FRENCH VICTORIES IN UPPER ALSAGE

Germans Fall Back, Leaving Wounded Behind, Says Paris Report.

TEUTONS RETREAT IN DISORDER

eclares His Army Has Occupied the Majority of the Valleys of the Vosges on the Slope of Alsace.

Paris, France.—French victories in upper Alsace with the Germans falling back in disorder, leaving their wounded and stores behind, are reported in an official communication to the war office from Gen. Joffre, commander-in-chief of the French lorces. The French leader declared his army has occupied the majority of the valleys of the Vosges on the slope of Alsace and that they expect soon to be in possession of the plain.

"All day Monday we continued to progress in upper Alsace. The enemy's retreat from this side was in disorder. They abandoned everywhere their wounded and their stores." Gen. Joffre reported.

"The defensive operations and the movements of the Russian army in the frontier of Galicia between Aug. 13 and 17 led to a series of stacks by cavalry supported by infantry and artillery. In the provinces of Plotr-koff and Kielec the Austrian cavely occupied a front of over 50 miles in length extending along a line from Tohenstochova through Andreiew to Sandomic. The cavalry was supported by infantry and by artillery. On Aug. 14 Austrian advance guards penetrated a short distance into Russian territory. It is reported that this of fensive movement was checked by the Russian troops. An Austrian attempt to advance from Andreiew toward Kielec failed on Aug. 15 when the Russian troops by a series of brilliant cavalry attacks succeeded in dislodging the enemy from Kielec and also occupied a town in the Tomaschoff district. The Russian cavalry cut up the Austrian advance guards and invaded the frontiers of Austrian Galicia, penetrating a distance of eight miles. Near Tomaschoff Russian cavalry inflicted serious Josses on the Eleventh Austrian fargoon regiment in a brilliant suber engagement. the Situation.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Consideration of the problem of raising money to offset losses in customs revenues due to the outbreak of the European war continue at the White House. The president saw Senator Simmons, chairman of the senate finance committee, and Representative Understood, chairman of the house ways and means committee, and discussed the question.

Earlier the president told callers he had not arrived at an opinion as to the best means for raising the necessary additional revenue. He said the possibility of issuing Pansm. canal bonds-to meet the expected deficiency had not been seriously considered by the administration as yet.

The president, Senator Simmons and Representative Underwood agreed a special tax probably would be necessary, but the time for putting it in operation was not settled on. When reasury officials concluded that additional funds are necessary the president will send a special message to congress asking that a tax be levied.

tional funds are necessary the president will send a special message to congress asking that a tax be levited. Representative Underwood said the prospects are that manufacturing facilities of the nations involved in the war would be crippled for several years, making an early return to normal in import duties improbable even in the event of a short war. He added that the time for the adjournment of congress now appeared entirely problematical. He gave the impression that he expected congress to stay in session indefinitely.

Statistifs on revenues will be immissionable to be added to the treatment to be laid before the president and he will keep in close touch with the financial situation. He was told that there was no immediate shortage in prospect, but that the revenues of the government were steadily falling as a result of the European war.

Federal Reserve Board.

With the organization of the federal reserve board, interest has naturally converged on what will probably be done toward the early establishment of the regional banks and the working out of the new currency system. Completion of the work started by the organization committee now fails on the new board. It is anticipated that the final determination of the selections of bankers for the district bank boards will be pushed rapidly, and first attention will be given to the appointment of the 35 directors of Class C, three for each district. From these directors are to be chosen a chairman and deputy chairman for each reserve bank. This work will take some time, as the board intends to pick only high-grade men for the positions. During the prevalence of unsettled financial conditions, it is not thought likely the board will compel the banks to change from the old to the new banking system at once. This would require a heavy shifting of reserves and the payment of bank stock subscriptions.

THIRST FOR NEWS THE ONE PASSION IN PARIS

ONE PASSION IN PARIS

One of the particularly striking things of this time of stress and excitement in Paris is the eagerness of every human being for a newspaper. The little midinettes who usually read nothing but the serial story, the omnibus conductors, the finely dressed women in their timousines, every one reads every celtition of overy paper.

Lite is full of abrupt changes for a working continental nation where mobilization can call out all types and conditions of men in less than a week. A person's daily acquaintances take on a romanite aspect; for the concierge is an artillery man, I find, and hes a medal for being the best gunlayer in his battery. The most obsequious waiter at the Cafe de Paris gives orders in the army instead of taking them. And who could have imagined that the nice young man who marcels your hair is a culrassier and will perhaps be charging around with a gleaning breassplate and a heavy saber in place of a curiling from with which he will treat heeds. saber in place of a curling fron with which he will treat heads.

Infection and Insect Rites Dangerous.

Mosquitoes, flies and other insects, which breed quickly in garbage pails, ponds of stagmant water, barns, musty places, etc., are carriers of disease. Every time they bite you, they inject poison into your system from which some dread disease may result. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment. It is antiseptic and a few drops will neutralize the infection caused by insect bites or rosty nails. Sloan's Liniment disiffects cuts, bruises and sores. Did You Enjoy the Chautauqua?

For several years the people of Plymouth and the adjacent territory have felt the need of a good enter-sament course. Knowing that our people appreciate good talent, a contract has been signed for, such a course for the coming winter, with the idea only of benefit to the town and positively no profit whatever to the six fers. The cost of good talent having increased along with the high cost of living, the price of senson tickets will necessarily be slightly more than formerly. A glance at the course will show that the numbers have been chosen with the idea of generally pleasing every one. 'Here, senores,' he pronounced, 'is where the mouth of the old tunnel came out. Standing inside it I could eee that tree over there, and looking down the river I could just see the smelter around the point. So, then, the gold must be in there.' He pointed toward the hill.

But Bud and Phil were not traveling for any particular upilit society, and, one hundred peace was a lot of money to Crus Mendez. More than that, if they had offered him a thousand dolars for the same service he would have got avaricleous and demanded ten thousand.

He came to the hotel very early the

He came to the hotel very early the next morning and lingered around an hour or so, waiting for the American gentleman to arise and tell him his fate. A hundred dollars would buy everything that he could think of, including a quantity of mescal. His throat dried at the thought of it.

Then the gentlemen appeared and-naked him many questions—whether he was married according to law, whether his wife would sign the papers with him, and if he believed in a hereafter for those who played false with Americans. Having answered all these in the affirmative, he was taken to the agente mineral, and, after signifus his name—his one feat in pennan-ship—to several imposing documents, he was given the preclous permit. Then there was another trip to the frounds with a surveyor, to make report that the claim was actually vacant, and Mendea went back to his normal duties as a packer.

In return for this sergice as a dummy locator, and to keep him under their eye, the Americans engaged El Tuerto, the one-eyed, to page out a few tools and supplies for them; and then, to keep him byey, they employed him further to build a stone house. All these activities were, of course, not lost on Don Cipriano Aragon, y Tres Paincios, since, by a crafty aragement of fences, he had made it impossible for anyone to reach the lower country without passing through the crooked street of Old Fortuna. During the first and the second trip of the strange Americans he kept within his dignity, hoping perhaps that they would stop at his store, and they could be engaged in conversation; but upon their return from a third trip, after Crus Mendes had gone through with their supplies, he cant his proud Spanish reserve to the winds and waylait them on the street. "Buenas tardes, senores," he saluted, as they rode past his store, and then, seeing that they did not break their gait, he held up his hand for hem to stop.

"No, senor," answered De Lancey courteously, "we are working for ourselves."

"Good!" responded Aragon with fatherly approval; "it is better so. And are you looking at mines?"

"Yes," said De Lancey non-committally; "we are looking at mines."

"That is good, too," observed Aragon; "and I wish you well, but since you are strangers to this country and perhaps do not know the people as well as some, I desire to warn you against that one-eyed man, Cruz Mendes, with whom I have seen you ridding. He is a worthless fellow—a very pela'o Mexican, one who has nothing—and yet he is always seeking to impose upon strangers by selling them old mines which have no value.

"I have no desire to speak ill of my neighbors, but since he has moved into the brush house up the river I have lost several fine little pigs; and his eye, as I know, was torn from his head as he was chasing another man's cow. I have not suffered him on my ranch for years, for he is such a thief, and yet he has the effrontery to represent himself to strangers as a poor but honest man. I hope that he has not imposed upon you in any way?"

"No; not at all, thank you," responded De Lancey, as Bud raised his bridle reins to go. "We hired him to 'pack out our tools and supplies and be has done tivery reasonathy. But many thanks, sir, for your warning. Addos!"

Did you notice that game eye? He kept it kind of drooped, almost shut, until he came to the point—and then he opened it up real fleres. Reminds me of a big fighting owl waking up in the day-time. A close association with Phil De Lancey had left Bud not 'mean't streep' him under their strill."

A close association with Phil De Lancey had left Bud not unaware of his special weaknesses, and Phil was undoubtedly romantic. Given a barred and silent house, ebut off from the street by whitened walls and a veranda screened with flowers, and the questing eyes of Mr. De Lancey would turned to those barred windows as a certainly as the needle seeks the pole.

On every trip, coming and going, he had conned the Aragon house from the wile-covered corredor in front to the walled-in summer garden behind, hoping to surpties a view of the beautiful daughter of the house. And unless rumor and Don Juan were at fault, and we have a gay and sprightly creature, brownlyed like her mother and with the same glorious chestnut hair.

Aiready those dark, mischlevous eyes had been busy and, at the last big dance at Fortuna, she had set many heads awhirl. Twice within two years her father, in a rage, had sent ber away to school in order to break off some ill-considered love affair; and now a battle royal was being waged between Manuel del Rey, the dashing captain of the rurales stationed at Fortuna, and Felis Luna, son of a rich haclendade down in the hot country, for the honer of her hand.

What more romantic, then, than that a handsome American, stepping gracefully into the break, should keep the haclendade down in the hot country, for the honer of her hand.

What more romantic, then, than that a handsome American, stepping grace tuily into the break hould keep the haclendade down in the whot country, for the boars of her hand.

What more romantic, then, than that a handsome American, stepping grace tuily into the break should keep the haclendade down in the whot country, for the honer of her hand.

What more romantic, then, than that a handsome American, stepping grace to the talking, and a great deal of the thinking for the partnership, Hooker was not lacking in positive opinions; and upon sufficient occasion he would express himself, though often with more force than delicacy. "That's the way to handle 'im," observed Hooker, as they trotted briskly down the lane. "Leave 'im to me!" "I'll only make him mad," objected De Lancey crossly. "What do you want to do that for?"

They rode on to the mine, which was only about five miles from Fortuna, without discussing the natter further; for, while Phil had generally been the leader; in this purificular case Kruger had gut Bud in charge, and he seemed determined to have his way so far as Aragon was concerned. In the ordering of supplies and the laring out of development work he determed to Phil in everything, but for tactice he preterred his own judgment. It was by hesitant rather than res-

Blace it was the pleasure of the Senor Aragon to make war on all who entered his preserves, they check-mated any attempt on his part to locate the lead by driving states to the north of their ledge; and, still fur-ther to throw him off, they decided to mark time for a white by doing dead work on a cut. Such an approach would be needed to reach the mouth of their tunnel.

At the same time it would give steady employment to Menden and keep him under their eye, and as soon as Aragon showed his hand they could

But for a Spanish gentleman, supposed to be all supple curres and sisseous advance, Don Cipriano turned out comewhat of a curprise, for when they rode back through his narrow street again he met them squarely in the road and called them to a halt.

"By what right gentlemen—" he demanded in a voice tremulous with rage "—by what right do you take possession of my mine, upon which I have paid the taxes all these years, and conspire with that rogue, Crass Mendes, to cheat me out of it? It is mine, I tell you, no matter what the agente mineral may say, and—"
"Your mine, nothing!" broke in Hooker scornfully, speaking in the ungrammatical border-Mexican of the cowboys. "We meet one Mexican—he showe us the mine—that is all. The expect of the mining agent says it is vacant—we take it. Stawano!"

A wave of fury swept over the Spanish's face at this gibe and he turned suddenly to De Lancey.

Invitation and Answer.

Mr. F. C. Phillips in his book, "My Varied Life," tells how the late Sir George Honeyman, an infamous writer, sent down from the bench to a friend of his, a leading Q. C., a little note. Not able to make head nor tail of it, the barrister scribbled something equally undeclipterable upon a half-sheet of notesper, and passed it up to the judge. Sir George looked annoyed, and when the court rose, said to his friend: "What do you mean by this? I asked you to come and dine with me tonight." "Yes," said the barrister, "and I replied that I should be extremely glad to do so."

Well Meant.
On one occasion when the king and queen of Great Britain visited together very elaborate preparations were made for their reception.
The city was lavishly decorated and one enterprising tradesman, desiring to display his loyalty, fad the words. "Heaven bless them both!" outlined in paper flowers across the front of his shop. Unfortunately he forgot to remove a large business sign that was just above.
The result read:
"Ham and beef sandwiches."

Coffee Alls Vanish Before Postur

It seems almost too good to be true, the way headache, nervousness, insomple, and many other obscure troubles vanish when coffee is dismissed and Postum used as the regular table beverage.

The reason is clear. Coffee contains a postonous drug—caffein—which causes the trouble, but Postum contains only the food elements in choice hard wheat with a little molasses.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD -

FOR quick money making, with small investment and easy work, no branch of farm industry surpasses pork raising. No fea-ture can fit bet-

Hoggens may be of the most inexpensive kind, but they must be kept clean. They need to be proof against drafts and storms. Clean premises also are essential in guarding against disease. Two or three acres of rape and an acre of artichokes will provide practically all the fodder required by twenty-five pigs from weaning till fattening time. If a supply of skimmikt or whey is available it will pay to use it, and a light ration of corn or peas once a day will be a help. The rape and artichokes may be depended on to bring he animals on at a fair rate of growth sil summer. There is a distinct public demand for the meat of lightweight hors ranging from 200 to 300 pounds. The most profinable post is that grown in eight to ten months, or from April to beceable, so that there is little winter feeding, and most of the growth is obtained from field forage.

grasses will not do well under the local conditions and must be omitted in favor of others. How much seed to use is a matter that must be full; considered. Some say put on plenty of seed, which is a very rood rule to go by, but it is a needless expense to use more than is necessary. The proper amount to use will depend to some extent upon the kind of soil. Under average conditions I would use about four quarts of clover, two quarts each of timothy and alfalfa and one peck each of meadow feacue and tall meadow goat grass on each acre. Some may fibiak this too great a quantity, but remember that it is better to get a full stand at once than to wait two or three years.—Farm Progress.

THE USE OF WINDBREAKS.

They Afford Protection at All Seasons In Certain Localities.

The windbreak has had little attention in the southwest for the reason that it has been little used, and, in fact, no great demand has been felt for it. But there are many sections of the plains country and the northern Faultandle in Othahoma and Teras where windbreaks would afford considerable protection to trees. Briefly stated, windbreaks afrod protection, in three ways—winter protection, snummer protection, protection during harvesting time with such fruits as apples. Where there are heavy winter winds the windbreak protects the soil by retaining leaves and other vecention so the snow, will form a cover. It reduces winter killing of buds in such tender fruits as peaches, cherties, etc. In summer the windbreak may save the trees when heavily londed with fruit: It reduces evaporation in some lastances; keeps sand from blowing where the soil is very sandy. It may prevent fruits from being blown from the trees in harvest time.

Movable Nest Boxes.

It is frequently desirable to have nest boxes which are readily removable from each other. Such an arrangement is shown here. The frame pieces are strongly made of one inch stuff, firmly nalled together. The wires support the boxes and are firmly attached to the two ends and middle boards. Strips may be used in place of the wires if necessary. The nest boxes are made of inif inch immber and are eleven inches wide, twelve inches long and five inches deep. The bottom is made to project six inches, learning a step for the bean to light on. A space of twelve inches should be left between the wires so as to give sufficient room for the hens.
