The Advantage.
"Hearing those high-pitched opera singers on the phonograph is almost as good as hearing them on the stage."
"Better. You can shut them off whenever you like on the phonograph."
It is better to hit the bull's-eye in a short session than to tire the singer into exhaustion with a long one.

"I'm trying to figure out a way to enlarge the lobby of my theater," said the manager. "It's entirely too small."
"Why not cut out the box office?" suggested one of his patrons. "I haven't been able to buy a ticket there in three years. The speculators have them all."
RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.
To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1/2 oz. of Glycerin. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any drug store can put this up or you can mix it at home as very little cost. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and restore the hair to its natural color. It is excellent for falling hair and will make hair soft and glossy. It will not stain the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

The HOME BEAUTIFUL

Flowers and Shrubs
Their Care and Cultivation

A Famous Rose Garden on Long Island. Note the Interesting Planting of the Firs and Spruce and the Careful Use of Vines on the House.

WORK IN THE ROSE GARDEN

By HUGO ERICHSEN.
Nothing can be said in praise of the rose that has not been said before. Universally recognized as the most beautiful flower, it is the one child of Flora around which a wealth of sentiment, history and poetry clusters. The beauty of the rose is so widely appreciated that the popularity it now enjoys and the demand for hardy garden roses are annually increasing. No garden is complete without roses, and every family ought to grow them in abundance, for never have roses been so cheap and beautiful as now.
Moreover, the cultivation of the flower is so simple that no excuse can be offered for its neglect.

The first requisite for success in rose growing is the selection of good, healthy plants. Weak, sickly roses are dear at any price. Many of these plants lack vigor because they are stunted by remaining too long in the cutting bed or in small pots before they are set out.

In order to obtain the best results, therefore, it is advisable to restrict one's patronage to first-class nurseries, men only, firms that are prepared to furnish strong, well-rooted plants, such as will make a showing the first season and develop into vigorous specimens.

In selecting roses for the garden, it is well to know that those plants are grown in two ways, that is to say, on their own roots or budded low on the Manetti, a briar rose that has largely superseded the dogrose and other stocks in this country, as it is one of the most desirable for our country and climate.

Experts are divided on the question as to which should receive the preference, and the beginner is liable to be in a quandary, because growers are apt to argue for their own method of propagation.

We find many varieties of roses grown on this stock (Manetti) adapt themselves to a greater range of climate and soil, bloom more profusely, endure better the heat of the summer and make far stronger plants than do those grown from their own roots.

Many object to budded roses on account of the suckers they sometimes throw out; but if proper attention is paid to the planting this will rarely be an annoyance.
Budded roses should be planted sufficiently deep, so that the junction of the bud with the stock is from two to three inches below the surface of the

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine—Here is More Proof.

To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Cranston, Wis.—"When I was 16 years old I got married and in 18 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was very irregular. I look it again and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement, and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. MARRA ANAST, North Cranston, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla.—"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tried easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I look it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—Mrs. A. L. McCASLAND, 509 Hays St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.

Roxbury, Mass.—"I was suffering from indigestion and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were hearing down, pains, backache, and slugging liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. E. M. OSOON, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham, Medford, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Three Hundred Million Bushel Crop in 1915
Farmers pay for their land with one year's crop and prosperity was never so great.
Regarding Western Canada as a grain producer, a prominent business man says: "Canada's position today is sounder than ever. There is more wheat, more oats, more grain for feed, 20% more cattle than last year and more hogs. The war market in Europe needs our surplus. As for the wheat crop, it is marvelous and a monument of strength for business confidence to build upon, exceeding the most optimistic predictions."
Wheat averaged in 1915 over 28 bushels per acre
Oats averaged in 1915 over 45 bushels per acre
Barley averaged in 1915 over 40 bushels per acre
Prices are high, markets convenient, excellent land, low in price either improved or otherwise, ranging from $12 to $30 per acre. Free homestead lands are plentiful and not far from railway lines and convenient to good schools and churches. The climate is healthy.
There is no war tax on land, nor are there any uncertainties. For complete information as to best location for settlement, railroad routes and conditions, illustrated prospectus, or to obtain a list of agents, write to:

An engine standing in the Baltimore and Ohio roundhouse at Sandusky started up of its own accord early Tuesday morning and ran unopposed through about three miles of railroad yards before it dived itself at a trestle over the Baltimore & Ohio and New York Central crossing in the southern outskirts of the city. A leaking valve, according to railroad men, screeled enough steam to escape in the cylinders to maintain a speed of fifteen miles an hour.

Word was received here Friday evening announcing the death of Will L. Hamilton at Chicago, Ill., at 11 o'clock. He was a brother of our fellowtownsman, Chauncey Hamilton, and was well known here. He was born at Bellevue, Ohio, and was aged 55 years. Decease was due to a leakage of the heart. He is survived by his wife and two sons who reside in Chicago. He was connected with the Pullman service and was with President McKinley in his tour of the United States and with President Roosevelt in his trips over the country. Funeral services were held in Chicago Monday afternoon, but owing to the illness of Chauncey's wife, he was unable to attend his brother's funeral.

"Cast your alfalfa before swine and your wife will wear pearls," says the Kansas alfalfa expert, Coburn, in urging Ohio farmers to begin growing this profitable legume. "Alfalfa" is adapted to almost any region but must have a soil sweetened with lime and inoculated with soil from a successful alfalfa field or sweet clover corner. Many farmers have failed with alfalfa because of poor seed and careless methods in providing a proper seed bed.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, to eat, to digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one only adds the morning linde bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, suffering headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, heavy breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible, toxic, acrid and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly countenances, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from any store that handles drugs which will cost very little, but is sufficient to clear the system of a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

Whitney Warren was talking at the Metropolitan club in New York about the central empire's submarine policy.

"Any American who supports that policy," he said, "is a champion of the sinkers of the Lusitania and Ancona, must have a taste like the old Scot's."

"Come now," said a fruit farmer, "you can't mean that."

"Yes, I do mean it," said the Scot; "but maybe I'd better tell ye, laddie, for my ain taste I prefer them sour and hard."

"That was Different."

"I just think it should be stopped by law," said the good wife, looking up from her paper.

"What should be stopped by law, my angel?" asked the kind husband.

"This practice of people hypocritizing their nationalities. There should be no German-Americans or French-Americans or Italian-Americans. They should all be just plain Americans."

"But if such a law were passed, my angel," meekly suggested the kind husband, "what affect your practice of signing your name, Miss Bessie Hicks-Muggley?"

"But her reply was a hypocritical sniff.—Judge."

"COFFEE WAS IT. People Slowly Learn the Facts."

"All my life I have been a slave to coffee. I just gradually loving my health, but I used to say 'nonense, it don't hurt me.'" other day as I was spinning Roses for a crown, to dine on. What of all things, mud the hoop. Should I light on, fast asleep, But the little desperado of, The tiny traitor, Love, himself! By the wings I picked him up Like a bee, and in a cup Of my wine I plunged and sank him. Then what d'ye think I did? I drank him. Faith, I thought him dead. Not he! There he lives with tenfold glee, And now thus moment with his wings I feel him tickling my heart-strings.

Valentines of Ye Olden Time

REVIVAL of the dear, demonstrative customs of Saint Valentine's festival is here. With the gay ribbons, the brocades and tinsel and the silken flowers of the Loves that are prevalent in our house and dress decorations, has come a renaissance of sentiment. For the modern maid—whose latest nickname, "the little creature," smacks of the early Victorian—her of the ruffled skirts and the lovelocks has returned the burning banner, the arrows of Cupid, the altar and the garlanded rings; the paired doves nesting in lace paper—all the sweet, passionate symbolism and the lifting rimes that wooed and won the damsel's bemused and hearted great-grandmother.

Stilted Love Letter.

A prose love letter was written by the celebrated earl of Chesterfield in 1661. "Madam," his letter begins. "The dulness of this last cold season doth afford nothing that is new to divert you, but here is a report that I find would keep the truth of which, that I am extremely in love with you. Pray let me know if it be true or false. I am certain that no one but yourself can rightly inform me; for if you intend to use me favorably, and do think I am in love with you, I must certainly say so; but if you intend to receive me coldly, and do not believe that I am in love, I also am certain that I am not; therefore let me entreat you to put me out of a doubt which makes the greatest concern of Dear Madam, your most obedient, faithful servant, Chesterfield."

A Scotchman whose name was "Water" had a maiden graze he called "Laddie." When she said "Oh, be mine, and I'll kiss you," he said "I'll kiss you, and I'll kiss you, and I'll kiss you."

so cheerfully convicting withal. It is pleasing then to be able to conceive of the slant as a young lover, the initiated Archfame of Hymen, as Charles Lamb named him, removed in the early stages of a mounting passion to be the patron of all true lovers, and to inspire forever the daintily sentimental, endearingly naive, over-credulous human documents we call valentines.

The pretty customs of the Lover's Festival have flourished for centuries on the European continent, in England and Scotland, and even in America to some extent. But the ceremonial of Valentine Choosing, which is actually an adaptation of the blind lottery of the Roman Lupercalia, is now unused. Mission the Traveler gives this seventeenth century account of the ritual: "An equal number of maids and bachelors indite their names upon separate billets, which they roll up, and draw by way of lots, the maids taking the men's billets and the men the maids'; so that each of the young men lights upon a girl that he calls his valentine, and each of the girls upon a young man whose she calls hers. By this means each has two valentines; but the man sticks faster to the valentine to whom he had fallen. Fortune having thus directed the company into so many couples, the valentines give balls and treats to their mistresses, wear their billets several days upon their bosoms or sleeves and this little sport often ends in love."

KNOTS AND HITCHES.

Below are a few knots and "hitches" that every boy should know. Get two pieces of light rope and work out each as I describe its formation.

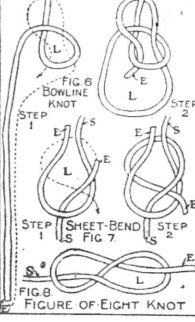

A rope has three parts—the "right" or loop (L, Fig. 1), the "standing part" or long end (S, Fig. 1), and the "left" or end (E, Fig. 1).

"end," usually the short end used in forming the knot or hitch (E, Fig. 1).

To begin with the simple Overhand Knot (Fig. 2), make a loop (L) and pass the end (E) through the loop. In joining two pieces of rope with a Square Knot (Fig. 3), first twist the ends (E, E) as shown in Step 1, and then form an Overhand Knot on top as shown in Step 2. Notice the difference between the positions of the rope ends in this knot and in the many other knots shown in Fig. 3. The Square Knot will hold, the Granny Knot will slip.

The Fisherman's Knot (Fig. 5) is a secure knot and one easily loosed. In Joining two ropes, tie an Overhand Knot in each rope end (E), forming it over the standing part (S) of the other rope, then pull the knots together. They can be loosed by pulling on the ends (E).

The Bowline Knot (Fig. 6) will neither slip nor draw tight. First form a small loop in the rope (L, Step 1, Fig. 6), then bring the end (E) through the loop, around the standing part (S), and down through the loop (Step 2, Fig. 6).

The Sheet Bend (Fig. 7). Make a loop with one rope end (L, Step 1, Fig. 7), then pass the end of the other rope through the loop, around both the standing part and end of loop, and out through the loop between the loop and itself (Step 2, Fig. 7).

Figure of Eight Knot (Fig. 8). Make a loop (L), then pass the end (E) around the standing part (S), and out through the loop. The Half-Hitch (Fig. 9) is a secure method of attaching a rope to a timber when the pull on the standing part will be toward the timber.

SCHOOL BOOK JACKETS.

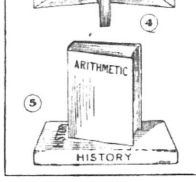

Heavy, glazed brown wrapping paper makes the best paper jackets. If you have none in the house, get a sheet or two from your grocer. Place the book to be covered upon a piece of the paper (Fig. 1), open it, and mark out around the edges of the covers; then measure off a margin of 2 1/2 or 3 inches outside of this, and cut out the piece. Next, cut away corners A (Fig. 2), and cut and bend over tabs B. The dotted lines represent the edges of the covers and with these as a guide it is a simple matter to slip away corners A with a pair of scissors. Tabs B should be as wide as the book is thick, and the full depth of the margins, and should be located in the center of the top and bottom margins (C) obliquely, as shown.

After folding over the tabs, place the opened book inside of the margins, and fold flaps C, then flaps D, over on to the covers (Fig. 3). Dash glue or mullage upon the under side of the end of flaps D, and press down upon flaps E.

Both jackets are more durable than paper ones. Gray or brown fabric dress lining is the best material to use. Cut the cloth in exactly the same way as described for the paper jackets (Fig. 2), but instead of pasting the flaps together tack their corners with thread (Fig. 4). Then lace the thread back and forth from the bottom margin to the lower ones, as shown in Fig. 4, pulling the lacings taut.

The jacket shown in Fig. 8 must be made of heavy canvas, because it requires stiffness to hold its shape. The dotted lines in Fig. 8 indicate the margin to leave outside of the bookcovers, also the lines on which to fold. The top and bottom margins should be 1 1/2 inches wide, the side margins 3 inches wide. Fold the top and bottom margins over, first, as indicated in Fig. 7, then the side margins; and tack the under folds of the ends of the side margins to the folds of the top and bottom margins. The result will be a pocket on each side edge of the jacket (Fig. 8).

THE BUILDING OF A COUNTRY

The Natural Pride of Those Who Take Part in It.

To those who have built railroads through and across the prairies of Western Canada, realizing that great empire of grain and cattle, horse and sheep with the world's markets in the east, must be awarded the privilege of looking upon their work and its results with pardonable pride. If they reminiscence, and tell of the hardships and the privations, why shouldn't they? The broad prairies in which the buffalo roamed and fed, are now alive with cities, towns and villages. Farms—large and small—on which machinery has replaced the team of laborious work of the farm, and making farm life one of the most pleasant and prosperous of occupations—are being cultivated by men of the highest stamp of manhood. Many of these have inherited from their forebears the physical strength and the high type of character that was essential in the days when they bewed their homes out of the virgin forest, and made them what may be seen today, beautiful farms of the west. On the western prairies breed a high type of manhood, wrest from him faults and diseases which would be his were it not for the uplifting influence and character of prairie life.

When the builder of the western Canadian prairie looks upon the result of his work, why shouldn't his chest expand? It was probably some of this feeling of pride that took possession of Sir Donald Mann, vice president of the Canadian Northern Railway the other day in Winnipeg, when he said: "I am not in the habit of giving advice, but I have no hesitation of advising the young men of Canada, every young man to come west and see a piece of western Canada's land that now can be had for the asking and be their own masters."

"It was 36 years ago when I first came to Winnipeg," he said. "At that time there were less than 150,000 people west of Lake Huron in Canada, and the only bit of railway in operation was between St. Boniface and Emerson—about sixty miles. Today there are nearly 20,000 miles of railway in actual operation and the population is over two and a quarter million, a wonderful achievement in such a short period you will agree when you have contemplated the result."

"At that time all the flour, meat and many other supplies for our contracts were brought from the States. Now our own grain and stock is shipped to day. You have a grain production exceeding a billion bushels and yet only a comparatively small area of the tillable land is under the plow. Five years hence you will be more than doubling that." Great Publisher: Certainly not. Our idea is to cut it in half and make two novels of it.—Judge.

After using three boxes I was somewhat relieved and I stopped the treatment. In the spring of 1914 I had another attack. I had another attack of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they relieved me again. I used three boxes. This is now three years ago and my Backache has not returned in its severity, and by using another two boxes a little later on, the pain left altogether and I have had no trouble since. Curious to See The Big War He Saw More Than He Cared to.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Desiring to see something of the great European war, I resolved to go abroad and visit the armies of both opposing forces. Fortifying myself with a passport from the state department at Washington, I sailed for England on an American steamer. The change in the conditions from peace to war was evident the time I went aboard the ship. Baggage was searched for explosives, passports were examined—indeed, every precaution was used common among peoples who have thrown off the shackles in each other that results from peace.

As soon as our ship reached the zone that the Germans had proclaimed to be in a state of war the boats were swung out over the water, into a position to be stepped into from the deck, an evidence of the fact that though we were on an American liner we were in danger. Then the passengers began to strap on their life belts, and some of them did not again rise in which we were on the water. Every night an enormous American flag was hung so that its full length and width would be displayed, illuminated by electric lights. This was to show commanders of submarines our nationality.

Since I had come from home to see something of war, I was not particularly interested. My time came before my return when I had had quite enough of war and was glad to return to a country where a condition of peace existed.

Having crossed the channel, I approached the rear of the English army. The deadlock in France and Belgium. The great drives of the Germans for Calais were over, and during a good deal of the time the men in the trenches were idle. While visiting the British trenches, a trace occurred between the men of both sides. The Germans put up a sign: "Let's have a rest today. No firing." The British assented, and the men were swapping articles in common use. This gave me a more intimate view of war than when I was in danger of being blown up on the ocean. As I proceeded my own individual experiences became more and more peaceful, though I was unknowingly in the greatest danger of my life.

From visiting the English lines I went to the French. Of course I visited headquarters, showed my passports and asked permission to inspect the trenches. On my way to the trenches a fellow countryman, who told me that it would be impossible for me to obtain a permit, for he had just been refused. Either an attack was expected or after was to be made. At any rate, there was some reason why all permits were refused. However, I resolved to try, and, assuming a good deal of confidence, I approached the officer charged with the granting of passes and asked to be permitted to visit the trenches.

He looked at me knowingly, then, asking me to wait a moment, went into another room for the officers were in a house—and upon his return he came down at a table and wrote me the desired permit. I was very much astonished. However, I gave no sign of surprise and after thinking for a moment he took him into another room.

I visited the trenches nearest headquarters and found a different state of affairs from what I had hit upon on the British line. We were obliged to descend before reaching those at the front in order to avoid being shot. Every man was on the qui vive, every man to put a ball into any enemy who showed even the tip of a finger. When I had seen all I wished to see I left the trench and, thanking my conductor, was about to set off in an opposite direction from headquarters when he said politely that Colonel Arnoux, the officer who had given me my permit, would like to see me again. Of course I returned with him, and when I entered the colonel looked to find me at the table at which he was writing and bade me sit in a chair beside him.

"Have you visited the other side?" he asked.

"What other side?"

"The Germans."

"Not yet, but I expect to do so."

"Let me see your passport."

He had examined the document which I had shown him when I first met him. I took it from my pocket and handed it to him. He glanced at it and tugged it on the table.

"How do you expect to get to the other side?" he asked.

"By hook or crook," I replied, "unless you will have the goodness to pass me through your lines."

"He thought a moment, then said that he would have to refer the matter to one of higher rank than himself, but he thought it possible that I might be recommended for a pass. He then must have confidence that I was all that I purported to be. Finally, he would keep my passport for awhile. American passports had been found, and he would be advisable to have them critically examined. Meanwhile the colonel would be pleased to provide me with quarters. There was a vacant room in his tent, which would be at my disposal, and he would be happy to have me eat at his mess.

"This suited my plans greatly. I would be a guest at headquarters and might not pass through the lines without having to go to Holland or some other neutral region. The colonel showed me to my room himself and later took me to lunch with him, introducing me to the officers of his mess. Having luncheon, I was permitted to go where I liked and spent the afternoon visiting all things, not on the A. S. line, pertaining to war, in which they believe now to me—I was greatly interested. During my perambulations I noticed a sergeant who seemed to be everywhere I was. It is good saying some common sense guns that had recently reached the front, he was not far away examining a pile of brasses taken from the enemy in a recent fight. I was curiously observing an armed auto he was tossing about some empty shells and fragments that had been sent from German guns. However, presuming that my seeing him near me so frequently was coincidental, I thought nothing about it.

At the evening meal Colonel Arnoux called me on the softness of my voice and the absence of a beard, saying that I would make up well for a woman. I told him that during my university studies when a Greek play was given I was assigned a woman's part. Thereupon the colonel remarked that German men spies had been captured disguised as women and invariable suggested that I might make a good thing doing secret service work for the French in women's bearing. Seeing that I did not take kindly to the suggestion, he turned the subject.

The next morning I was awakened by the fact that he meant me harm if I disobeyed. I robed myself in the articles and was ordered out into another room where a dozen officers and men stood staring at me critically.

After they had looked me over I was ordered back to my room and left to change my clothes. When I attempted to come back I found a sentry at the door who pushed me back with his gun.

It was evident that something had gone wrong, but what it was I could not tell. I remained in confinement all day, but when evening came it brought Colonel Arnoux, who, dismissing my guard, invited me to come out. "I must apologize to you," he said, "for the treatment you have received. The truth is, a woman who greatly resembled you, in fact, was captured a few days ago and mysteriously disappeared. I gave her a permit to visit her brother in the trenches, but it was found that she was a German spy. It was apparent that she was a spy, and we suspected that she was a man in woman's clothing. This woman was caught hiding in an abandoned trench in our rear."

I pondered, at the same time breathing a sigh of relief. The colonel continued, "Upon having escaped death, and I admit that your escape was a narrow one. Upon your inspection and my own's appeared to be a number of persons who had been the other party nine out of twelve pronounced you the same person. For my part, I was convinced of your identity with her the moment I saw you. You were to have been shot tomorrow morning."

"I am very grateful to such a person, who for support. The colonel went to a closet, took out a bottle and a glass, poured out a tumbler half full of liquor and handed me a drink. Having been thus tided over the shock, I pulled myself together and told Colonel Arnoux that, with his permission, I would take my departure.

"Would you like to see the person who you were supposed to be?" he asked.

"Thank you, no. I'm the party man or woman."

"Woman—a refined lady."

"I suppose, in that case, she will not be prosecuted against."

The colonel's face took on a curious expression.

"She is not a spy?" I asked.

"A very beautiful case of espionage," he replied. "I recognized you would not execute a woman."

The only case after a brief silence, "My friend," he said, "in this war we have seen a lot of those things which this permit was given. Our warfare has dropped the veneering it assumed under its peaceful aspect. We are fighting a life and death struggle."

My curiosity and vanished. I did not expect to be passed to the German lines. I took the first passage I could get for England. Before I got a ship for America a Zeppelin dropped a bomb within a hundred feet of me. I was picked up senseless and taken to a hospital. In a week I had recovered and just before leaving port a liner was torpedoed and the wrecked survivors were brought in, the most pitiful lot I ever saw. All the war I set up with a life belt about me, my shoes and outer clothing loosened so that I would be ready for the water at any moment. Upon my arrival at home I was beset by guesses from persons to tell them all about the war. My invariable reply was that, being a clear case of it, they might as well see it themselves. I always refused to reply that it was as you do.

Croup

"I don't think there is a more anxious time for parents than when their children have croup. Without their eyes peering with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy they must wait for the doctor and listen to the choking, metallic cough, and watch their little one gasping for breath.

"Give" Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. You know the great danger of croup is the formation of a false membrane in the larynx, and until this is expelled relief cannot be obtained, and the spasmodic choking continues. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in frequent doses. It will loosen this membrane and cause the child to expect it, vomiting.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is an absolutely safe and certain remedy for croup, and if given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack.
