Richland County's Crop Report.

Figures compiled at the office of the county auditor show the number of acres planted to different crops and a comparison for the years of 1918 and 1919.

Corn, which is the most important of all, shows a falling off, the number of acres in 1918 being 31,258, while this year but 28,625 acres were planted with corn. In 1918, 37,033 acres were planted to wheat, while last year 40,249 acres were sown. This may account for the falling off in the number of acres planted to corn.

Little difference is found in the number of acres sown to oats, 25,023 in 1918 and 24,561 in 1919.

Buckwheat cakes will be scarce next winter if other counties did not sow more to this crop than did Richland county. In 1918 only 94 acres were sown, but this year 104 acres are reported.

Hay shows a big increase in acreage. In 1918 this county had 36,755 acres of hay and this year it was increased to 39,475 acres. The acreage planted to potatoes also shows a big increase, 9,055 in 1918 and 21,074 this year.

The number of maple trees tapped is almost the same for the two years, 23,959 last year and 23,900 this year.

From Shelby Globe.

A rather peculiar incident occurred today, which would lead one to believe that one Sergeant Warren C. Stinson had been dead and then come to life. The details of the miracle are these: A letter was returned this morning to Mrs. Stimson by the postoffice department which she had written to her husband when he was located in a Long Island camp October 19, 1918. The letter was stamped thusly on the front: "Returned to writer. Directory service given can not be delivered as addressed. Deceased, verified July 19, 1919." And on the back the following inscription in black letters: "Deceased, verified casualty section central records office, A. E. F." Now, how is that? Seems like Mark Twain's falsely reported death, which he explained in his own words as "Grossly exaggerated," for Sergeant Stinson today is, and has been for the last several months, chief operator of tractors for the Shelby Tractor Co-operative Co., and does not seem the least bit "deceased." It seems that the casualty section of the central records office has made a bad job of verification as the sergeant has, after two consecutive enlistments, received an honorable discharge from the army and is now with his wife at their home in this city.

John McElroy, publisher of the National Tribune, says that the bill giving the increase of pension to soldiers of the war of the rebellion and to their widows also removing the ban on marriage, is about finished in the committee and ready for action. No doubt, he says, it will be passed as reported out. The bill carries $50 per month irrespective of age or service for every soldier and $30 per month for the widows with an increase up to $2 for those disabled who need care and attention.

RESOLUTION

Declaring the Necessity of Improving West Broadway St. and Wenslick Alley, so-called, in the Village of Plymouth, Ohio, by the construction of a sewer.

BE IT RESOLVED by the Council of the Village of Plymouth, three-fourths of the whole number elected thereto, concurring as follows, to wit:--

Section 1. That it is deemed and hereby declared necessary to construct a sewer from a point where Wenslick Alley, so-called, intersects West Broadway St. in said Village and running thence in a North-westerly direction to an outlet at the Corporation line on the Gardiner Brooks land, a distance of 2500 feet.

Section 2. That said sewer shall be constructed of iron pipe in accordance with the plans, specifications, estimates and profiles heretofore prepared by Harry A. Kemp, Engineer and now on file in the office of the Clerk of said Village, which said plans, specifications, estimates and profiles are hereby approved.

Section 3. That the whole cost of said improvement less one-fiftieth (1-50) thereof shall be assessed upon all the abutting, adjoining, adjacent and contiguous lots and lands proportionately to the benefits which may result from the improvement, which said lots and lands are hereby determined and declared to be especially benefitted by said improvement; and the cost of said improvement shall include the expense of the preliminary and other surveys, and of printing and publishing the notices, resolutions and ordinances required, and the serving of said notices, the cost of construction together with interest on bonds, issued in anticipation of collection of deferred installments of assessments; interest on certificates of indebtedness, if any, and all other necessary expenditures.

Section 4. That the assessments to be levied shall be paid in two semi-annual installments, with interest on deferred payments at the rate of six per cent, per annum, provided that the owner of any property assessed may at his option pay such assessment in cash within thirty days from and after passage of the assessment ordinance, in which case said cash assessment shall not include any item of interest on bonds, or the expense of anticipation of the collection of deferred installments of assessment.

Section 5. That the bonds of said Village of Plymouth in said State of Ohio, shall be issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments by installments and in an amount equal thereto.

Section 6. That the remainder of the cost of said improvement together with any damage which may be awarded any owner of adjoining lands and interest thereon, and the costs of expense of any such award shall be assessed upon all the lands to be improved by said Village of Plymouth and shall be paid by issuance of bonds in the manner provided by law.

Section 7. That to provide funds to carry on said improvement before said bonds are issued, and in anticipation thereof, certificates of indebtedness are hereby authorized to be issued from time to time in such amounts as may be necessary to pay estimated interest on said bonds bearing interest at a rate not to exceed six per cent, per annum, and the Mayor and Clerk are authorized to issue said certificates and to dispose of the same, and said certificates shall pledge the faith and credit of said Village for the payment thereof.

Section 8. That for the purpose of providing the necessary funds to pay the interest on said bonds promptly, when and as the same falls due and to create and maintain a sinking fund, sufficient to discharge the principal of said bonds at maturity, there shall be and is hereby levied on all taxable property of the said Village returned for taxation in addition to all other taxes, a direct tax amounting to $100,000 in 1919, 1920 inclusive, in an amount sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds as it accrues, and to provide a sinking fund for the final redemption at maturity.

Section 9. That said tax shall be, and is hereby ordered certified, and assessed upon the tax duplicate and collected by the same officers, in the same manner, and at the same time that the taxes for general purposes in each of said years are certified, extended and collected; and all funds derived from said tax shall be placed in said sinking fund, which together with interest collected on the same, shall be irrevocably pledged to the payment of interest on said bonds.

Section 10. That the Clerk of said Village is hereby directed to cause the execution of the passage of this Resolution to be served upon the owner or owners of each piece of property to be assessed in the manner provided by law, and to cause the return of said service.

Section 11. That any owner of a lot or land abutting or adjoining upon said improvement, who claims that he will sustain dam-

A Great Peanut Crop.

With the exception of Alabama, Texas leads all other states this year in production of peanuts, the total crop for the state being estimated at 12,478,000 bushels, an increase of 200,000 bushels over last year. The increase for the whole country will be 1,000,000 bushels, estimating the total crop at 55,311,000 bushels. We shall see whether this great supply of peanuts from which cooking oil can be made will have any effect on bringing down the price of lard and cooking greases, which are now at the highest levels in history. Every time the price of hogs is given a new boost, lard and cooking oil go up. Peanuts are food for hogs and also furnish a fine oil for cooking. If a crop like this does not break the back of high lard prices, then the law of supply and demand is certainly not in operation.

It is reported that the crop is almost wholly under contract to the Standard Oil Co., and the price of the cooking oil may be made at the discretion of Uncle John.

Canas does an excellent job when dusting.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Dickinson spent several days with Lorain relatives.

Kiser-Peat Nuptials.

A quiet home wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Mary Kiser on the 15th of August at 12 o'clock, when her daughter Glada, was united in marriage to Ralph M. Peat. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. E. Hollett, of Plymouth, Ohio. They were attended by Miss Pearl Fry of Wallowhoning, and Mr. Carl Murphy of Lexington, Ohio, with Master Junior Smith, of Newark, as ring bearer.

Following the ceremony the guests were seated at the table by the guidance of Miss Dorothy Jane Reynolds. A two course dinner was served by very able helpers with Misses Dorothy Hartman and Helen Mills as waitresses, and Miss Dorothy Dood presiding at piano thru the entire ceremony.

Guests from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Peat, of Norwalk, parents of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Peat and sons of Elyria, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mills and son, of Shiloh, Mrs. Clifton Smith and son, of Newark, Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Hollett, of Plymouth, and Mrs. Frances Kiser of New Haven.

The bride is well and favorably known in New Haven, and in educational circles in Mansfield and Canton, where she has been a successful teacher in the public schools. The groom presiding at Mansfield's prosperous young business men and has a host of warm friends in Mansfield and also at Norwalk, his former home.

After a short trip along the Lake this happy couple will be at home to their friends at 509 North Bowman St., Mansfield, O. The next week the bride and groom's friends go with them to their new home.

The Monroe Doctrine.

The Monroe Doctrine was a formal notice served on the nations of Europe by the United States that should they consider as unfriendly any act by the nations of Europe looking toward the acquiring of more territory in the Western Hemisphere, that this government would resent and resist such an act.

That was enough.

There are those who express a fear that with the adoption of the League of Nations the Monroe Doctrine will be abrogated.

By the Covenant of the League the nations agree to do that which our government asked them not to do and which request has been respected for 96 years.

The promise extend over the world as well as to the Western Hemisphere.

But the Covenant goes further as regards the Monroe Doctrine. It specifically provides:

"Nothing in this Covenant shall be deemed to affect the validity of international agreements, such as treaties of arbitration or regional understandings like the Monroe Doctrine for securing the maintenance of peace."

By the Covenant the Monroe Doctrine is not weakened; it is strengthened. It is given positive recognition by the 46 nations of the League.

Of course it is none of our business, but some knock on the door. The cannibals is being reduced to a string.

It has just about gotten so in this country that when a rich bachelor has a nephew they will come miles to crash his automobile.

"The Responsibility of Initiative in the Solution of the Natural Gas Problem Rests with the Public"

No departure from established custom can be proposed without provoking discussion and the recently inaugurated agitation for the conservation of natural gas is no exception to the general rule. However, there seems to be some misconception as to the origin and intent of this conservation movement, but this must arise either from lack of information on the subject or failure to realize that warning was given many years ago as to the result of wasteful extravagance in the use of this precious fuel. Certain it is that producer and consumer gave little heed to such warnings because both seemed to believe that natural gas was inexhaustible, but in the light of better knowledge the one realizes the imminence of total destruction of its business, and the other the deprivation of the most ideal domestic fuel.

Eminent geologists and other able authority on the subject following recent exhaustive surveys of the Appalachian Gas Fields have renewed their oft repeated warnings of the rapid depletion of these natural gas pools from which Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia draw their supplies, but it was in November, 1899, that Professor Edward Orton, State Geologist of Ohio for many years, said:

"The price of (natural) gas ought to be increased in every community that is now using it. There is no good reason why it should be sold at any less price than the fuel which it displaces, or, in other words, why the better article should be sold for less than the inferior. In counting the cost of the displaced fuel, account should always be taken of the various items involved, such as its storage and preparation, the cost of lighting fires and the expense of removing ashes and cinders, none of which enter into the use of gaseous fuel. It may be urged that an increased price for gas would result in extravagant profit for the gas companies. It cannot be denied that there is a possibility of such a result, but as a matter of fact there are very few cases in the country in which companies have got back their original investment or even a good chance of getting it back. They are generally obliged to content themselves with generous dividends while the gas is in full flow."

This early agitation for natural gas conservation on the part of such an eminent authority fell on ears unwilling to listen, because of the mistaken notion that there was no end to the natural gas supply. But this old error of things has undergone a radical reversal in the light of indisputable proof of the waning of discovered and undiscovered supply—the first evidenced by lowering production and complete exhaustion of wells, and the latter by the increasing failures in attempting to develop new production.

Among the many recent recommendations for practical conservation of natural gas might be mentioned a bulletin issued by the Smithsonian Institution (Bulletin 102, Part 7) under the title "Natural Gas: Its Production, Service and Conservation." In the foreword of this able pamphlet, C. G. Gilbert, Curator, Division of Mineral Technology, United States National Museum, says:

"Natural gas is the least appreciated, consequently the most abused, of the mineral resources in popular use. The issues involved are of direct concern to some ten millions of the inhabitants of the United States, and their range of influence does not stop even here; but they form a prominent feature in the nation-wide problem of fuel supply which may be solved effectually only through co-ordinated attention to the component parts. This problem science and technology, working together, can take the initiative in simplifying, by pointing the way and devising means for its solution, but of their own initiative they are powerless to go further. The responsibility of initiative in carrying forward the actual process of solution rests with the public, and resting with the public is contingent, as a first requisite upon public opinion genuinely alive to NOTE:—The management of the gas company, desiring a full and free discussion of this question, invites its patrons to indicate by letter to the company their opinions on the question of failing supply, and what must be done to conserve it. Incidentally for their enlightenment in considering this problem we have prepared a booklet containing information data and recommendations from the most eminent authorities on the subject, which we will be pleased to send to any patron who will fill out and mail us this coupon with his name and address.

the situation. This condition of affairs, naturally, is most pronounced in industrial connections of the public service order to which the activities comprising the natural gas industry belong; and this particular situation, bad enough from environment, is further aggravated by characteristics inherent in the resource.

"The public must look to remedying the situation or within a very few years lose the services of the resource already seriously impaired. The stimulus to action contributed in the form of technical discussions is inadequate and equally so that afforded in appeals to sentiment and sensationalism. * * *

"The situation is too complex for any simple formula of remedy. It is not only complex but acutely critical as well, and needs all the light that can be thrown on it from all sides."

Dr. I. C. White, State Geologist of West Virginia, and one of the greatest living authorities on the subject, in recent utterances unmercifully chastises the natural gas wasters and serves notice that a continuance of its extravagant use will result in complete failure within a comparatively short period. He says:

"It is quite probable that not more than one-fourth of West Virginia's original gaseous fuel resources yet remain in their underground reservoirs. One of the most important questions that confronts the people of the state today is how best to conserve the remaining supply of this matchless fuel so that its use for domestic and other necessary purposes may be prolonged to a distant future."

Dr. John Adams Downocker, State Geologist of Ohio, speaking on the natural gas situation, the early discovery of natural gas in Ohio, and of the productivity of the field, calls attention to this fact:

"The demands on this territory have been very heavy and while the yield has been extremely large it has by no means equalled the demand. For years Ohio has consumed more gas than she produced, and in 1917 the state's production was only about 40 per cent. of the quantity consumed. The average open flow of new wells in Ohio, for 1918, was 1,517,000 cu. ft., the lowest in 10 years. Moreover, it was a decrease of 33 per cent. over the previous year.

"Conditions with reference to the present and probable future supply of natural gas in the Appalachian field have been stated to the best of my ability and without bias. The situation is only fairly satisfactory for the present, while the future is much more uncertain. All depend on finding new territory in large area, and for reasons previously stated the prospect of such discovery are very poor. At the best the supply on the present enormous scale will last for only a few years."

Dr. Eugene Wesley Shaw, Natural Gas Expert, U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau, and Geologist, U. S. Geological Survey, thus summarizes the gas situation:

"The country as a whole including the gas producer is interested or should be interested in caring for the remaining supplies of gas and in delivering them to those consumers who need them most in an economic way.

"The limited extent of remaining supplies has been frequently referred to but it cannot be over-emphasized. The remarks that future generations—yes, the next generation—will make about our profligacy should already burn in our ears."

It will be seen by a perusal of the foregoing that agitation for conservation of natural resources does not primarily come from the natural gas companies, but rather that it was inaugurated and is now re-iterated by geological authorities representing Federal and State governments, who have long realized the importance to the public of a radical change of policy toward this most valuable fuel resource. True it is that the question is also one of most vital importance to those whose capital is invested in means of marketing natural gas, but the great consuming public faces a situation even more critical as the time approaches when natural gas shall be no more.

Automobile Bandits Demand Gasoline and Then Whiskey.

About nine o'clock Tuesday night Herbert Waldruff residing half a mile south of Shelby, exchanged revolver shots with three or four automobile bandits or prowlers who were out raising Cain. The members of the family were in the house, with the front door locked, when they heard an automobile stop in the road, followed by footsteps on the porch. Voices could be heard but there was no knock on the door. Without opening the door Mr. Waldruff called and asked what was wanted. One of the men replied that they wanted gasoline. Mr. Waldruff told them they had no gasoline and again there was a pause while the three men talked over something so low their conversation could not be heard in the house.

Presently one of the men who appeared to be the spokesman told Mr. Waldruff they wanted the whiskey he had in his cellar. When told there was no whiskey the representative of the gang said he knew there was whiskey in the cellar and if it was not delivered to them they would break in and get it. At this point Mrs. Waldruff went upstairs to secure her husband's revolver.

The three men seeing no whiskey was to be delivered without a fight, started around the house, where one of the kitchen windows was open. Mr. Waldruff went through the house to the kitchen and, calling out the window, told the men to leave at once or take the consequences.

By this time Mrs. Waldruff had come down stairs with the revolver, which she handed to her husband. Then she put in a telephone shot from the Shelby police, who were soon on their way to the Waldruff home.

After warning the men two or three times Mr. Waldruff fired a shot from his revolver and the men fired three shots in return. Then they jumped into their automobile and disappeared in the direction of Mansfield. They had hardly left the place when the police appeared on the scene.

Mr. Waldruff has purchased an extra supply of ammunition and is ready to give the next automobile bandit gang a warm reception.

Wasted Magnanimity.

Lieut. General Jan Christian Smuts is particularly anxious that the Allies be magnanimous toward the defeated foe. It is good, Christian advice, but particularly hard to follow at this time when the defeated foe is supplying military guidance for the Russian Bolsheviks, proclaiming that he came through the war unquarred, forcing his schemes and policies through international labor conferences, talking of renewing the dissemination of German Kultur through the world, letting the kniseries discuss a new war and refusing to deliver materials promised by the terms of the armistice. Just as Prussian officers interpreted the Allies' obedience to the rules of war as a sign of weakness, the Prussian citizenry seems to be determined to accept magnanimity as an opportunity to resume the habit of brushing the stranger off the sidewalk.

Highways and Shade Trees.

Now that the automobile has enabled such multitudes of urbanites to get out into the country there has come to millions of people a new and moving sense of the possibilities of beauty along our public highways. There is the beauty, for example, of the road itself. No one who has a highly developed aesthetic sense can see the long ribbon of a smooth and well-kept turnpike unrolling before him, whether straight as an arrow or meandering like a meadow brook, without feeling his appreciation of the loveliness of inanimate things profoundly stirred.

But it is of the loveliness of shade trees standing like friendly sentinels along these roads that we wish to speak an appreciative word. Some are there by accident of course, and for their presence the traveler's heart pours out its gratitude abundantly. But now and then he finds himself rolling along under an arcade of green leaves and beneath two stately rows of elms or maples, oaks or pines, which are indubitable evidence of the good will and the refined sensibilities of some old farmer whose estate has long been mingled with the soil which he plowed and harrowed, whose very name, perhaps, has been forgotten, but who has left behind himself a memorial more beautiful, more lasting and more beneficial than millionaires have sometimes purchased with their fortunes.

We never ride through such an avenue without lifting up a sort of prayer for the repose of the ashes and the peace of the soul of this unknown benefactor of the race. Nor have we ever been able to think of a more lovely memorial to the memory of a more highly appreciated benefaction than such a colonnade of trees.

Some opponents of the League of Nations say it is a weak thing that can do no good and is likely to bring us into trouble. Others say that it creates a super-state taking away our individuality as a nation and making us subject to the will of other nations. The fact is, it does neither. It is just a plain, honest, earnest effort to get all the nations of earth to come to an agreement by which they will be prevented from robbing and killing one another.

If you have a retentive memory you might try it on the newspaper announcement that was made last week to the effect that Governor Cox has accepted an invitation to speak before the Lincoln association at Mansfield next February 12, 1920. Now if Senator Harding or some other good Republican will address the Jackson club of Norwalk next year, we'll get things in shape for the millennium.

For three years railroad brotherhoods have assumed that the sovereign power is in them, and Congress has provided them with excellent reasons for that assumption. When the railroad employees in the critical period of the summer of 1916 demanded an eight-hour day and threatened a general strike, President Wilson sent a message to Congress in which he stated that the eight-hour day be made the basis of work and wages, but he made four other proposals, one of which called for--

An amendment to the existing Federal statute which provides for the mediation, conciliation and arbitration of controversies as is the present by adding to it a provision that in case the methods of accommodation now provided for should fail, a full public investigation of the merits of every such dispute should be instituted and completed before a strike or lockout may be lawfully attempted.

Congress refused to enact this legislation because the labor leaders objected to it, and now we have a situation in which a labor leader can threaten to "tie up" the railroads so tight that they will never run again" if Congress presumes to pass an act by which the brotherhood autocracy objects as unequal to its imperative demands.

Before any railroad plan can be worked out, one highly essential fact must be established--namely, whether the sovereign power of the United States is vested in Government and in the American people or whether it is vested in the railroad brotherhood.

When it comes to quoting Roosevelt as to what he would or would not do about the League of Nations if he were still alive, here is what he said in 1910 in accepting the Nobel peace prize for his efforts in bringing Japan and Russia to terms of peace: "It would be a master stroke if those great powers, honestly bent on peace, would form a league of peace, not only to keep the peace among themselves, but to prevent, by force if necessary, its being broken by others." This is about as near to Mr. Wilson's League of Nations as one could possibly predict seven years before we got into the war. And our experience since 1910 has fully demonstrated the need.

In the last three years the railroad employees have received hundreds of millions of dollars in wage increases for which the general public is paying. As a reward for its generosity the country is to be taken by the throat and choked into submission if the most complicated economic issues that have ever confronted it are not settled forthwith. If there is any difference between that kind of arrogance and the arrogance of the German General Staff in July, 1914, we should like to know what it is.

Mr. Peavish says that although he doesn't doubt the theory of the rib, he sometimes suspects that if Eve talked like Mrs. Peavish she must have been made out of Adam's windpipe.

The Killing of Stephen.

Our worthy Advertiser in alluding to the sermon delivered in the Lutheran church, Sunday, Aug. 16, calls to the attention of its readers to the fact that the preacher in speaking of the death of Stephen did not state whether he had been legally tried and convicted or put to death by a mob.

By way of explanation will say that Stephen was not the subject of the sermon and was only referred to incidentally by way of illustration and, a digression upon the matter referred to would have been a little aside, especially in warm weather when people like twenty minute sermons.

Stephen was arrested and roughly taken before the council--the Sanhedrim. The charge preferred against him was blasphemy and it was sustained by suborned men. These were witnesses who for a consideration were willing to perjure themselves. On their testimony he was brought before the Sanhedrim. In the trial they set up false witnesses which, this man careeth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law: for we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this holy place, and change the customs which Moses delivered us.

The whole council sat and gazed steadfastly on him. There were seventy-one of them when they were all present. They sat in the form of a horse shoe, the victims in the center where they focused their gaze upon him.

As they thus stared, the face of the young man became bright and lustrous, like the face of an angel. They were scrutinizing the truth instead of a criminal, but they could not discern it. We wonder how those prejudiced devils explained that bright, beautiful face and how they felt. Then, after they came to themselves and their wits returned, said in high wrath to Stephen, Are these things so?

To this question Stephen replied in one of the most splendid impromptu addresses found in the scriptures. He traced the history of Israel from Moses to Solomon showing, how sinful and rebellious they had been, how they had violated every law and failed to realize the spirit of their own beloved Moses and his law. He said, "Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost as your fathers not persecuted? and they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have now been the betrayers and the murderers."

"When they heard these things they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth." They now began to realize the power in that bright face. They could endure no more. They were mad enough to bite off his head. "The fanatics would hear nothing more." They did not take time to pronounce sentence on him formally or bring him before the Roman Governor who alone had the power to pronounce a death sentence. The assembly became a mob and riot reigned. They thrust him out of the city violently and stoned him to death. The proceedings began with a trial in which the law was not what they knew, and ended in a murderous riot. The law was too tame and uncertain and was utterly ignored. They did not execute legally, but murdered maliciously him whom St. Paul was pleased to call "righteous Stephen." It was a case of a saint at the bar and devils on the bench. G. C. Smith.

The Lutheran Sunday school added its friends gave a delightful picnic and chicken supper on the church lawn Wednesday evening. About 100 guests were present, so much to eat and such infinite variety, that the feast combined with the social features made the affair one of the most enjoyable of these annual events.

Death of Benjamin F. Joiner.

Word was received last week of the death of Benjamin F. Joiner, a former resident of Plymouth. Benjamin F. Joiner, 64, merchant in Wichita for the past nine years, died in a local hospital Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock following an operation. He had been ill but a short time. He resided at 222 North Washington avenue.

Born in Steubenville, Ohio, in August 1855, Mr. Joiner made his home there until 1876, when he came to Plymouth, and was employed at work in the dry goods store of Kilborn & Lazier. When in Plymouth, he was married to Miss Laura Taylor, and they in 1883 went to Kansas, first locating in Salina. For several years he owned and operated a department store in that city, but later after residing in various cities in Kansas went to Wichita in 1910. He established the East Side department store at 1223 East Douglas avenue which he managed until his death. Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Laura Joiner; one son, B. Joiner, of Wichita; one brother, Charles Joiner, of Rock in the dry goods store; one sister, Mrs. Charlotte Peters, of Willard, Ohio.

New London's Big Day.

Look in next week's Advertiser for New London's Labor Day celebration. It will be held in the fair grounds at Rock, and there will be horse races, ball games and other sports.

The government will exhibit one of its observation balloons, the same as used in making observations over front line trenches. Plymouth baseball team will compete with Greenwich at New London for a part of a hundred dollar purse. Go over and root for the boys.

Harry Sibbett, of Boughtonville, will act as starter for the races.

Two Attempts To Steal Ford Truck

About midnight, Thursday of last week two men in a Ford car awakened Peter Loffand on County Line street, and inquired the way to Cleveland. They were directed and Mr. Loffand closed the door and retired. A moment later Herb Chappell, who lives opposite the garage, was awakened by some cranking in an auto. Both Mr. and Mrs. Chappell hurried out to their garage but could see no one though the garage door was open.

They retired, but about 4 o'clock Mr. Chappell was again awakened by some one in his garage cranking his Ford truck. Before he could reach the culprits they took flight.

Moral: Put a lock on the garage. A truck under lock is worth two in the hands of a thief.

Lutheran Church.

The subject of the sermon at the Lutheran church Lord's Day morning will be the following: Enduring to the end. What does it mean to "endure," is it worth while to endure, are not the excellent things in life secured the easy way? Is there any resistance offered to any progressive and upward movement of the human soul?

These are a few of the questions that confront all who are able to think, and the answer determines what their future will be. Think over the matter and let us compare views. The time of the meeting will be eleven o'clock.

Sunday school at ten o'clock.

Can You Beat It?

The following incident was related by an Ashland woman on her return from a visit at Ravenna: A man living on the outskirts of the city of Ravenna had several fat porkers in a pen near the house. One night near midnight he heard a terrible squealing in his pen. Hastily donning his clothes he went to the pen and found two of the pigs dead having been stuck in the neck in the most approved butcher style. He immediately summoned a couple of his neighbors to dress them. They hung them up and then went away for a short time and on going out into the yard both porkers were gone and no trace of them could be found. The thieves were evidently in hiding and when the opportunity came, finished the job.

Beelman Family Reunion

The members of the Beelman families gathered at Casino Park, Mansfield, Ohio, for the sixteenth annual reunion, Wednesday, August 13, 1919. There were ninety present including two visitors.

Needless to say that all enjoyed the beautiful and sumptuous dinner and the "get-together" spirit. Ice cream and cake were served as refreshments just before departing for the respective homes.

The same officers were unanimously elected to serve for the 1920 reunion, which will be held at the same place, Casino Park, as follows: Mr. Harry Beelman of Bucyrus, president; Mr. Glenn Beelman of Willard, vice president; Fay Beelman of Willard, secretary; Mrs. Wm. England, of Plymouth, treasurer; Mrs. Mary Hetler and Mrs. N. B. Shepard, of Mansfield, committee on arrangements.

Relatives were there from Fort Wayne, Ind.; Hicksville, Galion, Bucyrus, Willard, Plymouth, North Fairfield, Greenwich, Ashland, Lebanon, Toledo and Mansfield.

There were two deaths in this family since the 1918 reunion, Mrs. Charles N. Beelman, of Toledo, and Little Margaret Jayne Shepherd, of Mansfield. There were several additions: by marriage, Mrs. Clair Tanner and Mr. Wm. England; by birth Harry Strother Beelman, Bucyrus; Mabel Lucile Williams, Detroit, Mich.; Mildred Jayne Hoyt, North Fairfield.

Facts About Inflation of Tires.

It is customary among automobilists when they pump air into a wheel which is jacked up, not to pump up to the required pressure, but to allow a few pounds for the weight which will come on the tire when the jack is removed.

This is a bad practice, says an expert from the United States Tire company laboratories for careful experiments show that the weight of the car on the tire does not add even a fraction of a pound of air pressure inside the tire. Consequently it is advising motorists to inflate their tires to the recommended pressure, whether the wheel is jacked up or not.

While on the subject of inflation motorists should again be warned that the notion which has gained wide belief among automobilists that the heat of a summer day expands the air inside a tire to such an extent that the tire does not need to be blown up to the same point as in winter, is an utter fallacy. Experiments show that it takes terrific driving for a considerable period in such a race as at the Indianapolis speedway to generate enough heat to raise the air pressure in a tire five to six pounds. The expansion in a car driven at an ordinary rate on a hot summer day is so slight, that no allowance should be made for it when the tire is pumped up.

Motorists would do well in hot weather to test the air pressure in their tires every few days to see that the leakage so far has not reduced the pressure to the point where the tires will suffer harm.

Obituary.

Mabelle Irene Frost, daughter of John and Jennie Story Frost, was born at Colhour, Ill., May 13, 1881. Departed this life August 10, 1919. Her early childhood was spent in Colhour and Detroit. Her mother died when she was a small child.

After her father's death in 1898, she came to Ohio. About nine years ago she came to Plymouth where she remained until her failing health compelled her to give up her chosen work, about one year ago when she went to Wellington, Ohio, where she made her home with her sister until the middle of June, when she came to the home of her cousin, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hole near Boughtonville where she remained until her death.

Life is but a sheet of paper white Upon which each one must write. His little word or two and then comes night.

Mabelle has written the word and written it well.

One sister with other relatives and a host of friends are left to mourn their loss.

LALLEY LIGHT and POWER

Saves the Wife's Strength

In a dozen ways, Lalley Electric Light and Power saves time and labor and strength for the farm wife.

With a Lalley in the basement, for example, the days of carrying water are over. For Lalley supplies the power to pump water to the kitchen, the wash house, the dairy—anywhere.

Lalley saves women the heavy work every day of the week—washing, ironing, sweeping, separating cream, churning. As there are no lamps to be filled or trimmed many tiresome hours a day are saved.

But Let Lalley owners themselves tell you the story. They are much better qualified than we are.

Lalley Light is a complete unit—engine and generator—with 14-cell storage battery. It supplies ample electricity for lights, water pump, washing machines, sweeper, cream separator, flouring mill, iron, etc.

C. A. Larson, Holdrege, Neb., says the Lalley is one of the best investments he ever made.

"We are well pleased with the splendid light, and the power for pumping water through the house, and operating the washing machine and other light machinery. Also the immense amount of work it saves in not having to wash dirty lamp globes and carry water."

One Presson writes from Chapman, Neb., that his wife says she'd rather be without an automobile than their Lalley.

"My wife is rid of the daily task of cleaning and filling lamp lamps." says G. A. Larson, Eldon, Ia.

"When wash day comes her washing-machine and the Lalley save her two or three hours of the hardest work a woman has to do."

"Lalley saves the woman a lot of time in cleaning and filling lamps," writes J. D. Barr, from Liberty, Neb.

"It also sweeps the house with a vacuum cleaner."

You will save money by purchasing Lalley Light now. Write for our special offer.

When I blew into Johnson's store to buy some prunes for Lizzie, no customers were on the floor, but all the clerks were busy. They carried boxes to and fro, and swept and brushed and dusted; oh, everyone was on the go, until his gallus busted. I said to Johnson, cheerful faced, the tumult round him viewing, "Oh, why all this indecent haste, when there is nothing doing. Why don't the clerks sit down and rest, their useless labors dropping? Then they would hump and do their best when customers come shopping." Said Johnson, "People pass my store, on errands vain and dizzy; and they look through the open door and see the clerks all busy; and they reflect, 'That Johnson gent is surely up and coming; while other merchants make lament, he keeps things fairly humming.' If they looked in and saw my men all half asleep and yawning, they'd think I ran it very dry, and go their way doggoning. There's nothing like a busy front when there is slack and dragging; so every clerk must have his count and keep his tail busy wagging." I swiped some cheese and then I went, and as I went, reflected, "There are upon this Johnson gent no flies that I've detected."

Following the theft of two automobiles in a single day, Plymouth automobile owners Wednesday sent an appeal to Congressman R. Clint Cole that the theft of motor cars be established as a federal offense. State laws are not drastic enough, they contend.

Morning Exercise For The Tired Business Man.

Rise 7 a. m.
Stand in the middle of room, raise arms slowly overhead, take deep breath and say "Damn the government," lowering arms in attitude of despair. Ten times.
Extend body flat downward on floor, cover eyes with hands, kick heels, think of the railroads and weep, till dry.
Assume sitting position, hands on hips, sway gently to and fro and concentrate on Mr. Burlington until a generous frothing at the mouth sets in. Till exhausted.
Collapse on floor. Grovel vigorously, think of the income tax and gnash teeth as in anger. Ad lib.
Note—Observe this simple regime every morning before breakfast and you will go to work with most of the cares and troubles of the day already out of your system.

Glass baking dishes are a constant joy.

To Reveal Where Your Swiss Cheese Is Made.

Because of popular prejudice Ohio Swiss Cheese generally sells as a Wisconsin product. To help acquaint Ohio consumers with the true source and quality of such cheese consumed in the state, arrangements have been made for the display of several Buckeye-made Swiss cheeses at the state fair. Each will weigh approximately 220 pounds. They are three feet in diameter and are seven inches thick. A cheese weighing 220 pounds contains sufficient protein to provide the average person enough of this food element for almost a year, or as much as would be contained in a live steer weighing 880 pounds. A ton and a quarter, or 2,500 pounds of milk are required to make such a cheese. This is as much milk as the average Ohio cow gives in 238 days.

Gelatin desserts are ideal for hot weather.

Definitions of A Booster.

A booster is a citizen who talks as strong for Plymouth when he is at home as he does when he is 1000 miles away, and vice versa.
A booster is a man wise enough to know that by helping his community he is helping himself, and then acts on that knowledge.
A booster is a man who contributes to the religious, social, charitable and commercial undertakings of his city in proportion to his means.
A booster is a man who will let the "We spirit" in the dominate his thoughts and actions and will work in harmony with his fellow citizens for the community betterment.
A booster is a man who helps to keep his city clean morally and physically.
A booster is a man willing to serve.
A booster is cautious in his criticism of those willing to serve.
A booster is the man who believes in Plymouth citizens and believes that his home town is the best place in the whole wide world. That's a loyal Booster.
A booster is a man who believes in work, faith, charity; that day follows night; that time heals; that humanity contains more good than bad and that this old world is a mighty good place to live in.

Model of Beautiful Home Grounds At Fair.

Persons interested in the planting of shrubbery about their homes, and landscape gardening efforts, will have an opportunity at the Ohio state fair to see a model plan of a home and grounds beautified with miniature shrubs and trees. Questions on home beautification will be answered and literature will be distributed without cost.

This display is a part of the general exhibit of the College of Agricultural which will occupy a wing in the Administration building.

The Princess Stock Co.

The Peoples' Favorites will soon be with us. The Princess Stock Co. will present their splendid shows for one whole week, commencing Monday evening, August 25. The theatre going people of this community will have the opportunity of seeing the ever welcome and old reliable Princess Stock Co. in up-to-date melodrama and comedies with refined vaudeville specialties between acts.
The company is heralded by the eminent actor Sherman L. Jones, and the winsome little leading lady, Miss Marie Desmond, supported by an excellent cast of players. And it is said that the company is larger and better than ever this year. All new plays, new music and new costumes.
The Princess Stock Co. comes to us this year highly recommended and will open this week's engagement here by presenting one of the sweetest stories of modern times entitled "The Fighting Parson" or "The Village Deacon," a sensational comedy drama in 3 acts, a beautiful story filled with thrills and good wholesome comedy.
Every woman, man and child should see this wonderful play. It begins with love and ends with love and it teaches a good moral lesson. The old saying is that "true love never runs smooth," but more can be learned about this important question by seeing the Princess Stock Co. present "The Fighting Parson." The performance will take place under their waterproof tent at the show grounds Monday, August 25. The company gives a complete change of show each night. They give a free concert each night in front of the tent. adv.

They'll Be Sorry.

Ford cars now have self starters. As a rule one of the chief thrills owners get out of "starting mobile" is turning the handle that sticks out of its front piazza. It requires no brawn nor brain to tramp on a button and make your engine wheeze.
But to properly crank a Diver is a fine art.
The art cranker gives Betty just one slight upheave, and she snorts.
He does not whirl the crank handle, nor does he puff and pant and wail in the roadway.
Just the slight upward touch of the true artist and the faithful Henry talks back to him every time.
And in the wintertime what joy there was in getting the old reliable to rattle.
Yes, it started at seven, and at one you got the first back fire.
Such muscle as many have was heaped on their homes, layer by layer, through the chill months and the only callous a lot of them display came from caressing the handle of the family flivver in December.
To date the Ford has been a regular institution; one that requires energy and intelligence to start, and a high degree of endurance to keep going.
But with self starters, the old Ford is so civilized and humanized that all the sporting joy of running it will be lost forever.

Gives Property To Charities.

By the will of the late Katherine J. Carlisle, of Tiro, filed in the Crawford county court, she bequeaths $4,000 to various Lutheran church charities and also $1,200 to fit up a Sunday school room in Crouse Memorial church in Tiro, Tabitha-home at Lincoln, Neb., is given a part of her personal household effects. The residue of her estate is to be invested by trustees of Wittenberg college, the interest accruing therefrom to be used for the education of young men to the ministry.

FALL and WINTER 1919

BOYS CLOTHING

We want to call attention to our fine line of Boys Suits, sizes from 5 to 16 years.

We have our Boys' Clothing on our shelves, with prices at least 40 per cent less than we could buy the same on today's market.

SUIT SIZES

Our suits range in sizes from 8 to 16 years, sell from $8 to $14, and the highest priced ones are very fine and will give good wear. They are all wool.

SMALL SUITS

Our little suits starting as small as 2½ sizes to size seven, sell for $5.00 to $6.50. If you have a boy that is going to need a suit this winter, don't delay, but bring him in.

These prices are lower than most stores. We do not know where to find more boys' clothing at anywhere near the prices we are selling for.

The Hope of the Profiteer.

There are those who persist in predicting that we are bound to have a war with Japan. If enough of them keep on predicting it often enough and can get others to join them to make it general, why, they might work up a war with Japan.

There are those who believe we will not and should not have a war with Japan. If they can get enough to join their forces to make the jingoists forget war talk, why, there would be no likelihood of a war with Japan.

Did you ever hear anyone give any sort of a reason why we should have war with Japan?

Now it is Shantung. There are those who are skeptical and want to discount Japan's word that she will deal honorably and return holdings in that peninsula to China.

There were those who were skeptical when we said we would deal honorably with the Cubans and make them self-governing.

Japan makes her declaration now just as earnestly as we made ours then. Japan says her word is as good as ours. Time will tell.

with them as it did with us. No one doubts us now.

Meantime if the Jap jingoists can point to American papers and say, "They are talking war over there," and if the American jingoists can point to the Japanese papers and say, "They are talking war over there," why, the munition profiteers will smile.

Is This About Right?

Success for a printer comes rarely from lowered prices. The men who are making good today are those who do something better than others do it, and who demand their just compensation for the work done. Specialists. Do certain things better than others, never fall down on service, keep promises, to work that brings results in sales, see that your prices cover your costs with a margin for profit, and you will find that the printing business pays.—Nebraska Printer.

A Modern Pioneer.

By Col. Riggs.

Way over in the south Pacific ocean, about twelve hundred miles from Australia, lies New Zealand, a British colonial Dominion, made up of two major islands, called North and South, with lesser islands about.

On the southeast coast of South Island is a shore town, Dunedin, of about 100,000 inhabitants.

And from this town, Dunedin, came Mr. Robert A. Ewing, and J. H. Stewart, all the way to Plymouth to learn from The Patent-Rook-Health Co. all about the Plymouth Gasoline Locomotive. This incident linked faraway Dunedin with Plymouth and made us feel akin.

Learning that Mr. Ewing and Mr. Stewart were at the Smith hotel, we went over to meet and to greet, and peruse was something out of which we could spin a story.

When landlord Smith gave us an introduction it seemed like meeting up with two good Americans, and if the register had not revealed New Zealanders, their home and address, we might have assumed that they were from Bucyrus or Columbus.

They were dressed as any genteel American would attire himself for business or comfortable travel. They spoke pure English, and their humor was as wholesome in type and application as if you were sitting in with a bunch of keen fellows any where in America.

Following our Socratic inclination to know by questioning, we learned that Mr. Stewart was engaged in the manufacture of cement and lime, while Mr. Ewing was a manufacturer of commercial phosphate.

They came to America in May and have been visiting principal cities from San Francisco (their point of arrival), to New York. They toured the south, and finally to Plymouth to see the best industrial locomotive made in the States.

When queried as to the impression which the Plymouth had made, Mr. Stewart told us that he considered it O. K. in fact A1, and its adaptation and purchase would form an early discussion when they returned to Dunedin in early September.

It will be quite a distinction for Plymouth to furnish industrial locomotives for New Zealand manufacturers.

By the way New Zealand is not so obscure as one is apt to think. Neither is she primitive. In some respects she is in advance of our country.

America had fought her Revolutionary war and was a half-century old before New Zealand really began. Indeed it was not until about 1870 that her internal wars began to wear themselves out, when she did start she stepped in ahead of many older countries.

She gave woman the right of suffrage more than a quarter of a century ago. We are just getting started, and when we asked how

If the man who kicks on milk at the farm a pint will go out on the farm in fly time and milk the cows for a few evenings, he'll come back to town with some of the complaint taken out of him.

If we don't get settled down pretty soon 1920 will be a good year for Bryan to make another run for the presidency. Let's make our sacrifices now and escape this shadowing visitation.

When an organization representing two million men makes a proposition to deal with a vital public question, and accompanies it with a veiled threat, it is up to the remaining ninety-eight million people to give the subject serious thought.

Read Footoria Ruf Man's ad.

it was working. Mr. Stewart told us it was fine,—not only fine but just.

New Zealand as a government was encouraging agricultural development as far back as 1884, by loaning money to farmers on long time at low interest. We are just starting.

New Zealand never had saloons. More than a quarter of a century ago she passed a liquor control act that extended the privilege of local option. This act confined the sale of intoxicants to hotels, and sales could not be made before nine o'clock in the morning nor after six o'clock in the evening. Any one under 21 years allowed where liquor was sold meant a revocation of privilege or license. In December next New Zealand will vote on prohibition.

New Zealand has an Industrial Conciliatory act under which disputes between labor and employer must be settled. Strikes and lock-outs are prohibited. Some day we may catch up with New Zealand in this respect.

New Zealand had a workman's compensation law in force for two decades. We just recently got ours in Ohio, and it's so new and good that we are still bragging about it.

New Zealand is loyal to the mother country. When the Boer war was on she sent ten successive contingents, and in this world of ours it was New Zealand that took the first territory from the Germans, by taking Samoa. She sent ten percent of her population to the front.

As Mr. Ewing put it the resources of New Zealand are wool, gold, and dairying.

These guests of Plymouth were delighted with America. Delighted with the courtesy and hospitality that was accorded them everywhere. They were amazed at the extent of the United States. There are only three Indians in all New Zealand.

They like our dress and our customs in Chicago. They put away the tweed suits of three pieces, and at the big Marshall Field's store in Chicago, dressed in a customary two piece and a negligee shirt, belt and straw hat.

They were surprised to find paved streets in so small a town as Plymouth. Fords were not new, as New Zealand is full of them. Mr. Ewing spoke of driving into Dunedin, passing 23 automobiles, of which number 19 were Fords. He jokingly remarked that Fords were even used to herd sheep in New Zealand, 210 pounds.

We liked these two clean cut fellows. Glad they came to Plymouth. Glad that Plymouth makes something of use to them. Glad to talk to them and get their impressions of America. Glad to know that after four months of extensive travel and observation, they go back to New Zealand with admiration for America's country, amazed at America's extent, and impressed with America's resources and manufacture.

Auto Overtures Buggy.

Mrs. George Woliver met with an accident last week as she was driving near Plankton. A large limousine giving no signals, passed and struck the buggy, overturning it and pinning her underneath. Her horse became frightened and started to run. It dragged Mrs. Woliver for about two rods before it was caught. The driver of the machine was Fred Arey of Oak Park, Ill., who made it known he was willing to pay all damages. Mrs. Woliver was badly bruised.

Ohio's First Land Swindle.

On February 19, 1791, 218 French families landed at Alexandria, Va., to find themselves the victims of the first big land swindle operated in Ohio. They and bought their way through William Duer of New York, who represented himself to them as the agent of the Scioto purchase company and the owner of extensive tracts on the Ohio river. He was at this time in prison for debt and the company did not own a foot of land.

The Ohio company had found that it was difficult to get attention from congress without influence of some kind. Duer was a lobbyist about the halls of congress and represented what would now be called the invisible government. To enlist his offices the company agreed secretly to secure for him and associates a tract of several million acres adjoining their own, and it was with this tract in mind that he went to France to solicit French settlement on it.

Before the close of the year the Ohio company arranged to sell the duped Frenchmen land in their own tract at government price—$1.25 per acre and thus was established the city of Gallipolis; and six years later congress, in order to relieve the swindled Frenchmen, granted a tract containing 24,000 acres in what is now Scioto county, to recompense them for their losses. Even as now the promoter was held to be worthy of his reward, and four thousand acres in the tract was given to John Gabriel Gervais, one of their number who had some lobbying ability and was credited with getting the act through congress. The rest was divided equally among the male persons over 18 years of age and the widows living at that time—1795—at Gallipolis. Apparently many of the Frenchmen had returned to their own country when they found how matters stood here, for only 92 persons qualified to take part in the sharing in this tract. They drew their shares by lot and each received 217.25 acres. The president of the United States was authorized to issue patents to each for his land and did so. Subsequently eight other Frenchmen were admitted to the sharing and like tracts found for them adjacent. The grantees were required to reside upon their lands for three years to perfect their titles, but later that was revoked so that those who had failed to meet the requirement were not for that reason without good title. As a matter of fact comparatively few of the Gallipolis French came to live permanently on the new grants.

Wm. D. McAllister, superintendent of the largest hospital in Philadelphia states the admissions to Blockley hospital are only one-half as large as in pre-prohibition times. There are now 811 men and 631 women in the hospital, and of these intoxicants and social diseases are responsible for 70 per cent of the inmates.

If a man could sell his experience for what it cost him he could get his old age with a competency.
