Ohio Crop Report, October 1.

The first joint report of the Ohio Department of Agriculture and the U. S. Bureau of Crop Estimates issued at the State House at Columbus, shows a large production of all kinds of small grains for Ohio this year. "Bumper" crops of oats are reported from many counties. Spring wheat, where grown, yielded better than winter wheat. The corn and potato crops, because of drought and early frosts, are somewhat below the average. Apples and pears are a small crop and very scarce. The hay crop for the state was considerably above that of last year and much better than the average for the past ten years.

CORN—The condition of the corn crop for the state on October 1 is reported at 76 per cent of normal, compared to 82 per cent on October 1 last year and a ten year average of 83 per cent. It is now estimated that 135,420,000 bushels will be produced this year in the state, compared to 150,100,000 bushels last year. It will be recalled that because of the early frosts last year a large part of the corn was soft and unfit for market. The quality of the crop is much better this year.

WINTER WHEAT—The reports indicate an average yield of winter wheat better than 19 bushels per acre for the state, or a total estimated production of 38,722,000 bushels, based on the preliminary estimate of acreage compared to 41,140,000 bushels last year. The ten year average yield for the state is 16.4 bushels, with an average production of about 23,000,000 bushels a year. The quality of the crop is excellent. The largest average yields occurred in the northwestern and north central districts, where the returns show an average yield of between 22 and 23 bushels per acre. The southwestern counties also show high average yields.

RYE—The estimated average yield of rye for the state is estimated at 17 bushels per acre, with a total estimated production of 1,822,000 bushels, compared to 1,620,000 bushels last year and an average production for the past five years of 1,387,000 bushels. The crop was generally good throughout the state.

SPRING WHEAT—The average yield of spring wheat is estimated at 21.8 bushels per acre or a little better than two bushels an acre more than winter wheat. The preliminary estimate of spring wheat for the state was 15,000 acres, which would give a total production for the state this year of 322,500 bushels. The spring wheat crop for the past two years has been especially good, and indications point to an increase in the acreage planted to this crop in the northwestern counties next spring.

OATS—The estimated average yield of oats for the state is 44 bushels per acre. The ten year average for the state is 34.6 bushels. The preliminary estimate of acreage was 1,917,000 acres, which gives a total estimated production of 81,348,000 bushels. Remarkably high yields are reported from many counties in the state.

BARLEY—The average yield per acre of barley is estimated at 32.5 bushels compared with 33 bushels last year and a ten year average of 28.1 bushels. The total production for the state is estimated at 1,402,500 bushels, compared to 1,230,000 bushels last year.

BUCKWHEAT—The condition of buckwheat on October 1 is estimated at 70 per cent of normal, compared to 87 per cent on October 1 last year and a ten year average of 82 per cent. The total production this year is estimated at 438,200 bushels, compared to 430,000 bushels last year. The growth of the crop was delayed by a severe drought at the time it was planted, causing a very slow germination of the seed. The rains the latter part of August and in September greatly benefited the crop in the northeastern counties, where 70 per cent of the crop is grown.

IRISH POTATOES—The condition of Irish potatoes on October 1 is reported at 64 per cent of normal, compared to 89 per cent on October 1 last year, and a ten year average of 70 per cent. The total production is now estimated at 11,284,480 bushels, compared to 16,000,000 bushels last year. The potato crop has been greatly reduced by drought and the extreme hot weather during the first two weeks of August. Some of the late planted crop has shown considerable improvement during September and will make better than an average crop.

CLOVER SEED—The condition of clover seed on October 1 is estimated at 64 per cent of normal, compared to 69 per cent on October 1 last year and a five year average of 77 per cent. The total production is now estimated at 310,400 bushels. Grasshopper damage is reported from practically every portion of the state.

TOBACCO—The condition of the tobacco crop at time of harvest is estimated at 90 per cent of normal, compared with 87 per cent last year and a ten year average of 81 per cent. The total estimated production of the crop is now estimated at 112,963,200 pounds, compared to 99,072,000 pounds last year.

APPLES—The apple crop except where sprayed, is light in most sections, especially through the central counties from the Indiana line east. In fact in some places it is almost a failure.

Opening of Second Fall Term at the Oberlin Business College.

The Second Fall Term at the Oberlin Business College will open Nov. 1, 1918, at which time new classes will be formed in all departments. Owing to the unprecedented demand by the Government for stenographers and office help in general, and also because of the equally great demand for young men and women to fill business and office positions there never was a better time to enter a business college.

The demand upon the Business College at Oberlin has been unusually heavy because it enrolls an older class of students and offers courses of training conceded to be the most thorough and practical given anywhere in the U. S. This school is offering a Civil Service Course which prepares either for Government or business positions. Every student who has taken this course the past year, passed the Civil Service Examination and received appointment at Washington or elsewhere paying in no case less than $1100.

Fact is the judicious use of one's power at the right time.

Opposition To Premature Peace.

Ex-President Taft is expected to make the principal addresses at the "Win the War for Permanent Peace" Convention called by Gov. Cox to meet in Columbus on the afternoon of October 24. The Governor as Chairman of the Ohio Branch of the Council of National Defense, has asked the Chairmen of the County Defeat Councils to appoint delegates, so that the whole state will be represented.

The convention will be one of a series organized throughout the country by the League to Enforce Peace, of which Mr. Taft is President. The Governor is an Honorary Vice-President of the League and one of the ten Honorary who spoke at the national convention of the organization held last May in Philadelphia. Five thousand delegates, representing every state, attended this national convention and its effect in declaring a united national sentiment in opposition to Germany's peace offensive was so marked that the effort has been extended throughout the United States.

The League emphasizes the fact that the movement and these conventions are absolutely non-partisan. Proof of this is the fact that a Democratic Governor and a Republican ex-President will be the League's chief representatives at the Columbus meeting.

Similar conventions were held during September in the states of Washington, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico, the procedure being the same as that followed here. The convention calls were issued by the Governors, all of whom were successfully succeeded. While one of the main purposes is to stimulate interest in the organization of a League of Nations, the leaders of the movement are a unit in believing that it is outside the realm of party politics. They point out that the leading exponents of the movement in this country are a Democratic President, Mr. Wilson, and a Republican ex-President, Mr. Taft, that Charles E. Hughes is an officer of the League to Enforce Peace and Alton B. Parker, a former Democratic Vice-President, is its Vice-President, and next to Mr. Taft, its chief executive officer. The members of the Executive Committee and the members of the state branches include men not only of diverse political views but representing almost every worth-while activity.

Because Ohio is Mr. Taft's own state, an effort will be made at the Columbus convention to set the Ohio branch of the League to Enforce Peace at the state level. Gov. Cox calls attention to this purpose in his convention call. A complete list of state officers will be chosen, or re-elected, and committees of three will be named to represent the League in each county.

The Convention Call quotes at length from President Wilson's speech of September 27, in which he declared that a League of Nations must be an essential part of the final peace conference, which is being hastened by the collapse of Germany and Allied victories on the Western Front.

Don't move.

You have lived in Plymouth for years. You have friends here. You have become a factor in her hopes, her ambitions, her customs, and her enterprises.

There may be a temporary period of unrest that has its origin in the inflated prices of war conditions, but war conditions are unstable. Peace comes and immediately the industrial and commercial intensity subsides, and in the subsidence you will invariably do better, and reach a more congenial level of it finds you in your old home among your old friends, and attached to your old job and environment.

The business agent that is seeking your favor now will have but little interest in you when the day of readjustment is at hand. In fact the business agent has but little interest in you at the time he presents his lure of better wage. He is the paid agent of a firm that needs your labor temporarily. Get that word—temporarily. If peace comes and the stress of war need is slackened, there will be no business agent to go out and find you another job. His interest in you stops when the stress stops.

You may receive a slight increase for a time, but this increase is contained in moving expense, higher rents, additional purchases which all moves enforce, and the transportation expense of your family.

Besides there is the unrest you experience in your new location. The strange community, the regret that follows the breaking of old ties, the disappointment you experience over working conditions, for the business agent is paid to color, and smooth. He's paid to arouse in you a discontent. He knocks your old employer, knocks your town, and if you are not careful you get out your own hammer and join him, and the anvil solo becomes at once an anvil duet.

He leads you to say things about your employer that down in your heart you know you should not say. He leads you to say things about your old town that down in your heart you know is not true. That's his game, and when he gets you to knocking, gets you to evidence a discontent, he knows that he is making headway. Knows that you are swallowing his bait.

Remember that business agents are often paid by the head. He gets nothing unless he gets his man, and there's nothing that he will not do, nor say, if he can thereby break you from your old employer, and drop you down into strange conditions, strange relations and strange employments.

Another thing. Going into a new shop is not the most inspiring experience. There will be those who assume you a novice. They will fault your work. Their attitude will be one of superiority, and you will be very much like the bound boy at the smelting.

You have nothing to take to the new shop that you can not give to your old employer. Here you are a fixture. You are a part of the works. You go to your work with a confidence in your ability. You know the game and the production. You know what to do, how to do it, and in a long measure you are your own master.

Yonder, you will go in as a stranger. Unused to the shop and its product. You feel a certain incapacity that unmans you. And over against all this remember that there will be those that will impede your progress. They will see to it that your advancement is slow. You will not only have a strange job, but you will have a strange fight that will take out all the roses that the business agent planted in your pathway.

There is not much difference in communities. They are all much alike. Some are bigger than others, but the average is much the same. Increased wage calls for increased living expenses. Shelby is a little larger than Plymouth. Mansfield is a little larger than Shelby, and Cleveland is larger than Mansfield. Otherwise they are much the same. The community that pays you more, also has away of taking it away from you, so where is the advantage.

Some people think it great to live in a city. They think there is something superior in city life. That's nonsense, and the funny part of it all is that the fellow who assumes this superior attitude is the fellow who has nothing but a job, and lives in nothing but a house, has nothing to eat but food, nothing to wear but clothes, and no place to go but away.

We have all these in Plymouth, and why not stick. We occasionally transplant a tree, but in the uprooting it loses much of its vitality, much of its foliage, is a long time restoring itself to its former vigor,—and sometimes it dies.

Transplanting a family is very much akin. Stick.

Obituary.

Joseph Howard Clark was born May 19, 1863, and departed this life on October 11, 1918, aged 55 years, 4 months, and 22 days. He was born in the same house in which he died and in which he had lived his entire life with the exception of about ten years.

The deceased is the last survivor of his father's family, two brothers having preceded him to the better land. For the past forty years Mr. Clark has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Fraternally he was a member of the I. O. O. F. lodge and also a member of the Auburn Grange.

On Oct. 21, 1885 he was united in marriage to Effie A. Dawson, who with one son, Russell, are left to mourn the loss of husband and father.

For the past year Mr. Clark has been suffering from valvular heart trouble and for the past six weeks has been an intense sufferer. For this reason he was patiently waiting for the final summons to come and just a few hours before his death made the remark that he was just passing from one life into another.

The funeral service was held at the home. Rev. W. E. Hollett conducted the service and was assisted by Rev. Rough. Rev. Hollett spoke from text St. John 14:3. "That where I am there ye may be also." Rev. Rough told of his association with Mr. Clark in the Auburn Grange.

The floral offerings were beautiful and the music furnished by the M. E. quartet of Plymouth most appropriate. Interment was in Greenlawn cemetery.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to thank the neighbors and friends for their kindness during the sickness and death of our husband and father. Also those who furnished the floral offerings, the quartet for their beautiful music, and the ministers for their messages of comfort.

"COLLEGE STUFF" DOES IN SHAPING OUT MARINE ENGINEERS

Technical Training of Seasoned Mechanics Solves Problem of Keeping Up Adequate Supply of Licensed Men to Drive New Ships—Land-Trained Engineers Taught Secrets of Engine-Room Practice on Salt Water.

Washington—"Where you going to get engineers for all them ships?" This somewhat colloquial inquiry was directed many times to representatives of the United States shipping board recruiting service when the big news of the plan for bridging the Atlantic with American cargo carriers to supply our armies and allies in Europe first projected itself upon the lay mind of the country.

The public had been told there were not even enough marine engineers who were citizens to man the ships flying the flag in peace times. So the man in the street could not see where the supply was coming from for the thousands of ships to be manned as merchantmen out of the 2000 to be built by the shipping board for the new merchant marine.

New idea for training engineers. Professor E. F. Miller, head of the engineering section of that high-class institution, holds a marine engineer's license, and is an authority on marine practice in engineering.

The first shipping board class at "Tech" approved of Professor Miller and the "college stuff" so decidedly that it had not been at the college a week before the value of the new system was fully demonstrated.

Engineering Students of United States Shipping Board in Marine Engineering Laboratory at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Developed since the war began. This system is entirely novel and distinctly American. Under it no outside talent has been required to provide instructors and no student not a citizen has been given instruction.

When the war began the board proceeded on the theory that there were many hundreds of marine engineers—oilers, water tenders and firemen—who could be made into engineers by a little encouragement and instruction. It estimated also that there were many hundreds of marine engineers following other pursuits ashore when the war began, who could be interested by the government in a proposition to return to the sea.

The attendance at these schools to date has been more than 3,500. The course of instruction is based on the premise that the man taught is already a thorough mechanic. Instruction is given him in the things he would find hard to pick up by rote of thumb experience.

Some of the schools hold day sessions only, others have evening classes in order that the students may follow their usual occupations by day.

Subjects for intensive study. In a day school, as at the Massachusetts "Tech," the forenoons are usually devoted to lectures and the afternoons to laboratory and demonstration work.

The idea was to give the men needed by marine engineers a short, intensive course of training at best technical colleges before sending them to sea.

The idea was so novel that the government had to invent a little method to shy at it. "College stuff" seemed too "infalutal" to be worth much. The old-fashioned engineer got his knowledge in the same way as the boys in the Dutch boys had, by a long demonstration. He was "showed" by his superior on the job. That had become the accepted way of training engineers in American ships.

But the "new" method had not long been its bow before mechanics seemed to see something in it. The foremen and oilers took to it; and they came out with second or third assistant engineers' licenses in such a surprising short time that the method of their advancement commanded respect.

For demonstrating work the class of sixty or seventy members is divided into small groups, each under an instructor, who conducts the tests. These for the first week include engine details, slide-valve setting, gauge testing, indicator card taking and finally indicator card reading, which involves familiarity with a special instrument, the planimeter.

During the week every man in the class has his special practice in these matters. In the second week the subjects are measurement of horsepower, lining up of engine, piston valve setting and the condenser and air pump. The third week the laboratory subjects are the saltometer, duplex pump, water column and safety valve, while in the last week there are exercises with injectors, turbine-driven pumps, and an afternoon spent in a large stationary power house.

HUN HATES COLUMBUS; HE FOUND AMERICA

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Rev. Daniel L. March, just returned from the western front after a six months' visit, tells this story: A German prisoner was out of humor and was being "kidded" by the Americans.

"Why so glum, Fritzle?" asked one doughboy. "Are you 'sore' at France?" No. Fritzle wasn't sore at France, nor England, nor Belgium.

"Well, what's the matter?" "I'm sore at Christopher Columbus," was the reply. "He discovered America."

BOY SCOUTS AND FIREARMS

The question as to the policy of the Boy Scouts of America with reference to the use of firearms and technical military training for boys of the scout age is apparently not clearly understood by some.

It should be remembered that the scouting program is primarily for boys in their teens. Boys are accepted as members of the Boy Scouts of America at twelve years of age. Indeed, the average age of enrolled scouts is from fifteen to fifteen and a half years.

The scheme of organization and method of carrying out the program is such as to make it necessary and more effective to have all scouts receive the same instruction and pass the same tests for tenderfoot, second-class and first-class degrees and the award of 68 different kinds of merit badges.

Great care has been taken to place emphasis in the scouting program upon the things which are of fundamental importance and applicable and helpful to the largest number of boys of scout age in developing them physically, mentally and morally and preparing them for the responsibilities of citizenship.

SCOUT MAY WEAR "SHORTS" There never was a time when a boy wasn't interested in pants—whether they should be short or long. Just now the boy scouts have brought up the question of wearing "shorts," as the English call them, leaving the knees bare. One official says: "We adopted shorts as the official camp dress, and I have been wearing them for six weeks myself. I am heartily in favor of making them the official scout 'breeches,' not only for summer but for winter also. I would like to see a more rigid standard set for the scout uniform, and my idea of what it should be is a tan short-collared and buttoned stockings turned down below the knees, shorts, and scout shirt. Discard the coat altogether. Unless it is made to order it looks sloppy on anyone but a fat scout. It is a nuisance in summer and does not keep you warm in the winter."

HOW TO CURE BACKACHE AND NERVOUSNESS

Told by Mrs. Lynch From Own Experience.

SCOUT SAW A U-BOAT SUNK

On the books of Troop No. 2 of Ridgefield Park, N. J., he is down as Tenderfoot Scout Richard N. J. Murphy. But it is now months since he has attended a troop meeting, and he says himself that he does not know when he will find time to take his second-class tests.

"Been across often?" he was asked. "Seven times," he answered. "Any fights?" "Five." "And?" Dick Murphy gave his slow smile. "There's two U-boats that will never trouble a ship again," he said.

He is sixteen just—just a slip of a boy, with a twinkle of adventure in his eyes. Only yesterday, it seems, he was sharing a dog-tent on the overnight hike of Troop No. 2, and now he is a veteran of service. He has stood his watch through the anxious, spray-fog hours of the night. He has heard the guns of war speak, and has felt the thrust and the tension of battle. Yet, when he comes home for a few days at the end of each dangerous trip, he is the same old Scout Murphy—pleasantly fond of ice cream sodas, ready for a frolic and a laugh, with his tarnished tenderfoot put all the while fastened on the inside of his brass-buttoned coat that proclaims a cadet of the American merchant marine.

Providence, R. I.—"I was all run down in health, was worried about backache, my back ached all the time. I had tried many things but had no ambition for anything. I had taken a number of medicines which did me no good. One day I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for women, so I tried it. My nervousness and backache and headaches disappeared, gained weight and feel fine, so I can honestly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman who is suffering from any of the symptoms or nature's warnings, which indicate a functional disturbance or an unhealthy condition which often develops into a more serious ailment. Women in this condition should not conclude to drag along without help. Profit by Mrs. Lynch's experience, and try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. HIS SUDDEN MOVE EXPLAINED

Razor Demonstrator Was Not Actuated by Desire to Impress Maggie and Her Companions.

Two middle-aged women and a skinny boy in knee pants stood in front of a show window to watch a demonstrator do things with a razor. His work failed to satisfy one of the women, who said: "My soul and body, why don't he peep up and show what his pay-ten can do? I like to see people work like they took some intrust in it."

But Maggie had nothing to do with it. The young man's sudden spurt was entirely due to a clean-faced man who had paused to take in the demonstration.

WOOL AND MEAT ARE WAR NEEDS

Principal Sheep Requirements Are Dryness, Good Ventilation, and Sunlight.

WET COATS FOSTER DISEASE

Protection From Winter Rainfalls and Heavy Snowfalls is Desirable—Freedom From Drafts is Most Important.

Sheep supply two very essential war needs—meat and wool. During the winter they need special care. The heavy coat will keep them warm if provided it is dry, but if it becomes wet the animals will suffer from chills and sickness.

In any part of the United States the main essentials of sheep barns are dryness and freedom from drafts. Unless lambs are to be dropped in cold weather, no expense to provide warmth is necessary, as the lamblings should seldom be closed. Protection from winter rains and heavy snowfalls is desirable, but the best results may be expected if the ewes are allowed access to a dry bed in the open.

Warmth, Dryness and Light.

Since sheep do not require quarters that are especially warm, a single wall will ordinarily insure sufficient warmth. If lambs are dropped in very cold weather, a temporary covering over the lambing panels will provide warmth, or a small space can be partitioned off in which to keep a few ewes until their lambs become sturdy.

BUY EWES IN FALL

Many farmers make a practice of buying ewes in the fall, breeding them and selling the lambs the following summer. Stocked ewes can be carried through the winter on wheat and rye fields if not pastured too closely, or on clover hay with some roots and a little timothy meal. Lambs should be culled early and sold as early as possible. Ewes to be carried through the winter should be provided with a good ration of winter feed.

Feed Cows Legume Hay.

In co-operation with the extension department of Purdue university, the United States department of agriculture last year made an investigation of the cost of producing milk in 10 dairy herds in Fortier county, Ind. In that study it was found that when other conditions were the same the dairymen who fed the largest quantity of clover, alfalfa, and other legume hays used 38 per cent less grain with less loss in the production of usable milk than those who fed only grain. It is the dairymen who fed legume hay obtained as much milk from 62 pounds of grain as the others obtained from 100 pounds of grain. Such a saving is certainly worth while. Patriotism demands increased production: the high cost of living demands economical production; both these demands are met when all our good cows are kept, and when their milk flow is maintained at low cost.

Feeding Racks for Sheep.

Commercial hay and grain racks are probably the most convenient for feeding small lots of sheep. The open rack is suitable for use in barns where feeding can be done by passing directly from the feed alley to the rack, thus obviating the difficulties which follow from entering pens filled with sheep. Some shepherds prefer a rack with closed sides instead of a tray such a rack requires that the hay be eaten through an opening at the top.
