Patally Hurt Sunday.

Edward Quinn, well known in this place, a brother of Mrs. A. E. Devore, of this city, was badly if not fatally injured in a motorcycle accident about four miles north of Mansfield about six o'clock Sunday even field about six o'clock Sunday evening, in which he sustained a fracture at the base of the skull and some bad body bruises, and there seems no possible chance for his recovery. The Mansfield News of Monday in giving a version of the accident says:

"It seems that Quinn had gone to his former home in Ganges Sunday on his motorcycle to visit with his brother, who is recovering from a severe illness. He was returning to Mansfield when he met with the accident that resulted in his death. He was going slong at a fair rate of speed and an automobile was ahead of him. He overtook the automobile, which was owned by Blaise Munch, and had Mr. Munch and a party of friends in it returning from a ride. He sounded his horn and attempted to pass the automobile. Instead of passing on the left side he tried to pass the automobile on the right side. There was only a slight space between the moving automobile and the side of the road.

As the motorcycle was even with the automobile, either the sutomoing in which he austained a fracture a number of relatives living at Ganges."

Later—After lying in an unconscious condition, the greater part of the time in convulsions, the young man's sufferings were ended Tuesday evening at 11 o'clock. A short funeral service was held at the home of W. H. Tipton, with whom the unfortunate young man made his home, in Mansfield, Thursday morning at $230, following which the body was brought to this place and taken to the home of his sister, Mrs. A. E. Levore, after which burial was made in Greenlawn cegnetery.

Pitched It Too High.

Preachers are just the same as ordinary individuals when they get to swapping stories, and they enjoy them just as well as the layman. The other day three Methodist ministers were together and they got to telling yarns. One of them told about holding services in a church where there was no choir. He asked the deacon to lead in song. The deacon started "My Soul Be on They 'Guard, Ten Thousand Foes Aries." But he pitched the tune too high and only got as far as the "Ten Thousand" when his voice gave out. Just about that time a horse buyer, who had been attending auction sales in the neighborhood, entered the church, forgot himself, and thinking he was attending a horse sale, shouted. "Too bigh, brother, start 'er at five thousand." isters were together and they got to

'I am sure she said it, Freddy," she hastened to declare. "Will she be hastened to declare. "Will she be pleased with our—our marriage?" It required a great deal of courage on her part to utter these words, but she was determined to bring the true situation home to him.

He did not even besitate, and there was conviction in his voice as he replied. "It doesn't matter whether she's pleased or displeased. We're pleasing ourselves, are we not? There's no one clae to consider, dear."

Her eyes were full upon his, and there was wonder in them. "Thank you—thank you, Freddy," she cried. "I—I knew you'd—" The sentence remained unfinished.

"Has there ever been a doubt in your mind?" he asked, uneasily, after a moment. He knew there had been misgivings and he was ready, in his self-abasement, to resent them if given the slightest opening. Guilt made him errogant.

He stared. "I wonder just how honest I am." he muttered. "I wonder what would happen if— But nothing can happen. Nothing ever will happen. Thank you, old girl, for saying what you said just now. It's—it's bully of you."

He got up and began pacing the floor. She leaned back in her chair, self. Wiser than she knew herself to be, she held back the warm, loving words of encouragement, of gratitude, of bellef.

But she was not prepared for the impetuous appeal that followed. He threw himself down beside her and grasped her hands in his. His face seemed suddenly old and haggard, his eyes burned like coals of fire. Then, for the first time, she had an inkling of the great struggle that had been going on inside of him for weeks and weeks. "Listen, Lyddy." he began, nervously, "will you marry me tomorrow? Are you willing to take the chance that I'll be able to support you, to care enough.—"

He was very much in earnest, but

"Yes," she said so seriously that the way smile died on his lips. "I don't believe there are many women who would ask a man to be sorry for them. That's really what all this amounts to, isn't it, Freddy?"

"By jove!" he exclaimed, wonderingly.

"You are a strong, self-willed, chivalrous man, and yet you think nothing of asking a woman to protect you against yourself. You are afraid to stand alone. Wait. The flash of light revealed a haven of refuge. So you asked me to—to marry you tomorrow." All through this indictment she had held his hand clasped tightly in both of hers. He was looking at her with a frank acknowledgement growing in his eyes. "Are you ashamed of me, Lyddy?" he asked. It was confession. "No," she said, meeting his gaze steadily. "I am a little disappointed, hat's all. It is you who are ashamed." "I am," said he, simply. "It wasn't fair."

The telephone bell in the hall was the movement did not escape Lydia.

CHAPTER XIII.

Two Women.

Frederic had the feeling that he slunk to the telephone. The girl handed the receiver to him and he met her confident, untroubled gaze for a second. Instead of returning to the sitting-room where she could have heard everything that he said, she went into ber own room down the hall and closed the door. He was not conscious of any intention to temporise, but it was significant that he did not speak until the door closed behind her. Afterwards he realized and was ashamed.

He was scowling. "Where are you going?"
"Going? Oh, dining. I see. Well," slowly, deliberately, "we thought it would be great fun to dine alone at Delimonico's and see a play afterward."
"What play are you going to see?" he cut in She mentioned a Belasco production. "Well, I hope you enjoy it, Yvonne. By the way, how is the governor today? In a good humor?"
There was no response. He waited for a moment and then called out: "Are you there?"
"Good-by," came back over the wire. He started as if she had given him a slap in the face. Her voice was cold and forbidding.

Are you going?" she asked, steadily. He turned toward her, conscious of the telitale scowl that was passing from his hrow. It did not occur to him to resent her abrupt, uncompromising question. As a matter of fact, it seemed quite natural that she should put the question in just that way, fatly, inclaively. He considered himself, in a way, to be on trial.
"No, i'm not," he replied. "You did not expect me to forget, did you?" He was uncomfortable under her honest, inquiring gaze. A sullen anger against himself took possession of him. He deepised himself for the feeling of loneliness and homesichness that suddenly came over him.
"I thought—" she began, and then her brow cleared. "I have been looking up the recitals in the morning paper. The same orchestra you heard last night is to appear again today at—"

"We will go there, Lydia," he interrupted, and at once began to hum the gay little air that had so completely charmed him. "Try it again, Lyddy. You'll get it in no time."

After luncheon, like two happy children they rushed off to the concert, and it was not until they were on their way home at five o'clock that his enthusiasm began to wane. She was quick to detect the change. He became moody, preoccupied; his part of the conversation was kept up with an effort that lacked all the spontaneity of his earlier and more engaging flights.

effort that lacked all the spontaneity of his earlier and more engaging flights.

Lydia went far back in her calculations and attributed his mood to the promise she had exacted in regard to his attitude toward his father. It coursed to her that he was smarting under the restraint that his promise involved. She realized now, more than ever before, that there could be no delay, no faltering on her part. She would have to see James Brood at once. She would have to go down on her knees to him.

"I feel rather guilty, Freddy," she said, as they approached the house, and is they approached the house, and to see the said of the country of the concept and enjor myself when he is so, eager to finish the journal-especially as he is to sail so soon. I ought to see him, don't you think so? Perhaps there is something I can do tonight that will make up for the lost time." She was plainly nerrous.

"Be'd work you to death if he

"No," she said. Then, with a low laugh: "You may be excused for the fay, my son. Your father and I have been discussing the trip abroad."

"I thought you—you were opposed to going."

"I thought you—you were opposed to going."

"I've changed my mind. As a matter of fact, I've changed my heart."

"You speak in riddles."

"He had you will be lappy. Is not that so?"

"But you are comping back," said Lydia, with a frank-smile, not meant to be unfriendly.

"Frederic, I want you to do something for me. Will you fay to convine."

Her heart gave a great throb of the stops. "Are you doubt it. I see. Well. I do not bilane you. I have given you much pain, much distress. When I want will be glad—you will be lappy. Is not that so?"

"But you are comping back," said Lydia, with a frank-smile, not meant to be unfriendly.

"Free heart gave a great throb of the stops."

Yyome's face clouded. "Oh, yes, I we've had. You don't mind if I leave you here?

Her heart gave a great throb of relief. It was best to have him out of the way for the time being.

Well—so long," he said, diffidently.

So long," she repeated, dropping into his manner of speech without thinking. There was a smothering sensation in his breast.

He looked back as he strode off in the direction from which they had come. She was at the top of the slaps, her fingers on the electric button. He wondered why her face was so white. He had always thought of it as being full of color, rich, soft and warry. I had not been a strong and the said of the heat. "In Mr. Brood at—" she began, nervously, A voice at the top of the staffway intertheted the question she was putting to the footman.

"Is it you, Lydia? Come up to my room."

The girl looked up and saw Mrs. Brood leaning over the banister rail. She was holding her pink dreasing gown closely about her throat, as if it had been hastily thrown about her shoulders. One here arm was visible—completely so.

"I came to see Mr. Brood. Is he—"
"He is busy. Come up to my room," repeated Yvonne, somewhat imperiously.

As Lydia mounted the stairs she had a fair glimpes of the other's face. Always pallid—but of a healthy pallor—It was now almost ghastly. Perhaps is was the light from the window that caused it, Lydia was not sure, but a queer, greenish hue overspread the lovely, smilling facc. The lips were red, very red—redder than she had ever seen them. The girl suddenly realled the face she had once seen of a woman who was addicted to the drug habit.

Mrs. Brood met her at the top of the stairs. She was but half-dressed. Her lovely neck and shoulders were now almost bare. Her hands were extended toward the visitor; the fliny lace gown hung hose and disregarded about her slim figure.

She Threw an arm about the tall girl and Lydia was surprised to find that it was warm and full of a gentle strength. She felt her flesh tingle with the thrill of contact. Yes, it must have been the light from the window, for Yvonne's face was now aglow with the Iridescence that was so peculiarly her own.

A door closed softly on the floor above them. Mrs. Brood glanced over her shoulder and upward. Her arm tightened perceptibly about Lydia's walst.

"It was Ranjab," said the girt, and instantly was filled with amazement. She had not seen the Hindu, had not even been thinking of him, and yet she was impelied by some mysterious intelligence to give uterrance to a statement in which there was conviction, not conjecture.

"It was see him?" asked the other, looking at hor sharply, asked the other, looking at her boudoir door behind them. For an instant she stood staring at the knob as if expecting to see it turn—
"I know," she said, "I know why you said it. Because it was Ranjab." It how, "She shivered slightly." I am afraid of that man, Lydia. He seems to be watching me all of the time. Day and night his eyes seem to be upon me." "Why should he be watching you?" asked Lydia, bluntly.

Youne did not notice the question. "Even when I am asleep in my bed, in the dead hour of night, he is looking at me. I can feel it, though asleep. Oh, it is not a dream, for my dreams are of something or someone elsenever of him. And yet he is there, looking at me. II—It is uncanny."
"An obseasion," remarked Lydia, quietly. "He never struck me as especially ompripresant."
"Didn't you feel him a momenting like that." They were still facing the door, standing close together. "Why do you feel that he is watching yet all book. Imit—isn't it disgusting?" Heriangh was apritiless, obviously artificial.

"You may call it your home, Mrs. Brood, "said Lydia, "but are you quite sure your thoughts always abide here? I mean in the United States, of course."

Yvonne had looked up at her quickly. "Oh, I see. No, I shall never be an American." Then she abruptly changed the subject. "You have had a nice day with Frederict? You have been happy, both of you?"

"Yes-very happy, Mrs. Brood," said the git! simply.
"I am giad. You must always be happy, you two. It is my greatest wish."

Lydia hesitated for a moment. "Frederic asked me to be his wift—tomorrow," she said, and her heart began to thump queerly. She felt that she was appraching a crisis of some sort.

she was approaching a crisis of some sort.

"Tomorrow?" fell from Yvonne's lips. The word was drawn out as if in one long breath. Then, to Lydla's astonishment, an extraordinary change came over the speaker. Their Care and Cultivation

New Ophelia Rose,

GROWING PERENNIALS

By BESSIE L. PUTNAM.

For those who have not much time to devote to the garden, there is no clease of flowering plants more desirable than the hardy perennials and herbaccous plants like the peony. These plants require but little attention.

ne does not have to acquire a lib-One does not have to acquire a lib-eral horticultural education in order to know how to take care of them. Most of us will do well to consider the merits of this class of plants, leav-ing the annuals to those who are here this season and somewhere else next wear.

ing the annuals to thous who are here this season and somewhere else next year.

Not that we would advise neglecting annuals wholly, however, I do into want to be understood as meaning that, but simply that a collection of hardy plants will be found so much more satisfactory, all things considered, under the conditions of which in how species, that their cultivation is to be urged in preference to that of the other class mentioned, which is not satisfactory unless a good deal of time and labor is expended on it.

The impression seems to prevail that annuals require next to no care, and are therefore particularly adapted to the use of the woman who has but little time to devote to gardening.

The fact is, that to grow annuals well you must give them a good deal of attention, especially during the early part of the season, several times the amount of attention, indeed, that will be required by a good-sized collection of hardy plants.

Another argument in favor of this class is that, once established, your plants are good for air indefinite period. Your garden does not have to be mude every season.

In spring the plants will need to be worked about, and freed from the

This is about all this class of plants will ask of you. A great many can be attended to in a day, you will find. And the work is much easier than that of making beds and pulling weeds.

One of the best perennials—perhaps I would be justified in saying the best—is, the Hollyhock. This plant comes in a wide range of colors—white, rose, crimson, marcon, and yellow. It is a profuse bloomer, and it does well in almost any soil.

To secure the strongest effects from almost any soil.

To secure the strongest effects from it, it should be planted in groups of from six to a dozen plants. If contrasting harmonious colors are planted together like white and pink, pink and yellow, marron and yellow or white, the effect will be very fine. But don't expect harmony if you put the pink varieties alongside of the crimson, or marron and pink varieties alongside of the crim-son or marcon sorts.

We have mostly double Hollyhocks nowadays, but the single kinds are well worth cultivation, especially where a very strong and stately effect is desired.

If the old flower stalks are cut off soon as the buds on them have developed quite frequently, new stalks will be sent up late in the season. In this way one may have flowers from the Hollybock until the coming of cold weather.

A package of seed sown in May, June or July, will give one dozen or plants from which flowers can be expected the next season.

Delphinum, or Larkspur, is an excellent plant when used in clumps. We have no other flower of the some rich dark shade of blue. I have seen charming effects result from planting pale-yellow Hollyhocks close by it—this color and the intense blue of the other producing a most striking combination.

Where an exceedingly rich show of color is desired, nothing equals the Rudbeckia or "golden glow," Great clumps of it will be a solid mass of the richest golden yellow for weeks. For cutting, we have few better flowers.

This plant is so aggressive in character that it should have a place in the background where it can be allowed to spread itself.
Dicentra is a most lovely flower, and has the special merit of being an early bloomer. The foliage of this plant is almost as fine as its flowers, and the two combined make it one of the most desirable plants.

I often wonder why the herbaceous Spireas are not more extensively grown. Certainly it is difficult to find a more exquisitively lovely flower than Spirea with its great plumelike panicles and airy pink bloom.

The Peony need not be given a somewhat moist location, it should find a liace in the amateur gardener's collection always. The German and Japanese varieties are simply magnificent in coloring and remarkably stately in general effect when grown in large groups.

Every collection ought to include at least a dozen of the most distinct varieties of berennial abox. This plant is lant is and in large groups.

seneral effect when grown in large groups.

Every collection ought to include at least a dozen of the most distinct varieties of perennial phlox. This plant is to the outdoor garden what the geranium is to the window garden. Anyone can grow it. It is a profuse bloomer. It comes in a wide range of colors. Group it in order to secure best results, but keep the illac and magenta varieties away from the pink and scarlet sorts unless you want a color discord of the most aggressive sort.

color discord of the most aggressive sort.

Then there are hardy pinks, the perennial Pea, Coreopsis Lanceolata, Pyrethrum, Dairy, Achillea, all good, easily grown and readily obtainable. If immediate effect is desired, it will be necessary to purchase plants, but nearly all the kinds I have mentioned will bloom the second season from seedling plants.

Ideas to Choose From.

Many seasons ago the wives of the artists in the little Norman village of Glyenry discovered the picturesque color-schemes and designs of material, and their appropriateness for gowns to be painted in." All the painters' wives were expert models for their husbands, patiently sitting and standing in doorways and windows under trees in meadows, out in the brolling sun, or in damp and dirty boats on the little river. Gowns to pose in must be colorful and graceful, above, in these days was composed of hard workers on the way up the ladder of fame, though several of them have since arrived at the top. So the laddes set their wits to work and some-body thought of cretonne, and very soon they were all posing in coats and other garments made of it, shading their heads with Japanese parasols.

Now here it is in America. made up into gardening dresses both pretty and practical. The pattern on the fabric must be chosen carefully, for only one among dozeng is really adapted to clothes. Small figures are best; the gowns seen recently were all of closely patterned designs. Some of them were like big painting aprons, cut out deeply at the neck and under the arms, with serviceable pockets in front, and worn with white guimpes with elbow sleeves and simple, turned-down collars. The brotelle-idea was used for others, the skirt being made of the cretonne, and a sort of skeleton waits added, consisting of shoulder-yoke with three straps down the front, and three down the back, buttoned conspicuously to the belt, and worn over a white blouse.

There were natty skirts of cretonne to be worn with blouses or or with the new English smocks. The patterns chosen were not always quite appropriate. It is so easy, in choosing cretonne, to look like perambulating bedroom furniture!

The best of them were the small-flowered designs and the awaing stripes. These last were most attractions of the stripe of black and striped with a group of black and striped with a group of black and Sensible Children's Garments to Be Had in Almost Any Material Desired.

Adjustable, and May Be Quickly Made by Those at All Skilled in Embroidery Work.

Bince rompers have been go generally adopted for playtime garments for both boys and girls, they now appear in many new models. Also, they come in other materials than the ginghams; for instance, little girls are wearing the cotton crepe rompers which are so easily washed out and need no ironing. The delicate colored chambrays are also used for morning wear, while those made of India, pongee and other wash silks are used for atternoon wear. Most of these are smocked into the neckbands and the sleeves are in ished in the same way; this makes them quite pretty in appearance.

The boys' rompers are generally made of ginghams or lineus, Quite the newest and most fascinating little suits for boys are those made in the Oliver Twist model. They are usually of linen, in solid colors.

The "Drother and Sister" suits seem to be very popular, made in dainty colored linen or chambray; they slow a modified suspender effect. A Respected Citizen Passes

Mr. Daniel Wyandt was born in Plymouth township, Richland coun-ty, O., May 28, 1885, and died at his late residence June 16, 1915, aged 80 years and 18 days. He was of a fam-ily of eight children, all of whom ily of eight children, all or whom have passed away except one aister, Mrs. Luther Shutt of this place. His early years were spent on the farm. In 1867, with his brother, he began his business career in Plymouth, which lasted over a period of fortwone years. He afterwards served as president of the First National Bank. He was a member of the Masonic order for nearly fifty years, and a faithful member and susporter of the Evangelical Lutheran church, regularly attending its services until a few months ago, where failing health would not permit.

He was married to Helen E. Earl in 1893, who died in 1893. Four daughters were born to them, all of whom are still living and together with their families were present at his funeral, except Mrs. Arthur Smith and family of California. The eldest daughter, Luella, assumed the cares and duties of the family at her mother's death, and faithfully performed her part, keeping for the father and family the 'Old Home,' sacred with its memories of a happy family life, until the close of the aged father's days.

Honesty of purpose, uprightness of life and integrity of character were Mr. Wyandt's traits. Quiet and unassuming in his ways, his closing hours were in keeping with the serenity of his life among men. After a comparatively short illness he quietly fell asleep, leaving the memory of a clean life as a sacred legacy to kindred and friends.

The funeral service was held at the family home on Sandusk street, on Friday afternoon, June 18, conducted by Rev. G. C. Smith, of the Lutheran church, attended by many relatives, neighbors and friends, the bank officials acting as pall bearers. The Masonic lodge was present in a hody, conducting the burial service at the cemetery.

The singing, the many beautiful flowers, the respectful quiet that reigned in the town, through the closing of the business houses during the funeral service, for these thoughtful and kindly attentions to the sacred memory of a deea tiet father, the children are thankful, to all who thus evinced their regard a

Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bow-els become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

Many people remarked at the especially fine music produced by the Methodist choir last Sunday. The secret is now out. Last Friday evening Mr. Judson, the director, after having given his choir a strenuous work-out, adjourned the rehearsel to Scaholts', where every member proved to be a soloist of first rank. The fine harmony of Sunday was undoubtedly due to the soothing effect of the fancy sundaes with which the members had regaled themselves.

OV. SLATON OF GEORGIA MEN-ACED BY RIOTERS AFTER HE SAVES FRANK FROM DEATH.

MARTIAL LAW AT ATLANTA

Executive's Mansion Surrounded by Angry Crowd—Soldlers Are Stoned When They Attempt to Disperse Them at Point of Sayonet.

Atlanta, Ga., June 23.—Bayonets Arted, a khaki-ciad battalion of Georgla's National Guard surrounds the home of Gov. John M. Slaton, standing off a mob of thousands which is crying for the governor's blood.

The entire Fifth regiment was called out. Atlanta Itself, it is expected, soon will be placed under martial law. The governor preclaimed martial law at exactly eleven o'clock and by shortly after midnight the crowd was gradually being dispersed. There was po firing.

The first troopers reached the estate of Governor Slaton, six miles from Atlanta, at eleven o'clock Monday night. Word had been sent to the executive by telephone that a mob of seven to ten thousand was descending upon his home, shouting for vengeance for little Mary Phagan, for whose murder Leo M. Frank was to have paid the penalty on the gallows on Monday but for Slaton's intercession.

Sign. Governor Slaton immediately ordered out the troops and proclaimed martial law for a distance of half a mile on each side of his house. The entire Fifth regiment was called to arms. One battallon was rushed in automobiles to the governor's country home. The crowd had a long start Bayonets fixed, the troops began to move forward in a circle, of which the governor's mansion was the center. Muttering, the mob gave way.

On the porch, despite the pleas of this wife and friends, the bright mood light sharply outlining the white of the lines, stood Governor Siaton, unafraid in the face of mob violence.

Staunchly he stood out, at arget, the cries of the mob beating in his casts: "Give us Slaton. Give us Georgia's trailor governor."

He wanted to address the crowd, but his wife and friends dissuaded him.

At first the mob outside rapidly retreated before the steel of the solders. Then it re-formed. Several hundred gathering near a pile of bricks began to bombard the troops with the heavy missiles.

A brick struck and felled Lieutenant Parker. He fell to the ground, seriously if not fatally injured. Other soldiers were struck, and some painfully infured.

Frank's death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by Governor Slaton on Monday. Announcement of the governor's decision came several hours after Frank had been taken secretly from the jail here and burried to the state prison farm at Milledgaville. Frank was sentenced to be hanged here today for the murder of Mary Phagan in April, 1913.

"It. was a plain case of duty as 1 saw it," said Gov. John M. Slaton, discussing his action in commuting Leo M. Frank's sentence. "It! had failed to commute Frank's sentence. I would have been guilty of murder, as I see it. Of course, I care for the public appropation," he continued, in explaining his course, "but I could not have that man's blood my hands under the circumstances."

When reports that Frank's sentence had been commuted began to circulate crowds gathered on the principal downstown atroot corners. The arrest of a man who attempted to dismount a polecum and yrabbing the horse's relas aroused one crowd to excitement. Many persons followed the offices to the city hall, a block away. Speakers started to harangue the crowd from the city hall steps, but were stopped by an extra force of police. It was said that a delegation was coming from Marletta, the former home of Mary Phagan.

The decision of the governor came as a complete surprise to many in the capital of the state. Governor Slaton reached his decision Sunday morning and, except for a few of his most confidential friends to whom he confided, his decision was kept a secret until early Monday. Peeling all over Georgia was at such a high tension that it was deemed advisable to have the prisoner safely landed at the state prison before giving out the news.

oner safely landed at the state prison before giving out the news.

The arrangements for removing Frank from the Fulton county jail were made with the utmost secreey. Not even the newspaper men who were keeping a close vigil around the jail knew when or how the prisoner left. The sheriff with his deputies guarding the condenned man left the jail shortly after ten o'clock Sunday night and proceeded to the Terminal station, where tickets were secured and the party boarded the trail which pulled out two minutes after midnight.

Two policemen and several of the railroad station employees recognized Frank and the news then began to spread. But before the general public in Atlanta knew of the action of the governor or the removal of the prisoner, Frank was well on his way to the state prison, and the sheriff homes.

Capital of Galicia Falls Before Onrush of the Austro-Garman Hosts.

FIERCE BATTLE IN NORTHERN FRANCE

Losses of Both Germans and Allies Are Described as Fearful in Wireless Reports-Austrians Trying to Drive Back Italians.

London, England.—Lemberg, capital of Galicia, has fallen before the onrush of the Austro-German hosts, says a dispatch from Copenhagen. Although this report lacks official confirmation, it is given considerable credence here because it was known the advancing Teuton armies were only 10 miles from this strategically important city Monday.

Russia,

The Russians, according to reports reaching Petrograd, are successfully holding the Austro-Germans along the Dnlester river.

Only second in importance to the reported fall of Lemberg is the news Tuesday of the terrific battle raging in the vicinity of Arras, northern France. Wireless dispatches from Berlin represent the battle as one of the great conflicts of the war, which may decide the fate of France. Losses of both the Germans and the allies are described as fearful, and one stretch of the field, from Arras eight miles toward the Belgian border, is said to be covered with corpses.

The official French and German statements of Tuesday give few details of this battle. The Paris anouncement concedes that Germans captured a section of a trench at one point, but asserts they were repulsed elsewhere.

Fighting in Alsace.

In Alsace there was heavy fighting along the valley of the Fecht river, and the French assert their lines were pushed further northward. The Berlin communications say the German positions were transferred to the eastern bank of the river.

FIXED CHARGES ARE ABOLISHED

No Period of Six Months Shall Rate of Employer Be Increased More Than 24 Per Cent.

Columbus, O .- Meeting the most imcommous, 0.—Meeting the most important objection that has been raised to the manual of rates originally issued by the state industrial commission for premiums on workmen's compensation insurance, the new order of the commission was made public, to be effective July 1. In a number of what are termed fundamental modifications are termed fundamental modifications. effective July 1. In a number of what are termed fundamental modifications in the system of rating the two most important are abolition to the $500 individual fixed charge against the employer for the courrence of a death, and the abolition of the $1,000 individual fixed charge against the employer for december of a primanent total disability injury. There order will provide that in no period of six months shall the rate of an employer be increased more than 24 per cent, including permanent total disability and the system of the Loan Fund for Students.

Students of Ohio State university in the future will be able to borrow sums of money varying from $20 to $75 at a low rate of interest and payable some times after graduation as result of presentation to the university of a loan fund of $1,200, by this year's graduating class. The fund is the class memoriajt to the institution. President W. O. Thompson received the memorial with the statement that it was the biggest thing ever done for the university by any class. The president will be custodian of the fund. A faculty committee will have charge of the loans.

"Get Rid of Pear Trees!"

To get rid of pear trees is the advice that has been given to commercial apple growers by N. E. Shaw, head of the orchards bureau of the state agricultural commission. In practically every instance of blight reported by his inspectors in Southern Ohio the trouble is traced to pear trees. Until complete reports have been received the damage can not be estimated, but it is known to be very heavy. heavy Occupational Diseases.

That occupational diseases should be included within the scope of the workmen's compensation law was the statement made by Chairman Wallace D. Yaple, of the state industrial commission, in charge of the administration of the law. This should be done, he says, "just as soon as sufficient information is available to enable the general assembly to act intelligently in the matter."

In Six Regiments.

Six Infantry regiments of the Ohio National Guard now have organised machine gue companies, according to reports received by Adjt. Gen. Benson W. Hough. The Sixth still is without an organized company, and no report its been received from the Third. Gen. Hough will make requisition on the war department at Washington within a few days for the necessary equipment.

Further Modifies Quarantine.

Another order further modifying the existing foot and mouth quarantine was issued by the department of agriculture and is now effective. The only effect it has on the Ohlo quarantine, the tonget of the present of the counties of Montgomers, Paulding and Summit to the free area. The Kentucky the counties of Bullitt, Jefferson and Okhum are removed from the modified area and put in the restricted eras, which means that stock may be shipped out for early purpose to any point east of the Mississian point of the Tennesses.

Harry McMillin, former cashier of the Morrow County National Bank at Mt. Glead, pleaded guilty to charges of embezsling $23,000 of the bank's funds in federal district court here Mt. Glead, pleaded gullty to charges of embessing 233,000 of the bank's funds in federal district court here and was sentenced to serve six years and eight mouths in the federal pententiary at Moundsville, W. Va., by Judge John E. Sater. He was taken to the prison in charge of deputies to start like sentence. McMillin's counsel, in pleading for mercy, declared much irregularity in the bank's management was due to laxity of the board of directors in watching the bank's business. McMillin was also secretary and treasurer of the Morrow County Building and Loan Association and covered up his shortage for a number of years by transferring securities of the bank and the building and loan association at examination periods. He was a member of a widely known family at Mt. Gliead and his arrest several weeks ago and the subsequent disclosure of irregularities created a sensation. Judge Sater vacated his former order awarding $14,000 counsel fees each to former Federal District Autorney Sherman T. McPherson, of Cincinnati, and the assistant district autorney, Harley E. Burns, of Columbus, both recently resigned, for services in connection with civil action against the Capital City Dairy Co. to recover more than $2-00,000 taxes on oleomargarine. He ordered the money returned to Edward L. Taylor, Jr., receiver for the company. Later the court expects to take up the question of fees for Receiver Taylor, who was awarded $20,000. Payment of both this and the sums to the federal attorneys were protested by United States Attorney General Gregory.

Reserve is Set Aside.

Refuting ontirely the statement credited to liability insurance companies, that the Ohio industrial accident insurance rand, out of which are paid workmen's compensation awards, is on the verge of bank-ruptcy, the State industrial Commission has given out its financial statement as of May 15. The high light of the report is that, setting aside a "catastrophe reserve" and making all necessary allowances, there is a not surplus in the fund of $238,206.06.

The board made public the result of plus in the fund of $258,206.06.

The board made public the result of its financial calculations with little comment. It said:

"The internal rato calculations which are already completed on almost 50 per cent of the 1,000 classifications indicate that there will be a general decrease rather than a general decrease rather than a general increase in the rates as of July 1,1915. It will be necessary, however, to increase some of the rates, particularly in those schedules which have produced a deficit.

"Our experience is demonstrating the comment of the com produced a deficit.

"Our experience is demonstrating that there is a direct tendency on the part of Ohio employers to improve the hazard of their operations. To the extent that this is accomplished will the employers continue to reduce the cost of their insurance."

Ohio Soil Surveys.

The Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station is co-operating this season with the United States Department of Agriculture in soil surveys of Miami, Hamilton and Geauga counties. Under the co-operative arrangement adopted for these soil surveys, each pays the salaries and expenses of its own men, while the federal government bears the expense of inspecting the work and publishing the report for each county. This report will be accompanied by a large map showing in colors the location of the various kinds of soils with reference to roads, schools, churches, watercourses and other features of the county. The nature of the soils, their adaptations for the most advantageous use of fertilizers will also be discussed in detail, together with full information on existing agricultural conditions. Several months will be required to prepare the report and map after the survey has been completed.

O. N. G. to Camp.

Col. Byron L. Barger, of the Fourth regiment of Columbus, will be camp commander of the camp of instruction for officers of the Ohio National Guard, which will be held near Yellow Springs, July 5 to 10. This camp is to prepare the officers for the two big brigade meneuver camps which will be held at this place later in the month and in the early part of August. The First brigade will camp in July and the Second in August.

Agine Orchards Ruined.

Bilght is playing havoc with apple orchards in some parts of Ohio, according to reports reaching the State Agricultural Commission. Chief N.E. Shaw, of the bureau dealing with orchards, has had his force making studies of the blight and has secured co-operation of the federal government in the new menace to the apple industry in Ohio. The State Experiment Station also is at work endeavoring to find a preventive.

PRIZES IN BIBLE SCHOOL PARADE

AT OHIO SUNDAY-SCHOOL

CONVENTION.

DIVIDED INTO TWO CLASSES

Parade Was a Feature— Are Awarded According to Unique Computation.

Western Newspaper Union News Service Zanesville, O.—A unique system of coints whereby the relative accessi-ility of all parts of the state to Zanesville are measured against all other parts of the state, was worked out by parts of the state, was worked out by the Ohio Sunday-school Association for awarding prizes in the Bible School parade, which featured the gathering. The state was divided into two classes, so far as counties go, one group within a radius of 50 miles and the other all outside of 50 miles. The group of counties in the fifty-mile radius, together with the ratio that one man bears to one man in Zanesville, was as follows: Athens, $; Coshocton, 6; Fairfield, 8; Guerney, 6; Hocking, 8; Homes, 9; Knox, 8; Licking, 6; Mornos, 10; Morgan, 5; Noble, 7; Perry, 4, Tuscarawas, 10, and Washington, 9. The computation of this table, however, was a simple matter by comparison with arriving at the importance of one man from the most distant counties as compared to one man in Zanesville. DISEASES NOT BARRED Columbus, O.—With all Justices but one—Judge R. M. Wanamaker—con-curring, the Ohlo Supreme Court has decided that occupational diseases are not within the scope of the elective workmen's compensation law of 1911. As the elective act of 1911 is, in respect to the classification of those who are to be received for "injury received in the course of employment," identical with the present communication. celved in the course of employment, identical with the present compulsory act which became effective January 1, 1914, the dispute finally is settled. The decree of the Court of last resort overturned the judgments of the Hamilton County Court of Appeals and Common Pleas Court, which awarded to David Brown, a Clincinnatt work man, a judgment for $85.25 for injury received while at work. His complaint, contracted during his employment, was "lead colic." The decision of the Court is to be reported, but the opinion has not been written.

by County Prosecutor.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Thomas Taggart, Democratic national committeeman for indians; Mayor Joseph E. Bell, Chief of Police Samuel V. Perrott and 125 others were indicted by the Marion county grand jury here Tuesday, charged with conspiracy to commit a felony through violation of election laws, bribery and blackmail. Taggart and Bell were the first to acknowledge service in the case and was released on bond. Taggart's being $5,000 and Bell's $10,000.

The indictment was returned to Judge James A. Collins about 10:20 a. m. after many weeks of investigation by the grand jury, guided by Alvah J. Rucker, county prosecutor, and his deputies. Indianapolis. Ind. - Thomas Tag tion by the grand jury, guided by Alvah J. Rucker, county prosecutor, and his deputies.

More than a dozen members of Mayor Bell's official family were indicted and as many more members of the police force were named. The others indicted include election officials, ward and precinct leaders, workers at the polis and voters.

48 Counts in Indictment.

The indictment is in 48 counts and covers more than 175 typewritten pages. The number named in it is two more than contained in the indictment returned by the local federal grand jury after its investigation of the Terre Haute election conspiracy. Although 126 men were indicted in the Terre Haute case, only 116 arrests were made. It is said to be the largest number of men ever named in a single bill.

The charges are based on the election of Nov. 3, 1914, the registration of last September and October and the primary of May 5, 1914.

Democrats, Republicans and Progressives are named in the single indictment.

gressives are named in the single indictment.

The indictment charges registration and election officials with conspiring to permit persons to register faisely and to vote faisely in the primary and in the election Another count charges persons with repeating. Other counts allege that certain primary and election boards permitted the destruction of baliots for the purpose of substituting other ballots therefor
Two counts set up a conspiracy to ald and abet primary poli clerks in marking ballots in a manner different from that requested by the voter, while other counts alleged the use of

The civil service is ripped to pieces, and Willis is being made into the chief salonikeeper of the state and righting hardest for the job.

But every reader of the news knows that the legislature substituted for the fake civil service which fixed political appointees upon the payroll permanently without a test of comparative merit, a real competitive civil service, such as is demanded by the new constitution, and created a bipartisan board to enforce it. endorse any share of the payment. To cover five false statements and a poisonous suspicion into one paragraph shows a kind of ability which, fortunately, is rare. The plate matter referred to was issued by the secretary of the good roads organization, Mr. Alsdorff, recently a Democratic senator; it does not 'promote' either Willis or Cole, and Mr. Donahey, tae Democratta auditor, would not issue a warrant for such a payment even if someone made himself liable to the penitentiary by issuing a voucher for it.

The Republican committee owes but $1,800 and Governor Willis paid a generous share of the $8,800 soon after the campaign closed—but that's the business of nobody outside the Republican central committee.

To eay anything semaning of the acts of the Eighty-first general assembly one must falsify facts.

The most causity facts.

The most damning and damnable charge made by the Cox-Finley burean, in Jis effort to discredit the Republican administration, was its story of the lobby, in which it said:

The soum of the earth, the malcoments, the crooks, are now essential; into their own.

The soum of the seria, the malcontents, the crooks, are now semilog: into their own.

Louis B. Brandels, Openial Treasury Counsel.

In the trial of the suit instituted by the Riggs National bank of Washington against officials of the United ton against officials of the United States treatury department Louis D. Brandels of Boston will act as special counsel for the accused officials. The bank has accused Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo. Treasurer John Burke and Comptroller of the Currency John Skelton Williams of conspiracy to wreck it.

For many years Mr. Brandels has been a national figure in American public life. He is an advocate of social reforms, a publicist of renown, a lawyer of distinction, who has served as special counsel for the government in many eciberated cases. Mr. Brandels is regarded as an expert in legislation and administration efficiency.

While Mr. Brandels is largely a product of New England, he is not a Yankee. He was born of German-Jewish parents in Kentucky in ISSS. After a prellminary education in Germany hewent to Harvard Law school, was a professor there for awhile and then began practice in Boston. Soon he was recognized as one of the most success. In lawyers and acquired one of the biggest practices in the city. Atthough a man in public life. Mr. Brandels is not in politics, His use of politics has been merely as a means to the end of pushing social and economic movements. Several years ago his admirers tried to get him to run for mayor of Boston on a nonpartisan ticket, but failed to get him therested.
