What the Farmer Did.

A city man recently visited his "country cousin". The man from the city, wishing to explain the joys of metropolitan life, said: "We have certainly been having fun the past few days. Thursday we sutord to the country club and golfed until dark, then trollied back to town an danced until morning." The country cousin was not to be stumped in the least, so began telling of the pleasures of the simple life: "We have had pretty good limes here too. One day we buggled out to Uncle Ned's and went out to the back jot, where we baseballed all that afternoon. In the evening we snead up to the attic where we poker d until morning." A study cld farmer who was listening, not to be outdone, took up the conversation at this point and hand. "It was having a smaller a hand." Notice.

An attempt by the Russians to come to the assistance of their threatened armies in the North from southern Poland was folled by the activity of the Austro-Hungarian and German troops in the district southwest of Piotrkow.
"No especial reports have been received from the region to the east of the plain of the Mazur lakes."

German Victory Remarkable.

London, Dec. 7.—After a long battle, fought with the greatest stubborness, the Germans have succeeded in occupying Lodx, Poland, which is aninortified city.

This success of the Germans, large-ty because of what preceded it, is considered by military experts a realiy remarkable achievement. Less than a fortnight ago the army to which this victory has fallen was surrounded by Russians adefending Lodx.

Another official statement from the German headquarters given out earlier yesterday was as follows:

"The report given in the Russian statement of November 29 that the German states in the vicinity of Czenstochowa failed with many casualties to the German sis false, the truth being quite the contrary. The attack of the Seventeenth Russian corps, which approached to within sisty-five yards of our lines, was repulsed, the Russians taking a position farther back and leaving a large number of killed and wounded."

issued tonight:

"On the left bank of the Vistula on December 3 there was some flerce fighting on the front of Glowno-Lowict and also on the western roads toward Loda and Plotrkow.

Newspapers here are beginning to print numerous fragmentary accounts derived from wounded soldiers concerning recent fighting in Poland. The general impression from all sides is that the fighting between the Vistula and Warther rivers has been incomparably more severe than anything experienced before during this war on any front.

The character of the fighting also compelled the Germans to rely on their manhood instead of their machinery, yet they still persist in their massed formations against rifle, maxim or bayonet. Their losses have been appalling. Experienced experts estimate that the Germans have lost two-thirds of their army in Poland.

London, Dec. 6.—The allies continue to push forward in Flanders and in northern France, but the Germans explain that they are giving ground for tactical and strategical reasons. The advance, as far as Flanders is concerned, seems to have been checked on the outskirts of Langemarck.

Seemingly more important is the uncofficial statement that the French have interfered with the German communications between Metz and the Woevre district in France, for here as elsewhere, command of the roads is of the greatest importance to the armiles.

Use and Conservation.

Fortunately, two great measures, finely conceived, the one to unlock, with proper safeguards, the resources of the national domain, the other to encourage the use of the havigable water outside that domain for the generation of power, have already passed the house of representatives and are ready for immediate consideration and action by the senate. With the deepest earnestness I urge their prompt passage.

And there is another great piece of legislation which awaits and should receive the sanction of the senate:

I mean the bill which gives a larger measure of self-government to the people of the Philippines, I cannot believe that the senate will let this great measure of constructive-justice await the action of another congress. Its passage would nobly crown the record of these two years of memorable labor.

An important Duty.

of these two years of memorable labor.

An important Duty.

But I thin't that you will agree with me that this does not complete the toil of our duty. How are we to carry our goods to the empty markets of which I have spoken if we have not the certain and constant means of transportation upon which all profit able and useful commerce depends?
And how are we to get the ships if we wait for the trade to develop without them?

The routes of trade must be actually opened—by many ships and resular sallings and moderate charges—before streams of merchandies will flow freely and profitably through them.

Must Open Gatss of Trade.

Hence the pending shipping bill, streams of merchandise will flow freely and profutably through them.

Must Open Gates of Trade.

Hence the pending shipping bill, discussed at the last session, but as yet passed '', heither home. In may fludgment such legislation is imperatively needed and can not wisely be postponed. The government must open these gates of trade, and open them wide; open them before it is altogether profitable to open them, or altogether reasonable to ask private capital to open them at a venture.
It is not a question of the government monopolising the field. It should take action to make it certain that transportation at reasonable rates will be promptly provided, even where the carriage is not at first profitable; and then, when the carriage has become sufficiently profitable to attract and oneage private capital, and engage it in abundance, the government ought to withdraw. I very carrestly hope that the congress will be of this opinion, and that both houses will adopt this exceedingly important bill.

The great subject of rural credits still remains to be dealt with, and it is a matter of deep repert that the difficulties of the subject have seemed to render it impossible to complete a bill for passage at this session. But it can not be perfected yet, and therefore there are no other constructive measures the necessity for which I will at this time call your attention to but I would be negligent of a very manifest duty were I not to call the attention of the senate to the fact that the proposed convention for safety, at sea awaits its confirmation and that the limit fixed in the convention itself for its acceptance is the last day of the present month.

I should like in this address to review the my able record and try to make advently assessment of it; but no doubt we stand too near the work that has been done and are ourselves too much part of historians twisted it. Moreover, our thoughly are saw more of the future than of the pass.

Whis we have worked at our tasks of peace the circumstances of the whole age have been attered by war. Whist we have been attered by war. Whist we have been attered by war. Whist we have done for our own land and our own people we did with the best that was in us, whether of character or of intelligence, with soler entitusians and a confidence in the principles upon which we were acting while meatabled us at every step of the difficult undertaking; but it is done. It has passed from our hands. It is now an established part of the legislation of the country. Its useful-ness, its effects, will disclose themselves in atpartence. What chiefly strikes us pow, as we look about us during these doning days of a year which will be forever memorable in the history of the world, is that we face new tasks, have been facing them these six mouths, must face them in the menths to come—face them without parties feeling, like men who have foregolen everything but a common day and the fact that we are representatives of a great people whose thought is not of us but of what America over to herself and to all mankind in such circumstances has the supplementations.

Europa Will Need Our Help.

War has intercuped the means of trade not inty but also the processes of production. In Europe it is destroying men aid resources wholesale and upon a saile supprecedented and appailing. There is reason to fear that the time is usen; if it be not already at hand, when several of the countries of Europe will find it difficult to do for their people wint they have intherno bean slways easily able to do, many entential and fundamental things. At any rate they will need our help and our manifold services as they have meet nowed them before; and we should be ready, more fit and ready that we have over been.

It is of causal consequence that the Charding of Our Coasts.

There is another matter of which manifold services and ready, more fit and have ever been.

It is another matter of which manifold services and seem a very small thing. It affects only a single item of appropriation. But many burnan lives and many manumerable articles of and commerce can now it part of what they for an deagerly look to us it all but empty man and the same of an another matter of making adequate provision for the survey and charting of our coasts.

It is immediately pressing and extra the consection with the immense coast line of Alaska. This is a imatter which, as I have said, seems small, but is in reality very great. Its importance has only to be looked into the survey and that the form is only to be looked into the survey and that they are we seem that the comment of the words upon two topics; much discussed out of doors, upon which it is highly important that our judgments and means. Let us remind ourselves, therefore, of the only thing we can do or will do. We must depend in every time of national peril, in the future as in the past, not upon a standing army, nor yet upon a reserve army, but upon a citizenry trained an la accustomed to arms. It will be right enough, right American policy, based upon our accustomed principles and practices, to provide a system by which every citizen who will volunteer for the training may be made familiar with the size of modern arms, the rudiments of drill and maneuver, and the maintenance and sanitation of camps. We should encourage such training, and make it a means of discipline which our young men will learn to value. It is right that we should provide it not only, but that we should make it as attractive as possible, and so induce our young men to undergo it at such times as they can command value. It is right that we should provide it not only, but that we should make it as attractive as possible, and so induce our young men to undergo it at such times as they can command a little freedom and can seek the physical development they need, for more health's sake, if for nothing more. Every means by which such things can be stimulated is legitimate, and such a method smacks of true American ideas. It is a right, too, that the National Guard of the states should be developed and strengthened by every means which is not inconsistent with our obligations to our own people or with the established policy of our government. And this, also, not because the time or occasion specially calls for such measures, but because it should be our constant policy to make these provisions for our national peace and safety.

More than this carries with it a reversal of the whole history and character of our polity. More than this, proposed at this time, permit me to say, would mean merely that we had been thrown of our balance by a war with which the have nothing to do, whose causien cannot touch us, whose very existence affords us opportunities of friendship and disinterested service which should make us ashamed of any thought of hostility or fearful preparation for trouble.

Ships Our Natural Bulwarks.

If cannot be discussed without first answering some very searching questions.

It is said in some quarters that we are not prepared for war. What is meant by being prepared? It is meant that we are not ready upon brief notice to put a nation in the field, a nation of men trained to arms? Of course we are not ready to do that; and we shall never be in time of pieses so long as we retain our present political principles and institutions. And what is it that it is suggested we should be prepared to do? To defend ourselves against attack? We have always found means to do that, and shall find them whenever it is necessary without calling our people away from their necessary tasks to render compulsory military service in times of peace.

Allow me to speak with great plainness and directness upon this great matter and to avow my convictions with deep carnestness. I have tried to know what America is, what her people think, what they are, what they most cherish, and hold dear. I hope that some of their finer passions are in my own heaft, some of the great conceptions and desires which gave birth to this government and which have made the voice of this people a voice of peace and hope and liberty among the peoples of the world, and that, speaking my own thoughts, I shall, at least in part. Speak theirs also, however, faintly and inadequately, upon this vital matter.

Fear No Nation. Ships Our Natural Bulwarks.

A powerful navy we have always regarded as our proper and natural means of defense; and it has always been of defense; and it has always been of defense that we have thought, never of aggression or of conquest. But who shall tell us now what sort of navy to build? We shall take leave to be strong upon the seas, in the future as in the past; and there will be no thought of offense or of provocation in that. Our ships are our natural bulwarks. When will the experts tell us just what kind we should construct—and when will they be right for ten years together. If the relative efficiency of craft for different kinds and uses continues to change as we have seen it change under our verreyes in these last few months."

under our ver- eyes in these last few months?

But I turn away from the subject. It is not new. There is no new need to discuss it. We shall not alter our attitude toward it because some amongst us are nervous and excited. We shall easily and sensibly agree such a policy of defense. The question has not changed its aspects because the times are not normal. Our policy will not be for an occasion. It will be conceived as a permanent and settled thing, which we will pursue at all seasons, without haste and after a fashion perfectly consistent with the peace of the world, the abiding friendship of states, and the unhampered freedom of all with whom we deal. Let there be no misconception. The jountry has been misinformed. We have not been negligent of national defense we are not unmindful or the great responsibility resting upon us. We shall learn and profit by the lesson of every experience and every new circumstances; and what is needed will be adequately done.

Great Duties of Peace.

rear No Nation.

We are at peace with all the world. No one who speaks counsel based on fact or drawn from a just and candid interpretation of realities can say that there is reason for fear that from any quarter our independence or the integrity of our territory is threatened. Dread of the power of any other nation we are incapable of. We are not jealous of rivalry in the fields of commerce or of any other peaceful achievement. We mean to live our lives as we will; but we mean to live our lives as we will; but we mean to live our lives as we will; but we mean to live our lives as we will; but we mean to live our lives as we will; but we mean to live our lives as true friend-to all the nations of the world, Mecause we threaten none covet the possessions of none, desired overthrow of none. Our friendship can be accepted and is accepted without reservation, because it is offered in a spirit and for a purpose which no one need ever question or suspect. Therein lies our greatness. We are the champions of peace and of concord. And we should be very jealous of this distinction which we have sought to earn. Just now we have sought to earn. In own the configuration peace in the world and reconcillation and a healing settlement of man a matter that has cooled and interrupted the friendship of nations. This is the time above all others when we should with and resolve to keep our strength by self-possession, our influence by preserving our ancient principles of action.

Ready for Defense. Great Duties of Peace.

I close, as I began, by reminding you of the great tasks and duties of peace which challenge our best powers and invite us to build what will last, the tasks to which we can address ourselves now and at all times the free-hearted rest and with all the finest gifts of constructive wisdom we possess. To develop our life and our resources; to supply our own people, and the people of the world as their need arises, from the abundant plenty of our fields and our marts of trade; to enrich the commerce of our own states and of the world with the products of our mines, our farms, and our factories, with the creatings of cur thought and the fruits of our characteries, with the creatings of cur chought and the fruits of our characteries, with the creatings of cur thought and our enthusiasm steadily, now Great Duties of Peace ter-this is whn. will hold our atten-tion and our enthusiasm reteadly, now and in the years to come, as we strive to show in our life as a nation what liberty and the inspirations of an emancipated spirit may do for men and for societies, for individuals, for states, and for mankind.

cultural commission are busy telling farmers how to manage their farms and housewives how to conduct their homes.

Each county has five institutes and each institute has three lecturers. They are specialists and their talks cover a wide range of subjects. They endeavor to impress upon their hear-ers that if the highest efficiency is to be obtained on the farm and in the home, scientific methods must be used. Among the lecturers are a number of women speakers, experts in their respective lines, and they discuss the subject directly touching home welfare. They point out it is just as imperative fait scentific principles be employed in the raising of babies as in crop production.

A farmers' institute is a hatful of hints and helps. It adds to crop yield. Increases reward of labor and helps in the commanuity to get acquainted with itself. The institute is growing in favor, and every season the attendance at these gatherings is larger and there is a correspondingly deeper interest shown in them. The boys and girls who engage in corn raising and domestic science contests are given a chance at these meetings. They are often invited to give hort talks on what they have accomplished. After the regular lecturers get through, there are round table discussions, in which everybody who wishes takes part.

The democratic executive committee of Richland county held a meeting at the court house at Mansfield Saturday asternoon, for the purpose of taking some action in regard to the selection of a postmaster at Mansfield. The committee passed a resolution asking that the selection as a postmaster for Mansfield, be left to the Democratic voters of that city. Two special trains passed through Mansfield on the Pennsylvania lines that carried most valuable cargoes. There were 26 cars in the first train and 27 cars in the second train, currying a total of over a thousand horses. The animals were being shipped from Chicago to Newport News, Va., and will be sent across the water to the warring countries to be used for army purposes.

One of the most enjoyable affairs of the season was the surprise party which was given by Mr. Chas. Miller in honor of Mrs. Miller's birthday Friday. Dec. 4th. The invited upus the west were members of The New Idea Club and their husbands. The guests were requested to meet at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Brubaker at 3:30 when all had assembled the host announced that all was rendy for the "surprise", so the grand march was led to the home of the "Miller's" where the birthday lady was showered with congratulations and good wishes. The evening was delightfully spent in dacking to the strains of Victrola music, and indulging in 8 five course supper, which seemed to put all present in a happy mood during the feast. Mr. Sykes in a few well chosen words presented Mrs., Miller in behalf of the gentlemen present with a basket of choice cut flowers, after which Mrs. Waite made her witty succeh and presented the hostess with a Crystal Rock fern dish as a token of love and esteem from her club members. The evening will long be remembered by those who were fortunate enough to be there and all pronounced Mr. and Mrs. Miller charming host and hostess.

home on the frontier between a and Grays Marts Galland and , entertaining Coises! Wester-Grays, see Captain Lanstron, Igenice officer of the Browns, a fall in his seroplane. Ten Westerling, nominal vice but of staff, reinforces South Lattee on war.

Rather Idly, now, he drew a pad to-ward him and, taking up a penell, anade the figures seventeen and twen-ty-neven. Then he made the figures sthirty-two and forty-two. He black-sned them with repeated tracings as he mused. This done, he put seven-heen under twenty-seven and thirty-two under forty-two. He made the subtraction and studied the two tens. A swing door opened softly and his uncountre clerk respected with a soft tread.

"Some papers for your signature, sir," he said as he silpped them on the blotter in front of Westerling. "And the 132d—no order about that, sir?"

None. It remains!" Westerling re-

That is a good deal. But it's more to a woman han to a simin-yea, a lot more to a woman than to a man!"

The clark was right in thinking Westerling preoccupied; but it was not with the list of arrivals at a hotel, had caught his eye in the morning paper. A mote to her had brought an answer, saying that her time was limited, but she would be glad to have him cell at five that afternoon.

Westerling realized that be question of marriage as a social requirement might arise when he should become of marriage as a social requirement might arise when he should become of marriage as a social requirement might arise when he should become of marriage as a social requirement might arise when he should become of marriage as a social requirement might arise when he should become of marriage as a social requirement might arise when he should become of marriage as a social requirement might arise when he should become of marriage as a social requirement might arise when he was the most favored man in the army too much to think of marriage.

Yet he had heard its p in the tone of her prophecy with step in his promotion; and while her people whom he had known it were the vaguest shadows of ties, her picture was as deficit as when she said. As his car came to the park his eyes Highted at sight of one of the dividends—one feature of urban life that ever gave him a thrill. A battalion of the 128th, which he had ordered that aftermoon to the very garrison at South La Tir that he had once commanded, was marching through the main avenue. Youths all, of twenty-one or two, they were in a muddy-garysish uniform which was the color of the plain as seen from the versands of the Galland house. Where these came from were other boys growing up to take their places. The mothers of the nation were doing their duty. All the land was a breeding-ground for the dividends of Hedworth Westerling.

At the far side of the park he saw another kind of dividend—another group of marching men. These were not in uniform. They were the unemployed. Many were middle-aged, with worn, tired faces. Beside the fiss of the country at the head of the procession was that of universal radicallism. And his car had to stop to let them plass. For an instant the indignation of military autocracy rose strong with him at sight of the national colors in such company. But he noted how naturally the men kept step; the solidarity of their movement. The stamp of their army service in youth could not be easily removed. He realized the advantage of beading an army in which defense was not dependent on a mixture of regulars and volunteers, but on universal conscription that brought ever able-bodied man under discipline.

then had any significance. Yes, the old human impulses would predominate and the only enemy would be on the other side of the fronter. They would be pawns of his will—the will that Marta Galland had aid would make him chief of staf.

Wasn't war the real cure for the general unrest! Wasn't the nation growing stale from the long peace? until he recalled it. She had heard of his rise and she had heard, too, things about him which a girl of twenty-seven can better understand than a girl of seventeen. His reason for wanting to seventeen. His reason for wanting to see her he had said was to "renew an old acquaintance." He could have little, interest in him was that he was head of the Gray army. His work had intimate relation to that which the Maria of twenty-seven, a Marta with a mission, had set for herself.

Miss Galland would be down directly.
When she appeared she crossed the room with a flowing, spontaneous vitality that appealed to him as something familiar,
"Ten years, lan't it?" she exclaimed as she seated herself on the other side of the teal-table. "And, let me see, you took two lumps, if I remember?"
"None now," he said.
"Do you find it fattening?" she saked,

"None now," he said.

"Do you find it fattening?" she saixed.

He recognized the mischievous sparkle of the eyes, the quirrical turn of the lips, which was her asset in keeping any question from being perscanl. Neverthiess, he flushed slightly. "A change of taste," he avered.

"Since you've become such a great man?" she hanarded. "Is that too strong?" :This referred to the tea.

"No, just right!" he nodded.

He was studying her with the polite, velled scrutiny of a man of the world. A materialist, he would look a woman over as he would a soldier when he had been a major-general making an inspection. She was slim, supple; he liked slim, supple women. Yes, she was twenty-seven, with the vivacity of seventeen retained, though she were on the edge of being an old maid according to the conventional notione. Necks and shoulders that happened to be at his side at dinner, he had found, when they were really beautiful, were not average to his giance of appreciative and discriminating admiration of physical jeharm. But he saw her shrug slightly and caught a spark from her oyes that made him vaguely conscious of an offense to her sensibilities, and he was wholly conscious that the suggestion, bringing his faculties up sharply, had the pleasure of a novel sensation.

might curtail Westerling's actual power.

"Yes, yes!" breathed Marta softly, arching her eyebrows a trife as she would when looking all around and through a thing or when she found any one beating about the bush. The little frown disappeared and she smilled understardingly. "You know I'm not a perfect goose!" she added. "Had you been made chief of staff in name, too, all the old generals would have been in the stilks and the young generals jealous," she continued. "The one way that you might have the power to exercise was by proxy."

thrilled at seeing a picture of him self, as he wanted to see himself, done in bold strokes. It assured him that not only had his own mind grown be yound what were to him the narrow as sociations of his old La Tri day, we that hers had grown, too, "And you—what have you been doing all these years?" he asked.

"Living the lifte of a woman or a country estate," she replied. "Since you made a rule that no Gray officers a little louseler, having only the Brown officers to ten. Did you really find it so bad for discipline in your own cases" she concluded with playful as loadematry.

"One cannot consider individual cases in a general order," he explained. "And, remember, the Browns made the ruling first. You see, every year means a tightening—yee, a tightening—see arms and armies grow more complicated and the mistraining of staff secrets more important. And you have been all the time at La Tir, truly." he asked, changing the subject. He was convinced that she had acquired something that could not be gained on the outsikirs of a provincial town.

"No. I have traveled. I have been quite around the world."

"You have!" This explained much. "How lenvy you! That is a privilege I shall not know until I am superannuated." While he should remain chief of staff he must be literally a prisoner in his own country.

"Yes, I should say it was splendid! Splendid—ryes, indeed!" Snappy little nods of the head being unequal to expressing the for of the memories that her exclamation evoked, she clasped her hands over her knees and swung back and forth in the ecctasy of saventeen. "Splendid! enchanting, enlightening, stupendous and wickedly expensive! Another girl and I did it all on our own."

"O-oh!" he exclaimed.

"Oh, oh, oh!" she repeated after him. "Ch, when leases!"

"Spiendid, enchanting, emlightening, stupendous and wickedly expensive! Another girl and I did it all on our own."

"O-oh!" he exclaimed.
"Oh, oh, oh!" she repeated after him." Oh, what, please!"
"Oh, nothing!" he said. It was quite comprehensible to him how well equipped she was to take care of herself on such an adventure.
"Precisely, when you come to think it over!" she concluded.
"What interested you most? What was the big lesson of all your journeying?" he asked, ready to play the listener.
"Being born and bred on a frontier, of an ancestry that was born and bred on a frontier, why frontiers interested me most." she said. "I collected impressions of frontiers as some people collect pictures. I found them all alike—stupid, just stupid! Oh, so stupid!" Her frown grew with the repetition of the word; her fingers closed in on her pain in veration. He recollected that he had seen her like this two or three times at La Tir, when he had found the outbursts most entertaining. He imagined that the small fast pressed against the table edge could deliyer a stinging blow. "An stupid as it is for neighbors to quarrel! It put me at war with all frontiers."
"Apparently," he said.
She withdrow her fist from the table, dropped the opened hand over the other on her knoe, her body relaxing, her wrath passing into a kind of shamefacedness and then into a soft, prolonged laugh.
"I laugh at myself, at my own inconsistency," she said. "I was wariffee

"I haugh at myself, at my own inconsistency," she said. "I was warther against war. At all events, if there is anything to make a teacher of peace lose her temper if is the folly of frontiers."

"Yes?" he exclaimed. "Yes? Go on!" And he thought: "I'm really having a very good time."

"You see, I came home from my tour with an idea—an idea for a life occupation just as engrossing as yours, she went on, "and opposed to yours, as we there was no use of working with the grown-up folks. Plan For Safety.

After a conference lasting several hours the State industrial Commission succeeded in harmonizing the views of the oil and gas interests on the one side and the coal operators on the other, so that there will be co-peration in a plan for safety. The result noted was obtained through the special vortices board named by the commission to co-perate with John M. Roan, lead, of the coal mining department. Dissatisfaction was noted by oil and gas men with the commission's order made under its broad grant of power which compelied the charting of all oil well locations in coal fields. The order required the consent of the commission before drilling might be begun within any coal producing county. The order was looked upon as too drastic by the gas and oil interests, but after conference they accepted its full and made two important addi-

States Represented.

Twelve states other than Ohio have engaged space for representation at the industrial Safety Exhibition to be held in Memorial Hall January 13 to 15 under direction of the State Industrial Commission. New York state will be represented by twelve of its largest manufacturing concerns, Illinois by sine and Pennsylvania by four. Other states are Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Colyrado, Missouri, Michigan, New Jerrey, Wisconsiu and West Virginia. Safety appliances on railroads will be shown by several railroad companies. The Burson of Safety and Efficiency of the Alcohol League of the United States will demonstrate the relation of alcohol to accidents.

More Stamps Needed

Proud parents of bouncing bables desiring copies of birth certificates from the State Registrar of Vital Statistics of the City Board of Health are one class coming under the wing of the new revenue tax law. In the future the office issuing the certificate must attach a Been's revenue stamp, to be paid for by the person receiving the document. B. E. Williamson, Collector of Internal Revenue, made this ruling to Dr. A. O. Holland, State Registrar, and John Kessan, Servetary of the Municipal Health Roard.

Now Up to the Legislature.

therity to designate a means for doing either.

This is the gist of the opinion rendered by Justice Okcar W. Newman of the supreme court in the case brought by dry workers to compel the secretary of state to order a recount of the vote cast on the home rule and prohibition amendments in the four most populous counties.

Until the legislature enacts laws specifying who shall conduct a recount or context of an election on constitutional proposals and provides the manner of procedure, there can be no recount or context on such an election, the opinion holds. The general clection laws make specific provision for contexting an election of candidates and conducting a recount in such elections, but they are sitent as to the means of conducting constitutional proposal election contests.

To Examine Water.

The proposed examination of the water supplies of Columbus, to be made by the state geological survey, was indorsed at a meeting of the manufacturers' committee of the Chamber of Commerce, and Manager Kelley of industrial bureau, was instructed to cooperate with Prof. C. W. Foolk of Ohio State university, in facilitating the work in Columbus.

The committee was told that thousands of dollars have been wasted in Columbus in sinking wells, the water of which has been totally until for use. Much money is lost each year, foo, by the greater fuel and repair bills that come from not treating the water properly.

Ohio's New Justices.

Inauguration of three Supreme Court Justices was arranged for at a meeting of those elected to the new stations. Justice Oscar W. Newman will swear in Chief Justice Hugh L. Nichols, chosen, for a six-year term. Chief Justice Nichols in turn will administer the eath to Judge Thomas A. Jones and Edward S. Matthias, who were chosen in the November election.
Judges Jones and Matthias succeed
Judges J. Foster Wilkin and John A.
Shauck. The eeremony will take place
December 31.

May issue Calla.

Gov. Cox is expected to issue a proclamation urging that the people of Ohio take-action on Brand Whitlock's suggestion made to the governor by cable from Brussels that a relief ship be fitted out for the suffering Belgians. Many loffers of assistance have come into the executive offices since Mr. Whitlock, former mayor of Toledo and now Minister to Belgium, urged the governor to ask the people of this state to come to the aid of those made homeless by the war in Europe.

Right to Change Rules.

Unanimity marked the session of the commission named by Gov. James M. Cox to recommend to the General Assembly augrestions for shortening and simplifying judicial procedure and reducing the cost of litigation. Two leading proposals were adopted for transmission to the lawmaking power. The commission believes they will go far toward eliminating the lame features of the code of civil procedure.

Pardon is Granted.

In order that he might die a free man, Governor Cox granted a pardon to Pasquale Enzo, 174 East Russell street, who is serving an indeterminate term for arson. He now is in the Columbus State hospital, where he was transferred in September, after being adjudged insane.

The case is lined with thin pink satin and interlined with a sheet of cotton batting, in which sachet powder is sprinkled. The edges are finished with button-hole etitching in pink silk. A work bag is made of coarse brown linen cut into the shape shown in the picture. It is 14 inches long and 10½ wide. Two pinces are joined at the edges which are scalloped and finished with button-hole stitching in green silk floss.

SASHES AND GIRDLES AMONG BEST OF GIFTS

NO ONE need remain long in doubt as to what to get for a maid or matron in this day of the vogue of girdles and sankes. A girdless goom is hardly to be found and whether for the street, the home, or evening wear, ribbons are used to form the circlet that enfolds the waist or terminates the bodice. There are any number of styles in girdles and sashes to choose among made of every variety of weave known to the loom and every color and combination of colors that has been thought out. A girdle of wide plaid ribbon, fin-laked with a sprightly bow of two loops and two ends, is shown in the picture. It makes a Christmas gift that will delight every woman who likes to keep abreast with the mode. The girdle portion is boned to spread the ribbon and hold it in place without plus. The bow is simply tied and may be untied and the length wrapped about the figure if preferred.

A sash of dotted satin ribbon, designed for a party gown, may be used as a model for making up any of the soft fancy ribbons, suited to greasy wear. It requires ribon about four or five inches wide, of which three lengths are sewed together to form the girdle. This is boned at the sides and back to hold it in place and restends in the back with hooks and eyes. Over the fastending a flat bow of three loops and one end is placed with the loops lying lengthwise on the gare.

Narrow ribbons are sewed together to form wide girdles and ribbons of Durposes.

A new design in a slipper bag is shown in the picture. It is made of Dreaden ribbon over a pasteboard foundation. An oblong box is cut from cardboard, shaped like the cases made for opera glasses, but much longer. The bottom is an ellipse six and a half inches long and three wide. The sides are five inches deep. The bottom and sides are covered with silk and afterward joined.

The upper portion is made of a straight length of ribbon gathered about the box as shown in the picture. The second bag shown is easy to construct and suited to almost any furpose. It is made by stitching to each edge of a length of striped or figured ribbon, a length of plain satin ribbon, to form a wide strip for making the bag. The ends of this strip are sewed together with a felled seam and the edges sewed together at the bottom. A casing sewed within two inches of the top, carries the ties of narrow actin ribbon by which the bag is closed and suspended.

Hog Cholera Caused Big Loss,

Hog cholera caused a loss of $75, 000,000 in the United States during 000,000 in the United States during 1913. The resulting lors of pork/is estimated to be over $100,000,060 lowa was the heaviest loser, having lost 2,000,000 hogs or two-evenths of the entire loss for the year. The loss in Ohio was fortunately much less than that of lowa. No doubt this loss of hogs and pork has had its effect in forcing the price of hogs upwards, thus the consuming public suffers from the loss but the producer's loss is not reduced in any way. It is, therefore, as much to the advantage of the consuming public as of the producer to have such diseases successfully combated, even at public expense.
