

Speaking of The Northern Ohio.

The Northern Ohio railway under the management of the A. C. & Y. and which becomes effective March 1, promises a greatly increased service in both passenger and freight traffic.

Among the good things, also, to come out of the change is a greater activity for Plymouth. This will result from making Plymouth a division point for the turning of all crews here.

The company has placed an order with the Westinghouse people for six gasoline motor cars, each seventy foot length, and carrying mail and baggage service as well as providing ample passenger space.

These cars will run out of Plymouth, east to Akron and return, and west to Delphos and return. It is planned, also, to ultimately make connection with the Nickel Plate for through service to Chicago, with a stop at L. E. at Youngstown east.

Freight traffic for the south-west will be routed out of Akron and delivered to the Cleveland at Delphos for St. Louis and beyond. It is predicted that through steam passenger trains will be made both ways as soon as the road bed can be relied to accommodate service.

On March 1 mixed trains will be discontinued and the passenger service placed on a definite schedule and a Toledo express service established using the T. & O. C. line as far as possible as an established line.

Two work trains are being arranged to begin track and bridge work on the line which will become effective, and the long hoped for rehabilitation of the line seems now to become a reality as the money and labor can bring the reconstruction about.

Trainmaster Garrett, who served the main line of the L. E. & W. at Lima, has been employed and will be stationed at Akron, where the several offices will be maintained instead of at Lima as heretofore.

Terminal facilities will be greatly increased here to care for business and passenger traffic. The division point will bring about. We are indebted to our good friend, Agent F. W. Sullivan, for the many and fine developments become public our readers will be kept advised.

University Extension School.

Farmers from all over Ohio and many from other states are in Columbus for the eighth annual farmers' week which opened Monday morning at Ohio State University.

Twenty-seven attractions were offered on Monday program, both educational and entertaining in their nature. President Thompson presided at a luncheon at 12 o'clock, and Dr. J. M. Lusk, director of the Ohio Experiment Station at Wooster, at 2 p. m. and at 4 p. m. Dean Alfred Irvan of the college of agriculture will give an illustrated lecture, "See America First," the first of a series comprising "A Farmer's Friend" and "Work."

Motion pictures will be shown in the chapel at noon, and at 7 p. m. the Venedicia Glee club, composed of 22 Welsh farmer boys, gave a concert.

The Ohio State Bookkeepers' association opened its annual meeting Monday. The annual Ohio State Corn and Grain show also opened with the largest number of exhibits of corn and grain in its history. Among these were specimens of corn and wheat, grown by Ohio farmers, which won first prizes at the International Corn and Grain show at Chicago in competition with farmers from all over the country.

Among Monday arrivals were Dr. J. M. Lusk, and 88 country ties who won free trips offered by their county farm organizations for excellence shown in amount of farm products. The annual Ohio State Corn and Grain show also opened with the largest number of exhibits of corn and grain in its history.

The farmers' wives, too, will experience a busy and profitable week. The "Family," "Care of the Sick," "What Farm Women Can Do With Possibilities," "Good Taste in Dress," "How to Observe the Sabbath," "Furnishing the Home," and "Problems of Farm Women" will be discussed by experts. Many of the home economics instructors at the university.

Ira Carson, employed by the Par-Roan-Health Co., is confined to his home on a street, with a broken leg.

The McKinley Banquet in Norwalk.

The McKinley Club of Huron county held its seventeenth annual banquet at the new High school building, Norwalk, on last Thursday evening, using the gym room and balcony for its auditorium.

Six hundred and twenty-seven covers were required and the service was prepared by the domestic science department of the school and served by the young ladies in that department of the school.

On the gym floor 512 were seated, with tables in the corridor and High school restaurant providing space for the remainder of the Club. The following was the menu.

- Grape Fruit
- Chicken Pie
- Mashed Potatoes and Gravy
- Hubbard Squash
- Hot McKinley Bread and Butter
- Cabbage Salad
- Cake
- Ice Cream
- Coffee

It was the largest and most enthusiastic in the history of the club, and a delightful evening to the spirit of the affair. The subject program followed the banquet:

- Music
- The McKinley Quartette
- Invocation
- The Rev. Howard A. Vernon, Pastor of Baptist Church
- Introduction
- Irving Carney, President Huron County McKinley Club
- Toastmaster
- O. A. White, of Plymouth
- The Hon. R. K. Ramsey, of Sandusky
- Song
- "The Kosary"
- "The McKinley Quartette Address"
- "McKinley and National Progress"
- The Hon. Luther Day, Cleveland
- "America"
- Led by McKinley Quartette

The addresses given by Mr. Ramsey and Mr. Day were inspiring and were vigorously applauded. Their tributes to William McKinley and their discussion of current topics and conditions.

Mr. Day is a son of Judge William G. Cook, who served as secretary of state in the McKinley cabinet and who now is a member of the United States Senate.

This fair connected the evening's event with the McKinley administration, and it is not probable that another McKinley celebration in this country celebrated with so direct a lineage.

The Advertiser is grateful for the place given us in the present issue. It is the second time in its history we have shared in the Club's activities. Thirteen years ago we enjoyed a hearing on the subject before it, sharing honors with Judge Grant of Canton, and Albert Douglas, of Chillicothe, then a member of the Ohio bar from the 11th Ohio district.

Those in attendance from Plymouth were: Fred C. Clark, C. M. Brown, J. M. Gaskill, John I. Beelman, C. M. Lofland, and O. A. White.

The insanity inquest of the State of Ohio has not been continued indefinitely because of illness of the three jurors reported sick last Friday. It may be again this week, and the hearing and start the inquest anew. Rehfeld, who is under indictment for slaying H. A. Benson, dentist, is at present in custody. Exchange will determine whether he is sane enough to be tried for murder.

One hundred additional names were handed to the petit jury Monday afternoon.

MAY CONSOLIDATE

Representative from the Equity Exchanges of Huron, Ashland, Richland, Wayne, Holmes and Adams counties, met in conference Tuesday afternoon in the common pleas court room, Mansfield, for the purpose of merging.

The Equities believe if they can form a union, both for collective buying and selling, they can accomplish much on prices. They have enough to hold their grain until the market justifies selling. They argue that if the farmers of Adams county, by exchanging their crops together, buyers will have some inducement to make them good offers. They propose to buy in large quantities.

Another proposition discussed was to buy a mill and grind their own flour and chop feed. The farmers do not desire where they would locate their mill and their warehouse. The meetings will be held on the last Tuesday of each month.

A Heart to Heart Gas Talk

J. F. Olmstead, of Columbus, general superintendent of distribution, of the Logan Natural Gas Co., has been in Plymouth making a survey of the Plymouth plant for the betterment of the distribution of the supply to local consumers.

Mr. Olmstead was the local manager of the company 17 years ago and a resident of Shelby. Being a little inquisitive as to the future supply of gas for Plymouth the Advertiser reporter was asked what the prospects are. Mr. Olmstead said: Communities that operate are going to get service. Consumers who have an economical view of the future and will use natural gas as carefully as they would artificial gas are in a good position to have the gas question. The great point is that we have sufficient gas probably to last for an indefinite time if we conserve it with care and light heating. And we can furnish it at rates much cheaper than artificial gas and give a quality of gas that will have twice the heat units of the artificial. Certainly there will be times of low pressure but even during those times the pressure will be greater than that of artificial gas. All over our system we are now educating the consumers to burn gas in low pressure and show them how to get results. When consumers learn to cook with a short flame we want them to consider that method, even when there is plenty of pressure. Cooking can be nicely and economically done with a flame of an inch long. Natural gas is a convenient fuel for the people of Plymouth and it will afford to lose. It would be no easy matter to have an artificial gas plant built. No investor would build a plant in a city of less than 6500. By cooperating the community can have natural gas for an indefinite time for the lighter needs of the household. This is what the consumers want and it is what we are aiming at. The interests of the people and the company are mutual. They want the gas and we want them to have it. We have an investment for an indefinite time for the lighter needs of the household. By cooperation the life of our investment is lengthened and the people's convenience is prolonged. That is fair to both. When counting on Plymouth people to cooperate and they will be serving their own best interests.

Since depletion in the fields from which we obtain our gas supply has so reduced pressures, we find that it will be necessary to make a number of changes and betterments in our distributing systems in many of our Ohio towns and cities.

In the early days natural gas pressures were high and it was possible to give good service to patrons everywhere, because the mains were full of gas and at the same time carried to the extreme ends will forward existing lines. But now with the low pressures prevailing, and which will continue unless greater economy is exercised in the use of gas, and sufficient money is received for it to enable the company to drill enough wells to offset the constant depletion of the old ones, a thorough-going effort must be made to improve distribution in various communities.

Some of the communities where new rates have been adopted our company will make improvements the coming summer to better the service and will forward its educational work to teach patrons how to get the maximum efficiency from the minimum consumption of gas. Strict economy must be exercised by the consumer, and the company must be properly supported in its work.

Natural gas service will soon be possible to serve all we want substituted. We can only afford to make these improvements in communities where the consumer can cooperate to make them possible and where the future business of the company will warrant them. It must be realized that sooner or later some communities now served with gas must be cut off for the reason that it will not be possible to serve all we want substituted.

The very large majority of the communities we serve will not improve and distributing plant which service would soon be discontinued, and where the public attitude is such that wasteful and excessive use of gas was in no way restricted.

Over two thousand horse power will be provided, and this will be ample for all industrial demands. The poles, wires and insulators have been purchased and work will go forward immediately and built with capacity to take on Plymouth, Willard, Shiloh, Greenwich and intervening rural districts.

It is Plymouth's opportunity to get abundant current at low cost, and will probably take the place of the proposal from Willard.

Plans for extensive improvements at Cedar Point have been announced by the owners. A 100-room addition to Hotel Breakers is to be completed by June 1, and a new 60-room hotel is to be completed by June 1, 1921. It is also planned to build a 1,000 machine garage and reconstruct a storm-drainage section of the automobile roadway from Rye Beach to Cedar Point. Work on all improvements is to start as soon as weather permits.

Gas Demonstration. The Logan Gas Co. will conduct a demonstration in its office building, showing how to use fuel economically on low pressure, as the old high time gas pressure is a thing of the past. The range will be erected in the gas office and all are invited to call and be informed how to save money and at the same time use gas.

OPERATORS READY TO SHOW BOOKS

Will Tell Wilson Board 14 Per Cent. Raise May Shut Down Some Mines.

"Many coal mines are threatened with bankruptcy, because of the 14 per cent. increase in wages they were recently ordered to give the miners.

"Miners can make $10 and $12 a day in most fields and can earn $15 a day in the richer fields."

These are some of the statements that will be made before President Wilson's coal commission by the operators when they submit their case this week in an effort to get an increased price to the consumer authorized so that the public instead of they will have to bear the increases due to advanced wages.

An outline of the evidence they will submit is contained in a statement today issued by the executive committee of the bituminous coal operators of the central competitive field. It says in part:

"The operators will produce figures to support their insistence that their profits have not been exorbitant as the miners have maintained. In some fields the operators will show their profits have not resulted in even a reasonable return on the capital invested.

"Their figures will show that because of the 14 per cent. increase recently granted, many mines have been threatened with bankruptcy. "Pay roll evidence will be offered by the central competitive operators to show that the miners, in most fields, can make from $10 to $12 a day and that $15 a day can be earned readily in the richer mining districts, which operate from 250 to 275 days a year.

It will be argued by a comparatively few of the men in the field work steadily and that if they did, their yearly earnings would be increased from 15 to 20 per cent. This, they will show, would not add one cent a ton to the present productive price of coal.

"All these figures will be used to controvert the statements of John L. Lewis, acting president of the United Mine Workers and other miners' representatives that the earnings have been under $300 a year and that present rates are such as to make it impossible for the miners to live decently.

"The operators will argue that the 14 per cent. wage advance recently granted, which was absorbed by the operators without any increase in the price of coal to the consumer, was more than enough to cover any increase in the cost of living."

When Jeremiah Morrow "Came Back."

Jeremiah Morrow was one of the public men of Ohio in the early days, who showed his ability to "come back" into public service after long retirement. In fact it was said of Morrow that in all his long public life he never either sought or refused election to office.

He was elected the representative of the state in the lower house of congress when the state was admitted to the Union and for the rest of that great decade was the only representative Ohio had. Later he was elected governor of the state and senator of the United States.

In 1840 Tom Corwin resigned his seat in congress to take election as a Whig as governor of the state and Morrow was nominated by his party as Corwin's successor in congress. There was a mass meeting held at Wilmington, attended it is said by ten thousand people. Each county in the district selected fifty delegates to choose a candidate. They selected Morrow and the mass meeting unanimously ratified the selection.

It was a noted campaign that he thus entered. Corwin, the prince of campaign orators was on the stump and the people wild with enthusiasm were singing the campaign songs of John Greinet of Columbus. It was the Log Cabin and hard cider campaign. Morrow found himself returned to the house which he had left thirty-eight years before. He was but thirty-two years old when he first entered congress. Now he was going back in his seventieth year. In the meantime, in addition to the senatorship and the governor's office, he had served a term or two in the state senate. Now one who had served in either of these high offices would probably regard it as too much of a condescension to accept election to the legislature. Not so with Morrow.

When in his seventieth year he went back to congress he found but one man there who had sat with him in congress in his younger days. That was John Quincy Adams, who then in his 74th year, after retirement from the office of president of the United States, had not thought it beneath his dignity to accept election to the lower house of congress. Adams of Massachusetts and Morrow of Ohio were the two Grand Old Men of the House.

Knighthood Again in Flower.

Knighthood is to be in flower again. In the olden days the knights championed whatever cause they saw fit and rode forth to defend it against all comers. The children of Ohio's schools have just been asked by the Ohio War Savings Committee to champion the cause of thrift and take up the shield and lance against waste by selling War Savings Stamps.

The sale or purchase of one War Savings Stamp during the remainder of the year makes the school pupil a member of the Ohio Round Table. There is no emblem to designate this rank but when the pupil has sold or purchased $100 worth of Stamps, he or she will be knighted, being made a knight of thirt - third degree - the degree indicating that he or she is championing the cause of thrift and doing his or her share to keep Ohio first in the sale of War Savings Stamps. Each third degree knight will be entitled to wear a lapel shield to designate rank.

An Early Abolitionist Settler

In the fall of 1787 a Rev. James Smith of Virginia, traveled thru Kentucky and Ohio in search of a location to establish a new home, being, in spite of the fact that he was the owner of slaves, much opposed to slavery and wishing to get away from a state that protected it. He kept a diary of his travels which contains some interesting entries. He came west thru Kentucky and was disappointed in most of the land of that section. Crossing the Obioway where Cincinnati now is, he wrote down some severe words in condemnation of slavery, suggested by the fact that he was washing foot for the first time on soil from which slavery was forever barred. This, it should be noted, was six years before the birth of William Lloyd Garrison, and forty years before Birney established at that same place his anti-slavery "Philanthropist."

Ascending the Little Miami about sixty miles he crossed over the divide between that river and the Scioto, they through East Fork and Paint creek, coming upon the Scioto river at the Chillicothe site. An entry in the diary notes that he came upon a large beech tree on the banks of Paint creek in its upper stretches, in the bark of which some one had cut evidently many years before the letters "T. L. & T. D., 1750." Some explorers had evidently passed that way long before, but who it was will never be known now.

Both in Kentucky and Ohio he came upon "licks"--places where salt or brackish water oozed from the ground, and to which for that reason such animals as deer and buffalo were attracted in "great numbers." The word "lick" in this section, he said, though their numbers had been greatly reduced. Deer, were very plentiful. Indications that he was approaching a lick, he said, began to be noticed four or five miles away. The vegetation began to show the effect of the brackish water. In the immediate vicinity of the licks the trees were dead, the earth having been dug and carried away by the passing animals eager to get the salt with which the soil was impregnated. Out from the center of the lick ran a narrow, shallow stream, used by the animals coming and going from the place. Rev. Smith eventually located in the Miami valley.

A Standard Oil Product.

Near the village of Geneva, just over the boundary line between Ashland and Lake counties, the traveler on the Lake Shore railroad will notice a fine estate with a pretentious residence, however the railroad and the lake above it is known locally as the Fitch estate. The present owner, whose name is Fitch, came into possession named Hopper, but it is a creation of the profitable business of the Standard Oil Co. and the story of it is interesting.

When the oil business and that company were young, before the days of pipe-lines and tank cars, practically all petroleum products were transported in barrels, and the cooperation time of the company was among the most important in its entire business. The effect of the oil on the wood of the containers was such that the barrels were being heavily leached, not only of barrels but of oil.

Hopper secured the formula for a fluid substance of cheap manufacture, which had the faculty of making a leaky barrel, when swathed out with it, oil tight and useable again. He also devised an apparatus on which oil barrels could be readily treated with his alkaliing material. Upon a rack the machine injected the material into the fluid; the rack gave it a rotary motion so as to cover the entire inner surface of the barrel and then poured the remainder back into the vat to be used on the next barrel. A coat of the Standard's familiar blue paint on the outside and the barrel was ready for use again, and its life could be repeatedly and indefinitely extended in this way.

Well, the Standard Oil Co. looked into the matter and naturally bought the idea and all the interests of the owner in the contrivance. He also devised a good furniture would afford to do, a princely sum for it. And this payment constituted the Hopper fortune which is represented today in the Fitch estate. Another party claimed to be the real inventor of the process and that Hopper secured it unfairly, but litigation that ensued resulted in Hoppers favor.

Home Use For Mask.

When the pipe in the ammonia plant at a creamery in Livingston, Mont., blew up and filled the whole building with deadly gas so that the workmen generally lost their heads and ran about in circles, not knowing what to do, John Larsen, an overseas settler, ran at top speed to his home and came back wearing an army gas mask, protected by which he bodily approached the ammonia cylinders which were pouring out their noxious fumes, shut off the ammonia, and mended the pipe.

MAYOR DAVIS CASTS HIS HAT INTO GOVERNOR RING

Cleveland Executive Announces His Candidacy for G. O. P. Nomination

TO BEGIN TOUR OF STATE

Plans to Start at Once on Personal Canvass of Ohio Counties

COLUMBUS--Mayor Harry L. Davis, of Cleveland, who several days ago announced himself a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, will shortly open headquarters in Columbus, and conduct his campaign from here.

In the meantime, Mayor Davis is planning a tour of the state that will take him into practically every county, where he personally will present his candidacy to county G. O. P. leaders, rather regardless of whether they have previously actually endorsed another candidate, or have indicated an intention to do so.

"I have been highly gratified by the results of preliminary visits I made to counties that might be regarded as typical," Mayor Davis said today.

"and, in fact, the expressions I heard everywhere, indicating a demand that I become a candidate, led to my decision to run."

Mayor Davis' formal announcement of his candidacy follows:

I announce to the voters of Ohio my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Governor. My four years of experience as chief executive of Cleveland has convinced me that the most important business of government with which the next Governor of Ohio should be entrusted, is that of the public health. There are those complicated questions of a local and national nature which inevitably follow war, which must be promptly and wisely solved. It is of the first importance to national health, and to the prosperity of the state, that we should not neglect the public health. We must protect the public health, and we must protect the public health, and we must protect the public health. Time to Worry
It's wonderful how careless people are in our days. One walks on the street, someone is bound to step on your toes and say, "Excuse me," jab an umbrella in your eye, and say, "Excuse me," after the harm is done. The other day I saw an express man knock down a man, run right over him with a big team and after that had run over him, the expressman holered, "Look out!" The man looked up and said, "Why? Are you coming back?"

The Abnormal Increase in Prices and Profits.

A letter to the Manufacturer Record from a big furniture manufacturer presents some interesting points which are commanding the consideration of the whole country. In the course of his letter he says:

"I know that you believe in profits. Everybody does. We are entitled to abnormal profits during these abnormal times, I will admit, but people are going wild. Mirrors have advanced 50 per cent in the last 30 days, 150 per cent in six months, and about 700 per cent since 1914. Lumber, which we use almost exclusively in furniture, has advanced 400 to 700 per cent; turpentine, 200 per cent in six months, and veneer, 100 per cent in the last 60 days."

"We all abuse the big trusts, the United States Steel corporation especially; but with a strike for several months and the coal strike, and with 7,000,000 tons of unfilled orders, that corporation could get almost any price it would ask. Still, I saw a big contract a few days ago for delivery during the first six months of 1920 at the same price as the last six months of 1919."

"Where is it going to end? 'I am advised that all articles to the consumers will be at least 50 per cent higher than for the last six months of 1919, and still going up.'"

"Are we going to sit still in the boat and say nothing?"

"During the war a few comparatively profited, but now all are doing it, and everyone is afraid to say anything. The newspapers will say nothing, at least that amounts to anything."

"If this continues, we may look for trouble, and we deserve it."

"That there is an unconscionable amount of profiteering, exorbitant profits being made goes without saying. Many of the industries in this country and Europe are making money and are entirely without reason. Many business men are using this unusual opportunity for putting as heavy a burden on the consumer as profit as they can possibly do under the old principle of railroad operation many years ago of all the freight which the cars could bear without destruction."

"It is fortunate that the Steel Corporation, to which our manufacturing friends have sought to hold down the price of steel and has refused to advance its price, notwithstanding the enormous demand for its products. Would that other concerns would follow its example."

Harry Lauder's Religion.

"Am I a Scotch Presbyterian? Yes, but at the front, in France, I got a new vision of God, and what it means. It means service for others. I am for the simple religion of Jesus Christ; I want no man to need to come between me and my God. We have too many creeds. We pay so much heed to our doctrines and customs that sometimes I think I forget God. We are all serving under the same Great Commander, and all marching forward and upward toward the same goal of perfection. Let's get over thinking that our particular belief is the only religion that has God's approval. The day has come for the wiping out of religious intolerance and animosities."—Harry Lauder.

A Remedy For Aches and Pains That's Different

You Don't Know What a Really Good Linctum Will Do Until You Try "Houstonia."

Most liniments act as a counter irritant on the surface, and give only temporary relief. Houstonia is different. Gets right under the trouble. Rubs it to the source of the pain, and soothes the inflamed tissue without burn or blister—but you don't have to. It goes in anywhere. Contains just what is necessary to help Nature liberate stiff muscles, ease twinging, throbbing joints, and give immediate relief to suffering from headache, lumbago, sore neck, colds in the chest, sore-throat and kindred ailments. It penetrates to the affected part, and relieves congestion. Truly Nature's Aid. Ask for Houstonia, pronounced House-tone-ash (The Original Linctum). Price, 25, 50 cents and $1.00. There's a treatise on 'The Church's Duty toward the "Red,"' in a recent issue of the Literary Digest that appeals to us.

It was the Rector of the Fifth Avenue church, that compared the Soviet Ark to the May Flower, and thereby started the discussion on the attitude which his denomination should take toward the suppression of dangerous radicalism.

The Rector was inspired to speak because Dr. Grant of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension had criticized the deportment of Emma Goldman and others because it suppressed free speech.

The Reds on the Buford was likened unto the Pilgrims by Dr. Grant, and he was promptly cited in answer to ecclesiastical authority for his unholy comparison.

We dislike to hear a minister incorporate such a statement in his sermon. Radicalism is an idea, and it is true that you cannot deport an idea. Crime of any nature is more or less an idea, but we do not tolerate crime because it is an idea.

We punish violators, and the punishment is assumed to be a method of suppression of the idea. Treason is a crime and deportation should be taken as the government's method of punishment, and a very logical way of suppressing the idea and inclination.

Furthermore the creed of the Red is as much against religion as against government. The Reds hate religion, and frankly say so. They are committed as much to the destruction of religion as they are to the destruction of Government, and the Berkman's befores his pulpit.

The government has since its establishment reserved the privilege of determining whether a citizen born can come into this country or not. That decision has never been challenged.

If admittance has been granted, and the privilege has later been taken as a grant to preach overthrow of the government that has welcomed, certainly the government has the right to apprehend, and if need be, deport such an enemy.

We take the American born out of his free environment and imprison him for major crimes. Certainly we can deport from our midst the alien who attempts to overthrow because the government is not to his liking.

Dr. Grant says it hurts us abroad to send out three hundred non-basadors of hate. We did not unload them indiscriminately. We set them down from whence they came, and Dr. Grant is in small business when he as a churchman, sends up a protest.

He should know that his own country in the world has made religion a national idea. It has made liberty and christianity the fashionable themes in its national life. Dr. Grant is pained

Bad Money

If you found a counterfeit dime, a plucked quail, or a Mexican dollar in your pay envelope on pay day, what would you do? Well—did you ever take count of the spurious minutes you passed on the firm in a week, for which you expected them and for which they did pay you good money? Did you ever check up your time as closely as you checked up the contents of the pay envelope? Chicago Tribune.

because the enemies of both of these themes are sent out and away from us.

Dr. Grant said we needed the Reds as laborers. If we were sitting as a member of Dr. Grant's church we'd change ministers or worship elsewhere.

We wouldn't exactly deport him, because he is not an alien,—but what is the real difference between Emma Goldman and the man who comes voluntarily to her aid and criticizes the government because it deported her.

The Presbyterian Advance, a denominational publication says the church should aid in stamping out radicalism. That it is not the business of the federal authority alone, but the business of every good citizen. That sounds like good sense to us.

It is a fimsy church that does not make itself loyal to civil government. In our history there are many examples where men of the cloth left the pulpit and went out in defense. In our recent war denominations that opposed war and refused to enlist became objects of reproach. Other denominations hung their service flags in conspicuous places.

Dr. Grant rests his conclusions on the right of free speech. He should know that there is no privilege so roundly abused as free speech. There are men who would have the privilege of free speech shelter them while they would sensibilities, and malign the government. The man who hungers for free speech would like also free conduct. He wants no restraint.

Authority is a fine thing to respect. Obedience to authority is a fine virtue. The man who would have no restraint is the very man that needs it most. There is abundant room in our scheme of government for modification. It is hard only to those who would destroy it. And those who would destroy it would give us a miserable substitute.

Size up the man who would overthrow and you will find him exceptionally worthy of restraint. He isn't the sort that accelerates the ship's state. What progress she has made, or is making, is in spite of him, not because of him.

Owners of big ships take their vessels into dry docks to have their bottoms scraped. Barnacles gather on the hulls and impede their progress. Deportation is the same as taking the ship of state into dry dock. We will make more and better progress when the hull is clean and free from obstruction.

No thought is given to the banance when it is scraped from the hull. They are not convertible into a useful by-product. Therefore Dr. Grant is attempting to make much out of nothing.

If Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman really want to make a government after their own liking their opportunity in Russia is unlimited. Ours is made and fashioned by the majority. They are guided, not builded, only to be

His Blessing

A sergeant was so much given to using bad language on the parade ground that some of the men complained and the C. O. interviewed him, and told him not to let it happen again. The following morning the sergeant was in charge of a very ragged squad, and after keeping silence for a considerable time, he eventually burst out with: "Bless you, my pretty dear; you know what I mean."—Tid-Bits.

Report of Special Meeting of W. C. T. U. The meeting was presided over by the President, Mrs. Boardman, who led the devotions with prayer by Miss Fitterer, the Huron county president of the W. C. T. U. Also delegate to the State convention at Columbus and to the National Victory convention at St. Louis.

Miss Fitterer is a pleasing reader and her report was very interesting, showing her attendance at the convention on sight-seeing. She told of the leadership of Miss Gordon, the national president, of Mother Carion of Iowa, poet and citizen of age, singing the "Sparrow song," repeatedly.

We will mention just a few of the many things said by different speakers of which there were fifty-seven in one day.

One of our organization does not do the work some other will be raised up. "Mothers are about the only ones who have not gone on a strike."

"The W. C. T. U. are the best dry cleaners in the world." One told of a boy who thought I. W. W. meant "Inhuman Wreckers of the World."

"2,000,000 children are in sweat alone." "Liquor men have $1,000,000 with which to fight prohibition."

"John Quincy Adams was asked when President to legislate against whisky. He replied, 'Might as well legislate against wind and wave.'"

In the Young Peoples work 15,000 signed the purity pledge in Ohio. $15,519 was subscribed for the Jubilee fund. The Chinese delegate is soon to go back to her country to work in the cause.

Miss Gordon was granted a year for travelling around the world for prohibition, beginning with the World Convention in April in London. 1200 persons were seated at the banquet with Miss Gordon as toastmistress. City officials, ministers, the legal fraternity and Woman's Chamber of Commerce, as well as many others responded.

Miss Fitterer announced an Americanization Institute to be held the last two weeks in February in Bellevue. Singing of Onward Christian Soldier, was followed by a very pleasant social hour during which substantial refreshments were served.

Eight new members were received in the local Union. When Grandpa Retired. A shopkeeper recently lent his grandson enough money to buy a motorcycle. The money was to be paid in instalments, the machine to remain the property of the grandfather until the last payment was made. One day while out riding with his grandpa, his father and jumped off his motorcycle. "Say, grandfather," said the boy, "who does this machine belong to?" "It belongs to me until you have made the last payment. That was the agreement, you know; but why do you ask?" "Well, I just want to make sure," remarked the boy with a grin, "your motorcycle needs a new tire."—The American Boy.

Crisis At Hand. The fat plumber seemed to be in a nervous mood. "Wassa matter?" sympathetically inquired his friend, the thin carpenter. "My wife is a nervous fan, that's not so bad." "But she has formed the habit of dressing like any particular star that strikes her fancy. The other day she came home with her hair fixed like Mary Pickford's. And the next afternoon she had it dressed like Norma Talmadge's." "Some class!" "And this morning I saw her trying to fix up like Theda Bara." "But why should you worry about a little thing like that?" "I have just heard that Annette Kellerman is coming to town."

Ladies Notice I have decided to give part of the mornings to my Beauty Parlor work also, and in doing so I can take a few more Patrons, so if any of you are troubled with any kind of scalp trouble or wanting Facial massage or have any Hair comings you want worked up better see me soon so I can get you finished satisfactorily before I move in the spring as I may not find a place where I can carry on this business and the property has been sold and I must vacate. The Gambler "Once I was a clerk in a grocery store at $10 a week," said the younger man, speaking of his earlier life. "But like many others, I fell in with careless companions and was induced to gamble." "I see!" interjected the elderly one, with a sigh. "You gambled and was tempted to take money, that did not belong to you." "Oh, no," was the cheerful rejoinder of the younger man. "I was enough in a month to buy the grocery store."

The Humble Boss

"It's not up to me!" the office boy grunted, and swaggered with careless pose. "It is out of my line!" the stenographer sniffed, and powdered her dainty nose.

"I'm not getting paid for janitor work," the billing clerk said with a snarl. "I've got beyond that," the book-keeper laughed as the mat by the door he eyed.

Then the boss just arrived, and he picked up the mat along with something more.—The head of a fish brought in by the boy, and he set it outside the door.

And he smiled "Good-morning" to the mat and all, as down to his desk he went. While that very superior office force felt just like the tenth of a cent, Frederick Moxon, in N. C. R. News.

Played In The Drummer Boy of

At Worcester, Mass., last Saturday the nineteenth birthday anniversary of Mrs. Jeannette Parney was celebrated. The celebrant, a baritone, was the organist of that city, having only recently retired, was celebrated. Recently the Dispatch editorially commended her conclusions as to trend of reading tastes, reached through observation taken over that long range of experience in public libraries.

Probably there are many persons still living in Ohio who in the decade immediately following the civil war saw her on the stage wearing the tender, female character in "The Drummer Boy of Shiloh," a play that was based on an historical incident of that war.

A Confederate was put on with such skill that it was sometimes necessary in the north to furnish him with an escort of police to protect him from angry members of the audience as he left the theater. Mrs. Gates was also very successful in her part and she was called upon frequently to play it with amateur support when the play was presented by local organizations, as was once done in Columbus by the old Columbus Cadets.

Local interest in Mrs. Gates' work is further increased by the fact that she was formerly the widow of Samuel Flint Babitt, long a resident of Columbus, and for a number of years the chief clerk in the office of the auditor of state. She is therefore the aunt by marriage of Mrs. Charles E. Albright of Webster Park.

The honor of having been the historical drummer boy of Shiloh has been claimed for several different persons, but he was probably John McLaughlin, an Indiana boy who at the age of ten years became a member of the Tenth Indiana Infantry, but later was transferred to Colonel Jacob's Kentucky Cavalry. At Shiloh, still in the infantry, he dropped his drum and sticks and picking up the musket and cartridge box of a dead soldier, went to the front and fought as bravely as the stoutest soldier of the regiment.

Mrs. Geo. Sinsinger was in Cleveland Monday buying spring millinery.

Communicated.

Editor Advertiser:

Speaking of wintering in Florida reminds me of a "race" that was pulled off a few years ago between A. I. Root, the Medina bee tamer, and T. B. Ferry, a prominent writer on agricultural subjects and author of a book entitled "How to Keep Well and Live Long." These men were both about 70 years of age and of about the same state of health, and the "race" was to see which one of them would come nearest to reaching the century mark. Mr. Root contended that his winter stay in Florida had a tendency to prolong his life, while Mr. Ferry held that the "toughening" effects of northern winters had an equal tendency to lengthen his stay on earth. Well, the "race" was ended about three years ago by a coffin and a fine little 366 lot in the local cemetery for Mr. Ferry, while Mr. Root is following his favorite hobby of raising chickens and trucked down on his Florida place, and is now 80 years young.

In the connection with "enjoying" such weather as we have had for the past six weeks, it is hard to realize the following closing sentence from a letter recently received from Mr. and Mrs. Gunaull, who are spending the winter in St. Petersburg, Fla. "The most beautiful such flowers, blooming nasturtiums, old-fashioned marigolds, and the begonia is just coming out,—all perfectly beautiful!"

Respy. C. F. Root.

Methodist Episcopal Church.

Subject Sunday morning 11 a. m. "Variety and Unity." Sunday evening 7 p. m. "A Modern Knight." A cordial welcome to all.

Come to the Epworth League Sunday evening and learn some interesting facts about China.

Lutheran Church.

Subject for the sermon will be "Take heed how ye hear." The preacher and teacher are by no means the only responsible parties in religious matters. It is an easy thing to say what these should do, but it is hard to explain where they fail and come short, easy to load them with defects, ignorance, bad management, lack of intelligence and so forth without end. But it is well to face about and take a look in the other direction. Come out and participate in this fair procedure, Time 11 o'clock, Sunday school, ten o'clock.

Thanks. I wish to send my thanks shown by the Royal Neighbors for their kindness and remembrance. Mrs. Clyde Day.

Why He Left The Farm

"Why did you leave the farm, my boy?" "Why did you bolt and leave your dad?" "Why did you beat it off to town and turn your poor old father down?" Thinkers of platform, pulpit, press, Are you waving in deep distress: They seek to know the hidden cause Why former boys desert their past. Some say they love it with a taste Of faster life and social waste, And some will say the silly chumps Mistake the suit cards for their trumps In wagging fresh and careless air Against the smoky thoroughfare. We're all agreed the farm's the place, So free your mind and state your case."

"Well, Stranger, since you've been so frank, I'll roll aside my hazv bank. The misty cloud of theories. And tell you where the trouble seizes and their savings from the 'rainy day' has been forgotten. All this is creating a very grave situation. Industrial profits are declining because an increased production requires individual efficiency and team work. There is no time when the Americans can do when they work together.—(The Optimist.)"

Stop The Extravagance.

The extravagance of the country can not be over-emphasized. People are not saving money as they did during the war; they are speculating in stocks and real estate like drunken sailors. Savings banks report that their depositors are withdrawing more money from their savings accounts than they are depositing. Speculative profits have given both swollen incomes and swollen heads to thousands upon thousands, who are living extravagantly on their new purchases, regardless of whether it was fairly or illegally gained. Thousands of persons are consuming their savings and their savings from the "rainy day" has been forgotten. All this is creating a very grave situation. Industrial profits are declining because an increased production requires individual efficiency and team work. There is no time when the Americans can do when they work together.—(The Optimist.)

ARE MIDWINTER BABIES BEST?

Some Important Exceptions to the Findings of Two Italian Scientists.

A couple of Italian scientists have figured out that most brainy people are born in the first three months of the year.

Thirteen American presidents came into the world in the first four months. They include Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Lincoln, Grant, Cleveland and McKinley.

But Woodrow Wilson came within three days of being born on the very last day of the year. Roosevelt was an October baby and Taft a Septemberer.

Clemens was also a September baby, but Lloyd George, England's first premier, arrived in January.

Some years ago Frenchmen voted Louis Pasteur the greatest man that country had ever produced and Napoleon Bonaparte second.

The former was born in December and the latter in August. So there are plenty of brilliant exceptions to that Italian rule that mid-winter babies have a mortgage on brains.

TRAP BEARS TO SAVE CATTLE

Forest Rangers of Government Perform Valuable Service for Stockmen.

In four years' time forest rangers have killed 60,473 coyotes, 8,094 bobcats, 1,829 wolves, 201 mountain lions and 137 bears. The government receives a neat little sum for these pelts. For one year's kill this amounted to $100,000.

Let us see what damage a predatory animal can do. Take the case of one Wyoming stockman. Last May two male wolves visited the ranch and got away with 100 head of sheep and 7 colts. They then turned their attention to the neighbor and destroyed for him 50 sheep. A ranger hunter ran down the marauding animals and killed them. Here are the government statistics of the annual depredations among cattle and sheep by a single predatory animal: Wolf, $1,000; stock-killing grizzly bear, $500; mountain lion, $500; bobcat, $50; coyote, $50.

GRAND OPERA WHILE YOU FLY!

We all know what the "music" of the airplane is, and our ears have become so attuned to it that the least mechanical of us can tell in an instant if anything has gone wrong with the engine. But why not make the "music" of perfect action real music? Is it past the skill of the inventor to make the airplane, instead of humming like a bee, sing like the gramophone? Aerial voyages are uniquely solitary, and the airman would experience a welcome mitigation of boredom if he could at will call for a vocal or an orchestral performance from his petrol engines.

SHE HESITATED.

"And so you proposed to Ethel last night?" asked the young man's sister.

"Yes, I did," replied her brother sadly.

"And did she give you any encouragement?"

"Oh, yes."

"Then have I to congratulate you?"

"No," she refused me."

"But I thought you said she gave you some encouragement?"

"Well," said the youth reluctantly, "she looked at me three times before she refused me!"

WORKED TOO HARD

An Irishman and a Yankee rowed a race one day. The Yankee was so easily the Irishman's superior that every little while he'd stop rowing and wait for Mike to catch up. Well, Mike was beaten, of course, but he said afterward: "Faith O'd had bested the boy easy, if O'd stopted an' took the long rest he did."

FOR STYLE OR NOTHING.

His husband—Isn't it great to be using the good old two-cent stamp again?"

"Mr. Yachunter—Well, I suppose it's all right to change the styles occasionally, but it's a big mistake to leave the change come right after I'd bought my stationery to match the latter stamps."

Jolly - Jingles

By Dudley T. Fisher Jr.

I'll tell you, if you'll keep it mum. What made the bumble-bee a bum.

Into the ancient garden Where the sweet wisteria grows Came pretty little Imogene To pluck a fragrant rose And as she gaily tripped along Between the hedges green A melancholy bumble-bee Came buzzing 'round her bean.

But Imogene was not dismayed By all his buzz and roar. "You hold," said she, "no sting for me For I've been stung before, And though your heart, be wrong by grief That to distraction drives You'd better dry your little eye Before you get the hive's."

"Ah! sighed the bum," you're very kind To sympathize with me, For never, never will you find A more unhappy bee. So if you've got the time to spare, Take out your handkerchief And have a seat while I repeat My tale of joy and grief.

"Just gaze upon this blushing rose. I've always had a hunch That here would be the place for me To ston some day for lunch. I've watched it from a tender bud, And waited long the hour When I might sit the honeyed lip Of such a lovely flower.

"Now picture, darling, if you can, My deep and dismal woe. To find no honey in the flower I've always cherished so. It's made me what I am today. A creature most forlorn. Who reads new meaning in that line, "No rose without it's thorn."

"It seems to me," said Imogene. "I've heard that line before. For once I had a little man Abuzzing 'round my door. His kiss to me was honey, oh, He spread it good and thick, But he found I had no money, so, He dropped me like a brick.

"He took his ring and everything He never said good-bye. Just grabbed his hat and left me flat. Alone to pine and sigh. I'm glad I'm here to aid and cheer In this unhappy hour. But really, bee, my sympathy Is with the (senseless) flower."

A Distinction For Ohio.

The first notable speeches made in congress against slavery were made by an Ohio man, Senator Thomas Morris. Others were there, no doubt, who felt as he did about it, but they lacked the courage of their convictions. The vested interests affected were too big to be tackled by the weak-kneed. It was the bold defense of the system by John C. Calhoun that first drew fire from the Ohioan in 1837-8, but the following year when Henry Clay sought by a noted speech to draw the attention of the country away from the slavery question in a quasi-defense, Morris answered him in a speech that attracted attention all over the nation and drew a high tribute of praise from Whittier, the poet, then a young editor, in whose office he held the post. It seemed to have found a voice in congress in the Ohio senator.

It was in this speech that Morris said: "Though our national sins are many and grievous, and the repentance of Nineveh may yet divert from us the impending danger which hangs over our heads as by a single hair. That all may be safe, I conclude that the negro will yet be free."

Over his grave in the little cemetery at Bethel, Clermont county, there stands a stone on which is carved his name, the high office he held and the date of his birth and death; below it these words: "Unmoved by power and undisturbed by flattery," he was through life the fearless advocate of human liberty." It is a singular fact that in his address at the celebration of the centennial of the state, his subject being Ohio in the United States senate, the late Senator Foraker mentioned Senator Morris but once, and then only to list his name with those of other men who held seats in the senate and also sat on the supreme bench of the state.

Production in Germany.

In some factories, after working eight hours a day for themselves, German workmen put in three hours extra time for the sole benefit of the Fatherland, says the foreign correspondent of the New York "Evening Post." The German government has drilled into the minds of the working men of that country that it is only by their work that Germany can again take her place in the world and every effort is being made to increase production. "With other nations spending money in international trade—a money that is falling in value—the Germans feel that Germany will shortly begin to rehabilitate herself. She does not intend to buy a single luxury from the outside world; she does not intend, indeed, to buy anything for which she cannot pay in some finished product. She intends to produce something for everything she uses. She is thus giving her workmen employment, and is even securing raw material without spending her gold on her credit."

Better Days.

A better time is coming - I am quite sure of that - when you will see me thrumming my lyre in perfect bliss; the Reds, who claim attention, will be too scarce to mention, the serpent of dissension will be too weak to hiss. We all are growing sner with every passing day; the evidence grows plainer that pipe dreams fade away; and soon we'll stand and wonder why in the name of thunder we tried to tear asunder the things that ought to stay. You'll see us backward gazing and viewing, with a tear, our antics most amazing, in one unholy year, when we were all flattered, distraught and disconcerted, and every day invented new kinds of doubt and fear. And on the heights of reason, we'll mutter, "Can't be, that through one godless season no dome from bats was free? O, can it be we wanted, and clamored to have planted in this fair land enchanted, fake kinds of liberty?" Slow elow has been the waking from wild and bughouse dreams, but now the morn' is breaking, and sunlight on us streams; and as the morn' advances we'll come forth from our trances, while yet our eagle prances and fills the air with screams.

How to Economize in Consumption and Cook Successfully With Low Pressure Gas

Technical Paper 257 "Waste and Correct Use of Natural Gas in the Home," by Samuel S. Wyer, just issued by the U. S. Bureau of Mines, Washington, D. C., deals practically with the question of Gas Conservation, and from which we quote the following:

HOW TO GET COOKING BURNERS IN CORRECT POSITION

When purchasing a new stove, get either a manufactured gas stove or a natural gas stove with burners properly raised for short-flame service. The burner should be about 1 1/4 inches below the bottom of the cooking vessel.

Old stoves worth remodeling may be changed by:

- (a) Raising the manifold and burner supports so as to bring the burners to the proper height below the cooking vessel.
- (b) In some stoves the manifold may be turned one-half way around so that valves that are at the bottom will then come on the top. By altering the burner supports, the burners can then usually be brought to the proper height. In some stoves where cocks are screwed into the manifold, turning the manifold one-quarter way around, removing the cocks, screwing a nipple and elbow into the upturned opening, placing the cock in the elbow and raising the burner supports, will usually bring the burners to the proper position.
- (c) In some stoves it will be preferable to cement a new burner casting on top of existing low burners, so as to bring the burner top to the proper height.

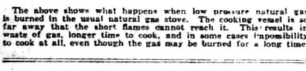

Closed tops should not be used, and in all stoves where the burners are raised, skeleton lids, grid, or open tops must be used with the short flames.

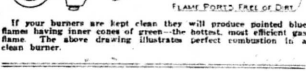

Merely lowering the cooking vessel or raising the burner, as shown above will result in satisfactory cooking. In the usual length of time the burner is lowered, the cooking vessel is so far away that the short flames cannot reach it. This results in waste of burner time to cook, and in some cases, impossibility to cook at all, even though the gas may be burned for a long time.

The above shows what happens when low pressure natural gas is burned in the usual natural gas stove. The cooking vessel is so far away that the short flames cannot reach it. This results in waste of burner time to cook, and in some cases, impossibility to cook at all, even though the gas may be burned for a long time.

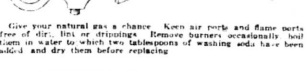

If your burners are kept clean they will produce pointed blue flames having these cones of green—the hottest, most efficient gas flame. The above drawing illustrates perfect combustion in a clean burner.

Dirt and lint in the six ports, as shown in this illustration, cause improper air and gas mixture and resulting red-tipped, sluggish flame. Dirt also often collect around the flame ports and produce a result like that shown by this sketch.

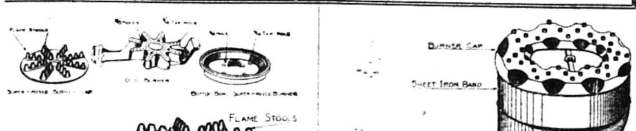

As a temporary repair remove the stove top and on drilled burners, insert three wire nails and on skillets burners, three screws of sufficient length for supporting the cooking vessel as shown above. The tip of the short low pressure flame comes close to the vessel bottom.

Give your natural gas a chance. Keep air ports and flame ports free of dirt, lint or obstructions. Remove burners occasionally and clean them. Burners of the type shown here are especially subject to dirt and dry them before replacing.

Buy no Ranges or Hot Plates in which the Burners are located more than 1 1/4 inches below top of skeleton lids, and buy no range with closed tops.

The drawing above and the one below show a method that is very simple and most satisfactory. On burners, as illustrated, where made with a removable top, it is only necessary to cut strips of sheet iron the desired length and the burner is raised. This allows the gas to flow in through the regular mixer and around the curve of the box and on into the regular burner. The box can be made any height desired. We find that raising the burner to about one and a quarter inches below the top of the skeleton lid brings the top of the flame up close enough to the pan or vessel to get good cooking results.

THE WITMAN SUPERIMPOSED GAS BURNER
To meet low gas pressure conditions and carry on cooking operations there has been developed the Witman Superimposed Gas Burner. This is a simple device that can be attached at small expense to any existing range and in use without disturbing the construction of the range.

The illustration shows the arrangement of the burner in parts, the mode of attachment and the complete burner. The Superimposed Burner may be attached to one or all of the top burners on any gas range.

Where we find a solid burner, as shown below, simply cut out a section of about one inch and three eighths on the little box-like arrangement shown in the upper illustration. This allows the gas to flow in through the regular mixer and around the curve of the box and on into the regular burner. The box can be made any height desired. We find that raising the burner to about one and a quarter inches below the top of the skeleton lid brings the top of the flame up close enough to the pan or vessel to get good cooking results.

As a temporary repair remove the stove top and on drilled burners, insert three wire nails and on skillets burners, three screws of sufficient length for supporting the cooking vessel as shown above. The tip of the short low pressure flame comes close to the vessel bottom.

Special Caution—After having adjusted your burners to the proper height never lower them again when gas pressure is higher. Control the flow of gas by the stop cock and thus maintain the same length of flame. By so doing you will obtain absolutely efficient results with a great saving in the consumption of gas, with a consequent saving in

Heating Economy Instructions—Just as soon as we can complete experiments and tests with new type low pressure gas heating appliances we will give our patrons full instructions and suggestions as to consumption of gas and expense.

The Blennerhassett Motive.

There is Blennerhassett Adams, presumably a lateral relative of Aaron Burr in his western empire scheme, throws interesting light on the motive that led the Blennerhassetts to emigrate to America and locate their luxurious home on an island in the Ohio opposite Belpre, in a magazine article. She says that it was not their democratic ideas that prompted them to leave Britain's monarchial form of government, but the fact that they were ostracized by society in their home in Ireland. And they were ostracized because they had violated the laws of propriety by marrying within the degree of consanguinity forbidden by the laws of the country. Mrs. Blennerhassett, being the niece of her husband. On both sides the families were wealthy and aristocratic. She was Miss Margaret Agnew, daughter of General James Agnew, who figured prominently with the British army in the American revolution, and her mother was Harman Blennerhassett's own sister. At the time of their marriage General Agnew was the governor of the Isle of Man. His daughter was away at school and her uncle Harman was sent to bring her home. Instead of doing so, he eloped with her. The families on both sides turned their backs on them. Blennerhassett sold his interest in his father's estate for $160,000 and with his young wife came to America and to the Ohio island home. This was not all his assets, however, for he had an interest in an entailed estate which brought him as long as he lived the sum of $6000 a year. For this reason the writer scouts the stories of the abject poverty in which Blennerhassett and his widow ended their days. She says they were able to live comfortably through all their later years.

She Didn't Gain Anything.

Eilhu Root was cross-examining a young woman in court one day. "How old are you?" he asked. "The young woman hesitated. "Don't hesitate," said Mr. Root. "The longer you hesitate the older you are."—The Ladies' Home Journal.

Appropriate Music.

"Can't you play something else than that everlasting 'March' from 'Lohengrin' at my wedding?" asked the several times grass widow, who was arranging for another of her matrimonial ventures. "Certainly, madam," responded the courteous organist. And as the bridal cortege wended its way down the aisle, the church shook to the thundering forth of that popular classic: "Over and Over Again!"

Oberlin Business College Student

Word has just been received that Miss Eva Brillhart, stenographer for The Goodrich Company at Akron, now holds the "fill-in" record of the United States for mail sale letters. She established her speed record Jan. 13, when she filled in 1,686 letters during a working day of 7 hours and 50 minutes, an average of 354 per minute and 2127 per hour. Miss Brillhart completed her course at the Oberlin Business College in June, 1918, and is one of a long list of successful stenographers sent out by that institution.
