinder softness; "he joined the rurales and was ordered north—that's all I know."

"Yes, you're sure; but haven't you heard from him?"

"She seemed to be all impatience to snatch his name and try with it, but Bud was in no such hurry. And so far was he from being a carp that he immediately raised his voice to its normal bass. It was all right for Phil and his kind to talk by signs and whispers, but that was not his style."

"Not since he went away," he said. "He left me a little note, then, say—"

"Saying what?" she demanded breathlessly.

"Well, saying that he had enlisted to keep from being executed, and—that's about all."

"And got a word about me?"

"Yes," admitted Bud; "he said he'd try to put up with it—on account of you—and—"

"What!" she exclaimed, taking him beseechingly by the coat.

"Well," stammered Hooker, shifting his feet and looking away, "he told me—"

"But I'm in trouble now!" She cried, to kinder take care of you—while he was gone."

"Ah!" she breathed, still standing close to him, "and will you do it?"

"I reckon," said Bud, "if we have any trouble."

"But I'm in trouble now!" she cried again. "I'm afraid!"

"Of him?" she answered, her voice breaking for the first time.

"Well," replied Hooker bluntly, "I've got nothing to do with that—I can't interfere in your love affairs—but if they're your war and they try to take the town, you can count on me."

"Oh, thank you," she said, bowing gratefully. "And do you expect a war?"

"Not with that bunch of hobnobbers!" returned Bud, waving a disparaging hand toward the noise of the shouting. At this she broke down and laughed. Evidently she was not so fearful of discovery after all.

"You forget me," she said, "that I am a Mexican!"

Then, as he failed to show any signs of contrition, she changed her mood again.

"But wait!" she ran on, her eyes flashing. "Perhaps we are not so eager to defend our government when we have a new one every year. But if the men who are gathering in Chihuahua invade our country, you will find that as Sonorans those men will fight to the death."

"You laugh because you do not understand. But who should we defend? Not the rurales fight side by side with the federales and rurales? Are they not the soldiers of Diaz, who have simply changed to another master?"

That Manuel del Rey was last year hunting down Madero's men in the hills; now he is fighting for Madero! And tomorrow? Who can say?"

She shrugged her shoulders scornfully, and Hooker perceived that she was in earnest in her dislike of the dashing captain, but prudence warned him to say nothing if he would escape being drawn into the quarrel.

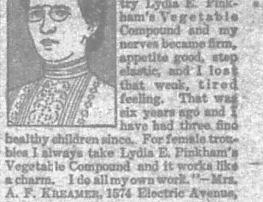

"Not!" she went on, after an expectant pause, "let the rurales pursue these bandits—they are hired for that purpose! But if Orozco and Sotelo join this insurrection, Bernardo Bravo, who seeks to capture our towns, then, Senior Americano, you will see real war and men, fighting to the death. Ah, you laugh again—you are a Texas and judge us Sonorans by the cowardly Chihuahuans—but it is the truth. And I, for one," she added solemnly, "would rather die than to have 'em. Do you know why? To see if you would defend me!"

She smiled, looking frankly into his eyes, and Bud blushed to the roots of his hair, but once again he held his peace.

Brought Home to Him. Gen. W. L. Alexander was discussing, at a dinner, the European war.

"This war," he said, "will affect even us. We must economize to weather it. And our economy must be general, too."

"We mustn't be like Baybo, whom a friend asked for a bottle of champagne on a roof garden:"

"Well, apropos of the war, old man, I did give your wife that lecture on economy!"

"Yes, I did," Baybo answered, and she went right out and bought me a safety razor."

Deserved the Punishment. Mrs. Scrapp-Histories show that married men live longer than single men.

General Joseph Joffre, Head of the French Army.

Three years ago, when the French nation demanded the appointment of a generalissimo who would have supreme command of the army in peace and in war, the man selected was General Joseph Joffre. He owes his position as head of the army not to political intrigue or favor, but to the unanimous votes of the foremost generals in France, comprised in what is known as the superior council of war.

Hailing from the Pyrenees, General Joffre, who is now sixty-one, is a graduate of the Ecole Polytechnique, Paris. At the age of eighteen he commanded a battery of artillery throughout the siege of Paris. After that war he took part in the Formosa and Tonkin campaigns and later was engaged in West Africa, directing the construction of railroads there. He headed the relief column that went to the assistance of the Boer expedition in Africa. General Joffre also had a share in the conquest of Madagascar, of which he was governor for three years. Then he became commander of the Second army corps and just before his appointment as generalissimo of the army was director general of military education, a post for which he was particularly qualified as one of the best mathematicians of the army. It is alleged that no French commander stands higher in the estimation of the war departments at Berlin and St. Petersburg.

King of the Belgians.

Albert, king of the Belgians, who, with his subjects, has so heroically fought the legions of the Kaiser, is of the ancient Walloon race, which in these past has again and again shown tenacious and indomitable courage in the face of invaders of their land. The splendid stand made by the Belgians against the "greatest war machine of modern times" adds new luster to a fame renowned in the annals of war fare.

By his subjects Albert has been called "the handsomest king in Europe," and now they may add the ap pellation "the bravest" if he is to be judged by the work of his countrymen. Tall, like his Uncle Leopold, whom he succeeded, very erect, with the carriage of a soldier, he has the military bearing, the brow of a student and the frank manner of a man of the world.

King Albert was born in 1875 and succeeded to the throne in 1909. He is the younger son of the Count of Flanders, brother of the late King Leopold, and never expected to be king in his early boyhood. His cousin, the Crown Prince Leopold, his father, his elder brother, Prince Baldwin, all stood between him and the throne. He was quietly educated, but the three died, and he became heir presumptive in 1907. His wife, Queen Elisabeth, is the daughter of Duke Theodor of Ba-

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Handy Gridiron Rack For Poultry.

The roasting rack for fowls herewith illustrated, made in the form of a gridiron, is a convenient article for the kitchen. The rack is made to fit any ordinary roasting pan and occupies little space, giving adequate room for ample roasting. Strips of the metal, which cover the holes cut in the sheet, are bent in different position to form supports.

Viennese Tomatoes.

For this is required one pound of medium sized firm tomatoes, half a pound of sausages, a little parsley and a pound of hot buttered toast for each tomato. Cut the tomatoes round in the halves, skin the sausages and divide the meat into as many even size portions as there are tomatoes. Slice these pieces into flat round cakes to fit the tomatoes. Fry these slowly until brown on each side and cooked through. When fried lay each sausage cake on half a cut tomato, pressing the cake out a little if it does not match in size. Put a second half tomato on the top of the sausage, place the tomatoes on a baking tin and bake until the tomatoes are hot and tender, but not broken. Put a tomato on each round of toast, sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve at once.

Scallops of Tomatoes and Potatoes.

Scrape a pint of peeled and chopped tomatoes with salt, pepper and onion juice to suit the taste and add enough potatoes to make a cupful when chopped fine. Butter a baking dish and sprinkle with breadcrumbs and put in half of the tomatoes, then a layer of soft crackers buttered and broken in crumbly bits. Cover the crackers with two heaping tablespoonfuls of grated American cheese, then add the remainder of the tomatoes, more cracker crumbs and bits of butter and place in a hot oven. Bake twenty minutes. Serve at once.

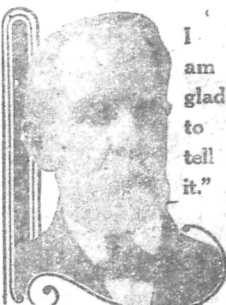

Things to Remember.

If almonds are put into cold water and allowed to come just to the boiling point they blanch easily, but they should be parboiled at once into cold water so they will retain their color. Any cracks or cuttings in the sole should have the under crust baked first. A mixture of olive oil and ink, equal parts, will remove the rusty appearance from suede shoes or slippers. Fat on garments may be removed by applying yolks of eggs and glycerine in equal quantities.

How to Use Old Velvet.

Velvet which has served its purpose as a dress or blouse should be preserved and made into polishing cloths. It is almost as good as a shamrock leather, and not only can it be used for obtaining a fine polish on waxed and mahogany furniture, but also as a means of brightening silver and plated goods. When soiled the velvet may be successfully cleaned by washing it in soapy lather.

"I am now seventy years old, and am in good health, due to observing having Peruna as my command. Five Prevention Day.

Governor Cox, in accordance with the custom of recent years, in this and many of our sister states, has designated Friday, October 9th, as Fire Prevention Day.

This action has been induced by the large fire waste prevalent in our state and throughout the country, amounting last year in Ohio alone to almost $9,000,000.

It has been frequently pointed out that largely more than fifty per cent of all our fires are easily preventable. This fact alone would be sufficient to justify the Governor in his action and, indeed, more than justifies all public authority having to do with the question of fire waste, in doing the utmost to get and keep the facts before our citizens. If fires are to be prevented, however, it devolves upon the individual occupant to take the necessary steps. Fire departments can put out fires, and fire marshals can generally determine how they have started, but the individual citizen is the one who has it chiefly within his power to prevent them.

In the year 1913, there were 5,340 fires reported to this department. Of this number 2,448, or well along toward one half, occurred in dwellings. Defective flues caused 443 and sparks from chimneys, 347, while incendiarianism was responsible for only 43. Thus, we find that statistics bear out the statement that a very large proportion of all fires are preventable. Had these flues been inspected and repaired, a large amount of property would have been saved instead of being reduced to a heap of ashes.

Does Your Soil Need Lime?

One of the most important problems for the farmers of Ohio to determine is whether or not the soil of their particular farm needs lime. Most of the soil in the eastern half of the state does need lime unless it has received a dressing of this material within the past four years. The reason that soil needs lime is that the soil is sour and most crops do not thrive in a sour soil. All sections where farmers are experiencing greater difficulty each year in securing a satisfactory stand of clover will probably be greatly benefited by the liberal use of lime. The clover may come up and apparently start well, but when the grain crop is removed the clover begins to die. When the clover is cut the following season large patches in the clover field may contain mostly weeds and often mostly sorrel. Sorrel seems to thrive on such soil and needs lime to enable it to produce even fair crops. Farmers can determine whether the soil in any particular field needs lime or not by two methods. 1. Scrape away some of the surface soil and press a piece of blue litmus paper against the moist earth with the back of the hand. 2. If the soil is acid, or sour, and needs liming the paper will turn red in from ten to twenty minutes. Care must be taken not to allow the blue litmus paper to come in contact with anything sour before being placed in the soil. 3. Rub the acid from the soil will change the blue to red. This change will be noticed where the fingers touch the corners of the paper. Litmus paper can be secured at almost any drug store. 2. The best test is to use lime on a strip of land or on several strips of land across a field needed to clover. If the clover grows better on the limed strips, it will pay to lime the entire field. This latter test is especially reliable if manure and fertilizers have been used on the field.

Five Prevention Day.

Governor Cox, in accordance with the custom of recent years, in this and many of our sister states, has designated Friday, October 9th, as Fire Prevention Day.

This action has been induced by the large fire waste prevalent in our state and throughout the country, amounting last year in Ohio alone to almost $9,000,000.

It has been frequently pointed out that largely more than fifty per cent of all our fires are easily preventable. This fact alone would be sufficient to justify the Governor in his action and, indeed, more than justifies all public authority having to do with the question of fire waste, in doing the utmost to get and keep the facts before our citizens. If fires are to be prevented, however, it devolves upon the individual occupant to take the necessary steps. Fire departments can put out fires, and fire marshals can generally determine how they have started, but the individual citizen is the one who has it chiefly within his power to prevent them.

In the year 1913, there were 5,340 fires reported to this department. Of this number 2,448, or well along toward one half, occurred in dwellings. Defective flues caused 443 and sparks from chimneys, 347, while incendiarianism was responsible for only 43. Thus, we find that statistics bear out the statement that a very large proportion of all fires are preventable. Had these flues been inspected and repaired, a large amount of property would have been saved instead of being reduced to a heap of ashes.
