A large army of workmen are now engaged at the farm in various lines of labor, with but one object it, view, and that is to make the poultry farm second to none in the world.

The farm is being surrounded with a six foot fence, the posts being sawed 6 inches square, creosoted and set in cement, to which is attached the wire poultry fencing. All posts are to be painted white and when all is completed will present a very substantial and pretty appearance, work will soon begin on what will be known as the largest, finest and best equipped brooder house in the United States. Russell Killed In Missouri.

Bill Russell, whose blood thirsty career earned for him the name of "human tiger," has sipped his liast cup of life fluid and now lies as low as his numerous victims.

As to be expected Russell died fighting and bit the dust with a bullet from the gun of an officer of the law. Russell was lorated at Poplar Bluff, Mo. Police officers the country over were advised not to take any chances with the desparado but to kill him on sight. The details of Russell's killing are lacking further than Warden Thomas, of the Ohio penitentiary received a telegram, Saurday evening, stating that the man had been shot and killed by an officer who had undertaken Russell's arrest.

Freedom for Russell was not of long duration, however. His thirst for human gore seized him with the oid usasion and within a few months he was arrested in Cairo, Ill. for the murder of another railroad detective. Again he had a boy companion. He was arrested, tried and convicted and sentenced to death. The night before the day for his execution, with the aid of a boy confederate, he made his escape from the Cairo jail. Since that time, over one year ago there have been several murders in various parts of the country, that beat the earmarks of Russell, but in each instance the murderer made a complete get away.—Reflector.

man had been shot and killed by an officer who had undertaken Russell's arrest.

Probably no one knows the full extent of the bloody trail traveled by this human derelict. He first came into notice in this community in the killing of Harry Nobel, Nickel Plate detective, at Bellevue, about four years ago. The killing was done by Frank Crandall, a boy companion, at the instance of Russell.

The chase through yards and fields, running fire of the posse and culprits and their subsequent arrest and in prisonment in the jail in this city, are well remembered.

Crandall turned state's evidence and was sent to the Mansfield reformatory where he is still confined. Russell was convicted of second degree murder and was sentenced to the penitentiary for life.

The president's trip inaugurated a most important policy of the federal department of labor's division of immigration for educating in citizenship the increasing numbers of immigrants who each year enter into citizenship as Americans. A "course of instruction" is being prepared, and the co-operation of the public school officials with the federal authorities is to be sought. The object is "to change that portion of the alien body which is now in a condition ranging from helpless dependence and mere self-maintenance to a state of productive capacity," according to a statement just issued by the department.

"It is believed that the day will come when it will be possible to establish a system that will operate with comparative uniformity throughout the United States, a system that will teach that the fundamental requirement of good citizenship is a sense of the moral obligation resting upon every citizen to obey the laws, as well as a mental conception of what those laws are."

Claveland, O.—Europe's warring nations as well as those at peace have indicated through practically official channels that they stand ready to subscribe to a world court for the settlement of international disputes and will abide by its mandates after the present war. This announcement from John Hays Hammond, noted mining engineer and chairman of the world court committee, climaxed the deliberations of the first world court congress which ended in the Grays' armory. Consent of the powers to Judicial settlement of disputes, it was explained, in no way binds them to cease hostilities, but without question means that the adjustment of differences remaining when peace is declared will be through the medium of the world court, "made in Cleveland." Assurance of the favorable attitude of European nations has been in the possession of Mr. Hammond for some time and has been reaffirmed even by the warring powers since the outbreak of hostilities last July. Alberta wool growers are looking for cent wool this year. That is the 25 cent wool this year. That is the assertion made by a prominent sheepman of the Grassy Lake district. "It is quite within the pale of possibility that we will receive that figure from our wool this aummer," said he, "and I would not be surprised to see some get more than that." "The war has caused a great demand to be made on the woolen mills, and they have got to have the raw material."

The present season has been most propitious for the growing of wool, and the growers expect to reap a big harvest of a splendid quality. The winter has been very even, and the sheep are doing well on the ranges.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.
Columbus.—Final adjournment of the legislature will occur Thursday, May 27, a date which will mark the ending of an unusually long seasion. The date was fixed by adoption by both houses of the resolution offered by Representative Mooney of Williams. By its terms, the legislature will take an eight days' receas, will return May 27 for the signing of bills on which the clerical work will have been completed during the recess, and on that day will adjourn sine die.

Unfinished business to be attended to include the passage by the senate of the long budget, of deficiency, and sundry appropriation bills and cattled damage claims by both houses. The Sprague congressional gerrymander probably will be amended, but is scheduled to pass both houses. The Jackson bill, limiting municipal bord; sauce but increasing municipal revenues and taxation by relaxing the Smith 1 per cent tax limit law ventrictions, is marked for passage by the senate.

Exhibits of Stock.

When the foot and mouth disease was raging in Ohlo a few months ago, many county fair associations contemplated abandoning live stock exhibits at their fairs this year. Now that danger of new outbreaks is over most of them have decided to go ahead with their exhibits. The Summit county fair association asked the state agricultural commission if it would be safe to hold a cattle exhibit, and the answer is that it would be so. The commission is not looking for any recurrence of the disease. "Fairs that are expecting state and county support should make every effort to hold a complete annual exhibition as required by law, so as to take no chances on not being eligible to receive public funds," is the answer of the commission, to county fairs that want to know whether or not they should hold live stock exhibits this year.

Working Upon Road.

Atty. Gen. Turner found a legal means of completing main market road No. 13, Sandusky to Cleveland, in Erie county, work on which was stopped recently because former State Highway Commissioner Marker had sought to make a short cut by building a short section of new road. The law provides that main market and intercounty highways may be made only on roads already established. Work already had been started on the stretch of new road when it was found the proceeding was illegal. In an opinion to Highway Commissioner Cowen, the attorney general declared that in-asmuch as Erie county commissioner coven, the attorney general declared that in-asmuch as Erie county commissioner which the ton the proposed short route a regular highway work on it may be resumed. The bid under which the contract was awarded now may be considered as a new bid, he suggested.

the substitute Tremper bill, passed recently by the senate, is unsatisfactory because it permits the credit of the state to be used in promotion of a private substitute of an interstate canal from Lake Eric to the Oblo river.

Adoption of Amendment.

After adopting an amendment offered by Senator Charles T. Gallagher, of Madison, practically nullifying the bill, the senate passed Representative Graham's fall passenger train crew hill. Lehor men objected to demanuring the hill, but their protests went unseeded. The bill than had maximous associat. The bill than had maximous apport.

Falling Off in Returns.

Finding from reports reaching its offices that some of the personal tax returns of wealthy people in Ohio this year are not astlafactory, the state tax commissions sent to every county the following drastic letter: This commission regrets to have to say that some district assessors throughout the state have evidently paid no attention to Circular No.74, dated April 29, 1915, in regard to failure to make reasonable returns on personal property. Your attention is again directed to that circular, and it is asked that you read it over again; and if you have not actular, on the commission of the c

Liquor License Bill.

Liquor License Bill.

Governor Willis will sign the McDermott liquor license bill. The appointing board comprises the recorders, clerks and presidents of the boards of county commissioners of the counties composing each of 34 districts. This board appoints in each district two district liquor traffic supervisors, of opposite, politics, for two years, and fixes their pay, and may remove them on complaint of the state liquor traffic inspector or any person. The district supervisors grant licenses to conduct saloons for two years. This year, October 25, they grant licenses year October 25, they grant licenses you for 18 months from the fourth Monday in May in Moyen, and the state blennially the fourth Monday in May in odd-numbered years. The district supervisors must renew licenses blennially unless the holder has not met the legal requirements. The supervisors must renew license if the holder has been twice convicted of an offense against the laws governing the traffic. The licensee may appeal from a revocation order, and the state liquor traffic inspector may appeal from a refusal to revoke.

Insurance Illegal.

Insurance Hiegal.

Attorney General Turner in an opinion declared illegal the system of cooperative or reciprocal insurance, maintained by hundreds of individuals or companies in Obio acting as an association to insure each other against losses of many kinds. The opinion-was given to State Insurance Suprintendent Taggart and was based on an investigation of a Merchant and Manufacturers' Insurance Exchange, promoted by a Cincinnati attorney. The opinion held that Obio corporations subscribing to such insurance are exceeding the authority given them by their charters. Any persons, firm or corporation entering into that business can be made to pay the state at ax of 5 per cent on each policy, the attorney general declared.

Senate O. K.'s Civil Service.

Senate O. K.'s Givil Service.

The only administrative measure yet to run the gauntlet of the legislature is the Moore-Barns civil service bill. This has to receive favorable action in the house before it is ready for the governor. The senate accepted the conference committee's report by a vote of 18 to 9, minority members voting solidly against 11. Chief features of the bill are the abolishment of noncompetitive examinations and the administration of the law by a 'bi-partison board of three. State employes now holding positions under noncompetitive examinations, though their positions are declared vacant, are Lit compelled to take competitive examination in order that their names may be certified for appointment.

Proposed Interstate Canal.

Governor Willis vetoed the Tremper bill, which provided means for the construction of an interstate canal connecting the Ohio river with Lake Erie. The governor gave with Lake Erie. The governor gave as his reason for refusing to sign the measure, the fact that the tax provided was not included within the limits of the Smith one per cent law, and that the money to be expended was in compliance with the statute of Pennsylvania, and had no reference to any statute of Ohlo. This measure, which was introduced in the legislature by Senator Tremper of Scioto county, made possible the co-operation of Ohlo with other states in building the canal.

Home For the Governor.
Senator E. G. Jaloyd said he believed the legislature would appropriate the necessary memy for the purchase of a governor's home, and that personally he was in favor of the Denniaon prop-erty at the northeast corner of Twenty-aecond and Broad streets. Other members of the legislature are of a like opinion. It is said the property can be bought for $50,000.

Had a Close Call.

The Fleming bill to permit college students to vote in their school communities, which had been made an administration measure, came hear to be thrown into a conformed committee. thrown into a conference committee through an alliance of Hamilton coun-ty Republicans and Democrats, who either refused to vote or voted sgainst concurrence in senate amendments.

HON. HARRY L. GORDON, Member of the Dixle Highway Com mission.

The plan suggested to connect the North and the South by a fine highway, passable at all seasons of the Year, has taken like wildfare in Fiorlda, Georgia, Tennessee and Kentucky. The enthusiasm seems to have come north, and to have gained strong impetus during the last month. The petitions have been coming thick and fast from Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky. Michigan now desires to hook on to the enterprise and to establish a route from Mackinaw to the Gulf of Mexico. Ohio entered into the plan some time after the conference of Governors at Chattanooga at which the Dixie Highway Commission for Florida, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois were appointed. Two Commissioners have been appointed for Ohio with the view of extending the route from some point in Kentuky through the Blue Grass region of that state to Cincinnati and thence through lindianapolits to Chicago.

The Cincinnati boosters have been received from Shelby, Decatur and other counties, which promise to go the limit of their financial ability in building a road to measure up to the required standard. It was the original idea to have a route as the "crow files." If that plan is followed Cincinnati would be cut out. To detour by the way of the Blue Grass region of Kentucky to Cincinnati would mean that the route would be about 75 miles longer than planned. However, the entire commission is to consider the claims of all of the various routes.

GIVES PRICES FOR MAIMING PEOPLE

Boney Benny Fein Says He Charged $60 When Man's Ear Was Clipped Off.

$200 FOR BREAKING LEG OR THUMB

Equal Amount When Person Wa Thrown Down Elevator Shaft—Cost More to Have Woman Maimed Than Member of Male Sex.

New York City.—Have you ever read a medieval professional torturer's price list—each twist of the thumb screw one florin, mutilating with the shears two florins, breaking a rib four florins, and so on? reaking a rib four florins, and so on? They did those things back 200 or 300 years ago. Well, they do those things today and right here in New York city.

The confession of "Dopey Benny" Fein, which has already resulted in the indictment of 33 persons for employing him, includes the following price list of this arch gangater:

For wrecking a mania shirtwais factory one for were for wrecking a large clothing factory one.

These prices were fixed, exc bonus must be paid if the was of some prominence. It also cost more to have a woman maimed than a man, but the difference was often paid.

Doesn't Understand Name.
"Dopey Benny" doesn't know why he received the name "Dopey." He is one of the keenest men in the U. He was the first man to organize the profession of violence here. According to statements by the district attorney's office, his men worked as far west as Cieveland.

office, his men worked as far west as Cleveland.

Just after Herman Rosenthal was Shot by gangsters instigated by Police Lleut. Becker and at a time when the papers were full of stories about the ending of the "underworld menace."

"Dopey Benny" seized the scepter of gangdom which fell from the dying hands of "Big Jack" Zellg. If Fein had fallen into ether lines he might well have been a captain of industry. He has the systematizing brain. He laid out the city in districts modeled on the pfan of police pre-cincts. He made treaties of offense and defense with the Hudson Duster gang on the lower West Side and the car barn gang and the gas house gang further uptown.

Each gang solicited all the business it could get in its own territors. When further uptown. Each gang solicited all the business it could get in its own territors. When a gang leader obtained a centract to wreek a shop or maim a man outside his own district, he turned the Job over to the particular band of guardian angels operating in that district. No money passed between the gangs. Both Collected Bill.

Each collected for the "work" it had drummed up, and did "work" in its own district as a matter of reciprocal courtesy for the other gang. As the ancient kinghts errant did their deeds of violence only in good causes, so did "Dopey Benny" have his own code of morals. He claims he worked only for the labor cause, never for the employers. He has said he believed he was doing good in destroying the property of factory owners who incurred the emitty of labor and in currer?

lieved ne was doing good in destroy-ling the property of factory owners who lucured the ennity of labor and in maining them and their foremen.

The employers on several occasions offered him $15.000 cash to retire from his chosen profession, but he rinsed. He even held a dreadful court un-der the guise of a social club. Here miserable clothing workers who had violated some rule of an organization with which he affiliated were haled up in the dead of night for judgment. If "guilty" was the verifict, very often the sentence would be "cut his ear off" and the next instant the ear would hang by a shred or drop on the floor

MOORE, OPENING CONFERENCE ON ARBITRATION, DRAWS LES-SONS OF PAST YEARS.

Lake Mohonk, N. Y.—John Bassett Moore, formerly American counsellor of the state department, presiding at the opening of the 21st annual conference on international arbitration here, sharply drew the leasons of the past twelvemonth. He warmed against relying too far on arbitration. His words were taken to urge the United States to preparedness for wars which peaceful methods may not prevent.

"The address which I had to deliver last year was, according to a published report, interpreted in some mustrers as having a peasimistic tone in regard to the value of present treaties of arbitration," he said.

The color faded from Lydia's face. She grew cold from head to foot. Involuntarily she moved back a pace. The next instant, to her unbounded surprise, Mrs. Brood's hands were outstretched in a gesture of appeal, and a quick, wistful smile took the place of the imperious stare.

"There if am a nasty, horrid thing. Forgive me. Come! Don't be stubbern. A calculating squint had come into Mirs. Brood's eyes while she was speaking. To Lydia it appeared as if she were trying to fix upon the value of the wonderful carpet.

"Is there a reason why he should dislike his son?" asked the other, re-garding her fixedly.
"Of course not," cried poor Lydia. There was a moment of silence. "Some-day, Lydia, you will tell me about Mr. Brood's other wife."
"She died many years ago," said the girl, evasively.

"I know," said Mrs. Brood. "Still I should like to hear more of the woman he could not forget in all those years—until he met me."
She grew silent and preoccupied, a slight frown marking her forehead as she resumed her examination of the room and its contents.

Over all this fairylike splendor reigned the screen, melting influence of the god to whom James Brood was wont to contens himself! The spell of the golden image dominated everything.

In the midst of the magnificence moved the two women, one absurdly out of touch with her surroundings, yet a thing of beauty; the other blending intimately with the warm tones that enveloped her. She was lithe, sinuous with the grace of the most seductive of dancers. There were two windows in the room, broad openings that ran from near the floor almost to the edge of the canopy. to say apprehension. It would not be true to say that the remarkable personality of the man had suffered. He was still the man of steel, but retempered. The rigid broad-sword was made over into the fine flexible blade of Toledo. He could be bent but not broken.

It pleased him to submit to Yvonne's commands. Not that they were arduous or peremptory; on the contrary, they were suggestions if which his own comfort and pleasure appeared to be the inspiration. She was too wise to demand, too clever to resort to cajolery. She was a Latin. Diplomacy was hera as a birthright. Compilaints, appeals, sulks would have gained nothing from James Brood. Nor would it have occurred to her to employ these methods. From the day she entered the house she was its mistress.

ess. There were no false notions of senti-

There were no false notions of sentiment to restrain or restrict ber in the rearrangement of her household. She went about the matter calmly, sensibly, firmly, even the most prejudiced could not but feel the justice of her decisions. The series way in which she both achieved and accepted conquest proved one thing above all others: She was born to rule.

To begin with, she miraculously transferred the sleeping quarters of Messrs. Daves and Rigas from the second foor front to the third foor back without arousing the slightest oign of antagonism on the part of the crusty old gentlemen, who had occupied one of the choice rooms in the house with uninterrupted security for a matter of nine or ten years. house with uninterrupted security for a matter of nine or ten years. Mrs. Brood explained the situation to them so graciously, so convincingly, that they even assisted the servants in moving their heterogeneous belongings to the small, remote room on the third floor, and applauded her plan to make a large sitting-room of the chamber they were deserting. It did not occur to them for at least three days that they had been imposed upon, cheated, maltreated, insulted, and then it was too late. The decorators were in the big room on the second floor. They had been betrayed by the wife of their bosom friend. Is it small cause for wonder, then, that the poor gentlemen as manfully turned back to the tipple and got glorlously, garrulously drunk in the middle of the library, where tea was to have been served to a few friends saked in to meet the bride?

The next morning a fresh edict was issued. It came from James Brood and it was so staggering that the poor gentlemen were loath to believe their ears. As a result of this new command, they began to speak of Mrs. Brood in the privacy of their own room as "that woman." Of course it was entirely due to her mischlevous, malevolent in fluence that a spheless husband put forth the order that they were to have nothing more to drink while they remained in his house. This command was modified to a slight extent later, on. Brood felt sorry for the victims. He loved them and he knew that their appetite. In its modified town the first and the remember of the met and the force that their appetite. In its modified town the desertion of the sorry of the result of the control that the poor gentlemen their appetite. In its modified town the delt allowed them and the first appetite. In its modified town the delt allowed them and the first appetite. In its modified town the delt allowed them and the first appetite. He loved them and he knew that their pride was injured a great deal more than their appetite. In its modified form, the ediet allowed them a small drink in the morning and another at bedtime, but Jones, the butler, held the key to the situation and—the side-board. And after that they looked up-on Mrs. Brood as the common enemy of all three.

The case of Mrs. John Desmond was disposed of in a summary but inetful manner.

"If Mrs. Deamond is willing to remain, James, as housekeeper instead of friend, all well and good," said Mrs. Brood, discussing the matter in the seclation of her boudoir. "I doubt, however, whether also can descend to that. You have spoiled her, my dear." He flushed. "I trust you do not mean to lumply that—"

He faced her, his eyes as cold as steel. "I may as well tell you now, Yvonne, that her name is never mentioned in this house."

She seemed to shrink down farther in the chair.
"Why?" she asked, an insistent note in her voice.

"Why?" she asked, an insistent note in her voice.
"It isn't necessary to explain." He walked away from her to the window, and stood looking out over the bleak little courtyard. Neither spoke for many minutes, and yet he knew that her questioning gaze was upon him and that when he turned to her again she would sak still another question. He tried to think of something to say that would turn her away from this hated subject.

that would turn her away from this hated subject.
"San't it time for you to dress, dear-est? The Gunnings live prety far up north and the going will be bad with Fitth avenue piled up with snow..."
"Doesni' Frederic ever mention his mother's name?" came the question that he feared before it was uttered.
"I am not certain that he knows her name," said he levelly. The ameker of his hands, clenched tightly behind like back, were white. "He has never heard me utter it."
She looked at him darkly. There sweeter with each breath that she took. He felt the blood warming once more in his veins.

For a long time they sat thus, looking into each other's eyes without speaking. He was trying to fathom the mystery that lurked at the bottom of those smiling wells; she, on the other hand, deluded herself with the idea that she was reading his innermost thoughts.

"I have been considering the advisability of sending Frederic abroad for a year or two," said he at last. She started. She had been far from right—in her reading. "Now? This winter"

"Yes. He has never been abroad." "Indeed? And he is half European, too. It seems—forgive me, James. Really, you know. I cannot always keep my thoughts from alipping out. You should inquire," he said resignedly. "Of my servants," he and resignedly. "Of my servants," he and resignedly. "Of my servants," he and resignedly.

"Of my servature, eddy,
He flushed slightly. "I dare say I deserve the rebuke. It will not be necessary to pursue that line of inquiry, however. I shall tell you the story myself some day, Youne. Will you not bear with me?"

She met the earnest appeal in his summer of annoyance.

you not bear with me?"

She met the earnest appeal in his eyes with a slight frown of annoyance.

"Who is to tell me the wife's side of the story?"

The question was like a blow to him. He stared at her as if he had not heard aright. Before he could speak, she went on coolly:

"I dare say there are two sides to it, James. It's usually the case."

He winced. "There is but one side to this one," he said, a harsh note in his voice."

his voice.
"That is why I began my inquiries with Mrs. Desmond," she said enigmatically. "But I sha'n't pursue them any farther. You love me; that is all I care to know-or that I require."
"I do love you," he said, almost imploringly.

He felt the cold sweat start on his brow. Her callous remark slashed his finer sensibilities like the thrust of a dagger. He tried to laugh, but only succeeded in producing a painful gri-

"Yes." sald he, rather dazedly.

"Frederic."

"I am very, very fond of your son, James." she said. "How proud you must be to have such a son."

He eyed her narrowly. How much of the horrid story did she know? How much of the horrid story did she know? How much of it-had-John Desmond told to his wife?

"I am surprised at your liking him, Yvonne. He is what I'd call a difficult young man."

"I haven't found him difficult."

"Morbid and unresponsive."

"Not by nature, however, There is a Joyousness, a light-heartsdness in his character that has never got beyond the surface until now, James."

Yeonne Lestrange, in a way, had been born to purple and fine linen. She had never known deprivation of any description. Neither money, position nor love had been denied her during the few years in which her charm and beauty had flashed across the great European capitals, penetrating even to the recesses of royal courts. It is doubtful if James Brood knew very much concerning her family when he proposed marriage to her, but it is estiant that he did not care. He first saw her at the home of a British nobleman, but did not meet her. Something in the vivid, brilliant face of the woman made a deep and lasting inpression on him. There was an instant when their eyes met through an opening in the throng which separated them. He was anot only conscious of the fact that he was staring at her, but that she was looking at him in a curiously penetrating way. There was a mocking smile on her ilps at the time. He saw it fade away, even as the crowd came, between. He knew that the smile had not been intended for him, but for some of the eager cavaliers who surrounded her, and yet there was some-between. He knew that the smile had not been intended for him, but for some of the eager cavallers who surrounded her, and yet there was something singularly direct in the look she gave him.

That single glance in the duke's house proved to be a fateful one for both. They were married inside of a month. The virel, confident American had conquered where countless suppliants of a more or less noble character had gone down to defeat.

He asked but one question of her, she saked none of him. The fact that she was the intimate friend and associate of the woman in whose home he met her, was sufficient proof of her standing in society, although that would have counted for little so far as Brood was concerned.

She was the daughter of a haron; she had spent much of her life in Faris, coming from St. Petersburg when a young girl; and she was an orphan with an independent fortune of her own. Such common details as these came to Brood in the natural way and were not derived from any effort on his part to secture information concerning Mademoistelle Lestrange. Like the burnt child, he asked, question which harked back to an unforgotten pain.

"Have you ever loved a man deeply, "Have you ever loved a mian deeply," tion which narred neck to an unfor-gotten pain.

"Have you ever loved a mian deeply, devotedly. Yvonne—so deeply that there is pain in the thought of him?" She replied without hastistion. "There is no such man, James. You may be sure of that."

may be sure of that."

"I am confident that I can held your love against the future, but no man is vital enough to compote with the past. Love doesn't really die, you know. It a man cannot hold a woman's love against all newcomers, he despress to lose it. It doesn't follow, hewever, that he can protect himself supplies the man who appears out of the past and claims his own."
"You speak as though the past had played you no evil trick," site said.
He did not mince words. "Yeary ago a man same out of the past and took from ince the woman I loved and charished."

Birds Said to Give Warning of German Submarines.

Attracted by Periscope, They Tell Brit-ish Sallors of the Proximity of the Enemy—May Be Con-demned as Unneutral.

The war dog, the war horse, the single-beaded and the double-beaded eagles, the lion rampant and the lion couchant, the unicorn, the dragoon and the camel cavaliry, or the camelr, have not the stage of the whole world to themselves. According to reports the seaguil has proved himself as bird of war and has aligned himself on the stee of the alies. Perhaps he has taken that position because England, being a maritime nation, he considers it fitting that he should espouse her cause. It is reasonable that the seagulls of the English channel, St. George's channel and the Irish sea should be British in their sympathes, but it is not clear, nor has been conclusively shown, that the seagulls of the German ocean should be or that they are pro-British in their sentiments.

they are pro-British in their sentiments.

It has been reported that seaguilts have apprised some British ships of the proximity of submarines. Spying a periscope, they have circled around it, thus attracting to it the attention of enemy eyes—that might not have picked it out of the watery wante but for the action of the alert and keeneyed birds of the sea. One story was that gulls which had been following a British ship rose high in the air, few away from the ship and began to circle around a small and distant object which up to that time had not been sighted by the ship's crew. This behavior of the birds excited curiosity and the glasses being turned to that part of the sea under them and which seemed to occasion their activity, the periscope of a hostile submarine was seen. Whereupon with this warning the British ship put on speed and escaped.

is seen. Whereupon with this warning the British ship put on speed and escaped.

Men who have some authority to speak of and for the seaguils have given it as their opinion that the birds did not thus conduct themselves because of any desire to ad the scape of the British ship or with any intent to thwart the German submarine. They simply thought the strange object with which they were not farmiliar—night be something new in the esting line. There is no doubt as to the inquisitiveness and enterprise of the seaguil in any matter appertaining to food. The appetite of the seaguil is as ravenous as that of the raven. It is believed that their appetite is neutral and that they would eat a southdown mution chop or a fraikfurier sausage, a plum pudding or a kartoffe said with equal zest and glee. That strange thing in the distant water held out to them the promise of a meal. But for all that, the seaguil rendered aid and comfort to Great Britain and in the eyes of the periscope committed and unnoutral act.

Birds have even before this notelos to the state which fed them. For once their cackling was commendable Somehow, the goose has acquired the reputation of being a trifle below normal in intelligence. But reputation is not sitways or ever what we are, but what we are thought to be.

The rayen did a fine thing when he fed the prophet, but made of himself somewhat of a muisance when he began to quote "Nevermore," and peck upon the windowpane and perch on the bust of Pallas.

Then it was the robin, or several robins, which did such a good turn for the "Babes in the Wood" that the world has ever been grateful to this harbinger frost-bitten by harbingering too soon.

Birds in general have caused a good.

The Heroines of Novels.

If I were his satanic majesty, and a novelist came to me for judgment. I should bettle my brows in a horrible manner and quiz him thus:

"Did you ever make your heroine eighteen years old? Did you ever endow a malden with the repartee of Pinero, the intuition of Blavatsky, the carriage of Garden, the hauteur of the Medici, the beauty of Aphrodite and the wisdom of Athene—all at the age of eighteen years."

If the novelist answered me "Certainly not!" I should say: "To heaven with you!" But if he answered: "Sure I did!" I would blast him where he stood.

I did!" I would mass min was extended.

For, of all the iniquitous, fallacious, unfair and dangerous doctrines, this takes the icing of the cake—that the female species reaches her apogee at the immature age of eighteen.—From "Balm for Lovers," by George Weston in the Saturday Evening Post.

the periscope committed an unneutral set.

Birds have even before this noteworthy action of the seagull taken a prominent part in the affairs of the world. The geese in the capitol at Rome performed a distinguished servidente.

Dig several big spoonfuls of fertilizer about the roots of each prosphanted, replacing the mulch.

Cut back the blooming branches as soon as the flowers fade; work the soll under them and give a good soak ing with manure water early in September and you will have abundant bloom until frost.

Sharp pruning and good feeding is the sure means of getting fall roses. Keep down all insect pests with spray of sulpho-tobacco soap used according to directions on the package.

A tendency to blight of buds at this season means insects at the roots. Dissolve a peak of fresh lime in a barrel of water and give the ground a good soaking with the solution, using only clear water on top.

When pruning the roses, use all cuttings four or five inches long for rooting. Insert the cutting in well-worked Explains Things to His Fair Charmer.

"Oh, Mr. Hero, I'm so glad to see you safely back from the war. Sit right down and tell me all about it. I'm awfully interested. Wasn't it simply terrible over there? And did you really live in the trenches for weeks at a time with shot and shell screaming all around you? I don't see how you could stand it. Were you ever hit by one of those forty-two centimeter guns? I mean by the bullet, of course; not by the gun. But, then, of course; not by the gun. Fur. I suppose I shouldn't ask you that, though. You soldiers are not allowed to tell military secrets, are you? Did you ever easily kill a man yourself, or don't, you know? My uncle, who was in the Spanish war, says you never can tell whether it's your bullet or somebody else's that hits the enemy. I should think that would be awfully annoying. Not that you want to know that you'd killed a man, but still you'd like to know whether you're wasting your ammunition or not. Oh, must you go so soon? I wish you could stay longer. I've been so interested in hearing your adventures. Call again soon, won't you, Good-by."

What Causes Tuberculosis.

Dr. John North of Toledo, O., is working on the theory that tuberculosis may be due to a lack of lime in the system, as he says that while tubercular germs are everywhere, they only thrive in ripe soil and just what is lacking in persons subject to tubercular trouble gives food for thought. He says that there is less tuberculosis among people living in arid regions, and plants in such places have more lime in their composition than those growing in humid regions.

Civil War Horse Still Survives.

The oldest horse that served the country in the War of the Rebellion is still alive, at the age of 53 years, at Horseheads, N. Y. It is owned by P. A. McIntosh, who is also a veteran of the same war. To prove his claim, Mr. McIntosh shows the government brand on the animal's hip, which reads: "I. C., 1865." Horse and man served in the same regiment. Although bent with age, his hair turning gray and his teeth becoming worn, the old warhorse is still able to eat 12 quarts of oats and take his master to town several times a week. It is estimated the animal is at least 52 years old.

Announcement is made by the Stata Civil Service Commission that the requirement of candidates for the position of Assistant Physician for State hospitals, to have at least one year's experience, has been walved. This leaves the examination onen for all graduate physicians. The examination will be held in Columbus on May 28th and 29th, and those who desire to participate should address the Commission at once and secure the necessary application blanks, which may be filed up to the date of examination.

The position of Assistant Hospital Physicians pays $60.00 a year and maintenance for the first year with an increase in salary each year until it reaches $1,200.00.

The Administration Board has notified the Civil Service Commission that at least a half dozen of these physicians are needed at different hospitals, and the appointments will be made just as soon as the papers can be graded and the eligible list prepared. The only requirement of candidates who desire to participate for one of these places is that he be a graduate physician, and resident of Ohio.
