Hanick Millinery Shop In Business 50 Years

Sisters Continue to Operate Hat Shop Started by their Mother Half a Century Ago

On April 8th, Mrs. D. Hanick celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of her very successful millinery business in the village of Plymouth. For the first ten years she enjoyed the partnership of her sister, Miss Margaret Butler, now deceased. Her first location was what was then known as the Peninsula building, now the site of the Plymouth Garage. She occupied room in the L. L. Kilburn and F. W. Kirtland blocks each eight years and has been in her present location (33) thirty-three years. Fifty years ago, Mrs. Hanick manufactured all her hats and in the hat blocking and bleaching department she employed expert straw sewers. Straw bodies were stretched over plaster of paris molds, glued and pressed into shape of the prevailing style before trimming.

In the early days she also conducted an extensive dress-making department in connection with the millinery business and her memories are of "arraying the sweet girl, graduate," and making shrouds for those she has helped to lay away to rest. In the years that have gone by she has seen the babies she fitted with bonnets, grow into grand mothers, and the whole-scale firms she dealt with, change hands many times. "Besides the diversity of styles," Mrs. Hanick observes, "the most radical change in millinery craft, was the abolishment of what was known as 'hair rooms.' From 1890 to the entry of the United States into the World War, she employed trimmers and designers to assist her in serving her patrons with the essence of good style and good workmanship in the most pleasing manner, but the drafting of our youth into the army in 1915, opening up new avenues of more lucrative positions for women, the needle and thimble were abandoned in favor of the pen and typewriter. The slogan of the business has always been honest dealing and in these times of travel and transient trade, she still retains the custom of those who bought their hats of her in the spring of 1917.

She is still active in the business when artistic needle-work is in demand, such as making flowers for corsage bouquets, also communion, confirmation and bridal veils. Her daughters are her sales-ladies. The establishment has on display a few styles which were the vogue a half century ago, and were preserved for this occasion—the fiftieth anniversary. Mrs. Hanick was the recipient of numerous congratulatory messages from friends, patrons and former employees, many of who have located at distant points.

Presbyterians Have Good Year

At the annual meeting of the local Presbyterian Church, last Thursday evening, all the departments closed the year with all obligations met and a balance in the treasury. The Church had met the full requirements in sending delegates to the different conferences of the County and State, in which the different cooperating churches participated. A full delegation of young people with their share of appointment was sent to the Young People's Conference at Mansfield, last Fall. A full quota of delegates with appointment in full was sent to Dayton Y. P. Conference. Also the full quota of delegates and appointment was sent to the State Council of Religious Education at Tiffin last June. The reports showed not only intensive but also extensive work done. A spirit of co-operation and help, along lines in which the various denominations are interested, was one of the interesting features of the reports.

Walter Payne Dies at Family Home Thurs.

Death Comes Suddenly After Week's Illness With Pneumonia.

Friends and relatives of Walter B. Payne were shocked to learn of his sudden death, Thursday afternoon at the family home three miles south of town, following a week's illness of lobar pneumonia.

Mr. Payne was born in Ganges, April 17, 1881, and has lived in this community practically all of his life. Services were held Sunday afternoon at the Presbyterian church, with Rev. Miller in charge, and interment made in Greenlawn Cemetery.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife, three children, parents, one brother and two sisters.

NEW PAPER STARTED HERE

Plymouth is taking another step forward. This time it is in the way of another newspaper. The first issue appeared last week, and from what everybody says, its going to be a "bumdinger."

The B. & M. Broadcasting is the name given the new publication and it will appear weekly in the columns of The Advertiser. The paper is published and edited by The Brown and Miller Hardware store, and its success is already assured.

We welcome the new paper inasmuch if you can't find news in our columns you can turn to the B. & M. and entertain yourself with a whole page of REAL news from Plymouth's progressive hardware store.

Paragraphs

Several of our citizens have voluntarily contributed to the band fund. No definite announcement is available yet, but indications are that Plymouth will have its annual band programs.

While Plymouth is enforcing the ordinance requiring a parking light on all machines, our neighboring city, Shelby, is behind the times. A ride over Shelby at night will convince anyone that the driver ought to be protected by having lights on all parked cars. Its dangerous omission, especially when you are required to use dimmers.

Beryl Miller turned pink in the face Tuesday night when he received a call to report before council. Miller was attending a hardware convention at the Davis restaurant, and the boys accompanied him over to the office to help smooth things over.

"Marti" Grissinger, famous hard-ware salesman who gives Wellington as his home, was in town Tuesday. He was accused of not paying "horsehoes dues." Marti wants to know if the "champion horsehoes" doesn't have to pay dues also.

This is not an advertisement but we consider it a privilege to say something of the modern sanitary bakery operated in Plymouth by the Lehman. It is a credit to a town many times the size of Plymouth to boast an institution such as this. Let us all eat Plymouth products—Beverly ice cream too.

Well, a few of the boys around town say that the fish are biting fine. Several good catches have been reported this week in nearby streams.

The scraper has been at work on some of the streets and their condition has been greatly improved. However, most of them could use cinders or crushed stone.

The public square had semblance of a motordrome Sunday with all the motorists passing through. When the autos begin to crowd the road, you can bet that spring is almost here.

There's a story going about that implicates three of our foremost citizens. For the best story submitted on "Eggs and Cream" we offer a year's subscription free.

The young people of the community will have an opportunity to enjoy themselves Saturday when the Religious Council meets at the Presbyterian church for an all day session.

Talk C. of C. For The Next Twelve Days

Annual Meeting to be Held on the 19th; Banquet and Program Planned.

The annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce will be held Tuesday, April 19, at which time the election of officers and other business will take place. The program for this meeting will be announced next week and those on the committee are endeavoring to make this a real gathering of local business men and others.

There are other towns around us who are making attendance records one hundred per cent and there is no reason why we shouldn't begin to make plans to present on the 19th.

Plymouth bears a good name for miles around and a feeling of goodwill toward the town exists by residents who live a few miles out, and even in larger towns close by one can always hear a good word for the home town. So if other people think your town is worth a good word why don't you think its good enough to come out and help keep its good name. Let's forget our selfishness and petty grievances and start the year out with a real live chamber of commerce.

The committee for the next meeting is composed of A. A. Root, Chas. G. Miller and Elden Nimmons.

Cantata Heard By Large Crowd

The sacred cantata, "Ruth, The Moabitess," by J. Astor Broad, pleased a large audience last Wednesday evening at the Christian Reformed Church in Coleridge.

Mr. John S. Cok proved himself a very capable director while the accompanist Miss Lent Workman made her hearers soon realize that they were listening to a pianist of unusual experience by her perfect touch and expression.

Mrs. S. Struyk, soprano soloist, was an exquisite voice, a sweetness that is preeminent in the delicate shading of tone and expression.

Mrs. John Buurma, contralto; Mrs. Tom Shaarda, soprano; Rev. S. Struyk, bass and Mr. Nicholas Mol, tenor also are deserving of special mention as well as the chorists whose blended voices added much to the cantata.

A silver offering was taken up to be added to the organ fund. The organ is expected to be installed within a few weeks.

Visitors from Plymouth, New Haven and Willard were present and all were pleased with the evening's music.

Moved From Cleveland

Mr. and Mrs. George Eastman and grand-daughter of Cleveland have moved into the property on West Broadway, owned by Walter Thrush, and formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Warren Bevier. Mr. Eastman is employed as machinist at the Pat-Root-Hatchery Company.

Removed to Home

Mrs. William Payne of near Plymouth who suffered a stroke of paralysis last Thursday was removed home Tuesday morning by the Miller Ambulance. Mrs. Payne was taken to the Shelby Memorial Hospital for treatment and last reports were that she is considerable better.

"WINNERS OF THE WILDERNESS" ONE OF YEAR'S FINEST

"Without doubt one of the greatest historical Western pictures ever made."

"Winners of the Wilderness" makes good the promise of Louis B. Mayer, head of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, that he would give to picture goers a new type of historical Western.

It has all the good characteristics of a great feature picture, and at the same time it offers a historical romance such as has seldom been seen on the screen. The film tells the story of the battle between English and French for supremacy in what was then the wilderness but now comprises the Middle West and Atlantic States.

This picture, which will be shown at the Temple theatre, Willard, Friday and Saturday, with Tim McCoy in the starring role, and Joan Crawford as the featured feminine lead, sets a standard for other producers of historical Westerns to go by.

TWO POPULAR PLAYERS STAR IN THIS FILM

"Tin Hats" is one of those rare pictures that builds up to a supreme comedy climax, and then knows when to stop. So many comedies start well, but drag at the finish and spoil the effect of the whole effort. Not so "Tin Hats," however, which will keep the whole house laughing uproariously through the whole picture at the Temple Theatre, Willard, on Monday and Tuesday.

Claire Windsor and Conrad Nagel head the cast of this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, and the combination proves even more effective than it ever has in the past. Under the direction of Edward Sedgwick, the two reveal comedy qualities never before suspected, and in the more serious moments of the picture handle every scene with poise and dramatic understanding.

Miss Windsor plays the part of Elsa Von Bergen, a titled German girl, come to claim her estate on the Rhine immediately after the signing of the Armistice. Her path crosses that of three irresponsible American doughboys, played by Nagel, George Cooper and Bert Roach, and her destiny becomes strangely interwoven with the odd trio.

Cooper and Roach as the former gangster and the son of a St. Louis German brewer contribute notably to the comedy of the picture. Their every appearance is the signal for a gale of laughter.

If you saw "The Big Parade" you remember Tom O'Brien. Tom is in the army scene in "Tin Hats" as the hard-boiled top sergeant. A delight to the audience, Tom strikes terror in the hearts of these three doughboys.

"Tin Hats" is Edward Sedgwick's first production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will be shown at the Temple Theatre, Willard, on Monday and Tuesday. He has made of it much more than a "zoo" comedy, for besides being uproariously funny it has a real plot, and one with just enough drama to make the comedy twice as real.

The director himself wrote the story which was adapted by Lew Lipton. Donald Lee wrote the continuity.

Says Sam: This corn boxer clean-up is a blow at personal liberty, all right—the personal liberty of the corn boxer.

Girl Scout News

Plymouth troop assembled for their regular meeting on Monday evening with twenty-eight present.

The court of honor system was inaugurated and for the first ten minutes after the whistle blew, each patrol met by themselves and discussed questions of what they wanted to do at the meetings and for the summer.

At 7:40 the formation was held, their roll call, and all were able to answer "present" as there was no one tardy.

Mrs. Floyd Anderson came up to assist with the sewing, and the groups were soon busy with needle and thread.

At 8:30 practice was held on the Girl Scout songs to be given at the Parent-Teachers meeting on April 21. This is to be Girl Scout night, and the entire program taken up by the Plymouth troop.

A great deal of attention has been attracted by the lamp shades which have been displayed in the window of the Lippus Dry Goods Co. These are samples of the work done by the Scouts and orders will be taken for them. They range in price from $2.50 to $3.50 each.

At 8:45 "Taps" was sung, after which the patrol leaders met with the captain and lieutenant for a brief conference.

Following the luncheon a social time was enjoyed and a very unique plan of entertainment prepared by the hostess.

Each guest was presented with a little booklet entitled "My Life—Past, Present and Future," to be filled in by themselves. Magazines were then passed around and the booklets filled by pasting pictures cut from the magazines and representing the various stages of life.

Spring Frocks Prove

Winter Far

Behind

Before the last fires are laid in the grate the first spring frocks are seen in the evening. For toward the end of the winter season, after the holiday rush, our formal clothes often begin to look a little faded and tattered. Then a fresh, simple frock like that shown above is new life for evening hours and a most useful gown for the rest of the spring and summer. It is lovely in sheer and colored Georgette with its slenderizing jabot drapery falling softly with plicated edge from neck to hem. A shade of the Georgette is repeated in the smart twin flowers, while a further note of elegance is added when the satin slippers are dyed to this same shade.

SHALL WE "PAY" AS WE KILL?

By Ernest N. Smith
General Manager, American Automobile Association

It would be a personal calamity of major proportions if you or I were injured by a motor car when without funds to pay a doctor and hospital bill or living expenses until normal earning capacity was restored. The catastrophe would be complete if we could not recover awarded damages from the motorist who ran us down.

That is the characteristic condition described by those who attempt to amend that situation by proposing compulsory compensation insurance, or the equivalent of workmen's compensation insurance, or what have you?

Advocate of this appeal, often linked with unassorted claims and specious arguments, there is much misunderstanding as to what is really involved in this compulsory insurance, which if universally adopted, will cost the American public approximately $5,000,000,000 a year but will not contribute, according to most thinkers on the subject, one single item to the cause of safety and the preservation of life.

As a motorist, I believe that private insurance is essential and carries a large amount, but my back is up if my state tells me I must insure for certain amounts before I can drive, and dictates the financial responsibility I must assume. I am interested in knowing, as a motorist, what benefit to society and to my compulsory insurance is going to be.

The High Cost Apparent
The point at issue, as stated in the first paragraph, is easily seen. Whether the remedy can be applied by the state through compelling me to carry insurance is a matter of justifiable doubt. The enormous financial burden to the country, however, is clearly apparent.

Let me set forth in two brief paragraphs two contrasting situations in which you might find yourself. We draw our best morals from personal experiences anyway.

FIRST, you can live in communities where no driver's license is required, where there is no inspection made of your driving ability or record, or a record kept of a motorist's infractions of law. No one is legally prevented from driving a motor car at any time, under any conditions, unlicensed or in jail. Speed limits are not enforced. There is no such thing as highway police. "Fast" cars are meted out usually by highway judges who are plain farmers in many instances.

I have not overdrawn this picture. Here is a locality where insurance would seem to be required. It is the fact that in such places it is hard to secure convictions, would insurance solve the problem? If anything, it would aggravate it. Individual moral responsibility would be deadened.

When Strict Law Enforced
SECOND, picture a state in which there is a strict driver's license law and a record kept of accidents. All the cities in the state enforce similar traffic laws. The roads are wide, bad curves eliminated, and intersections well signposted. Drivers who break the law are forbidden to drive for stipulated periods. Firms who employ reckless drivers are called to account. If a motorist injures a pedestrian and is found guilty and does not pay damages, he is forbidden the use of his car until the damages are paid, irrespective of further punishment. Lists of motorists whose licenses have been revoked are regularly published. An adequate state highway police force is on the alert. Fewer courts do their duty.

you think there would be fewer accidents?

These questions bring us back to the original proposition of what compulsory automobile insurance was designed to accomplish. Let's analyze the situation.

Twenty million automobiles in the United States run the equivalent of twenty-five thousand times around the earth every day of the year. By competent authorities it is generally admitted that our traffic problems will be settled only when we have more highways, wider highways and when engineers have rebuilt our congested cities to handle properly automobile traffic. Of 3,000,000 miles of road in the United States approximately 500,000 miles are improved, and it is upon the latter roads and our streets that our 20,000,000 automobile deaths occur and our 750,000 injuries.

Compulsory insurance advocates say they want every motorist to be financially responsible—that no injured and guiltless person may lack the wherewithal to pay doctor bills and hospital bills. Would that we could compel each financially responsible person in every line of business and in every human contact. The million-dollar accident is the rule.

Nobody has yet presented national figures, however, showing how many injured pedestrians, guiltless of contribution to the accident, are unable to recover awarded damages. This statement is not made in an attempt to shift recovery and the burden to point out that before damages are collected it must be established that the injured party was not at fault. The best statistics were wholly at fault in about one-third of the cases.

If we had uniform and universal compulsory insurance, only one-third of those injured would appear to have a clear case of recovery and the usually settled months after hospital and doctors' bills are due. And the injured cannot recover unless the accident causing the accident is within the jurisdiction of the court. So nearly as we can ascertain, therefore, that the injured party is not at fault, this situation call for an adjustment or enforcement of the present law.

Twenty Per Cent Injured
About twenty per cent of the motorists in the United States are insured. The percentage varies from little or nothing in remote farming communities to as high as 68 per cent in cities. Here have another interesting situation. Hundreds of thousands of motorists, such as farmers residing in territory where no compulsory insurance occurs, must pay out millions of dollars in insurance because of accidents which they have caused.

Why the majority of motorists already carry insurance. So, taking the nation as a whole, some legislators are considering laws which would cost the American public nearly one billion dollars without knowing what and how many will receive financial assistance not otherwise provided for.

Why the Billion Total
I reach the billion-dollar figure by using $30 a car for 20,000,000 cars. The cost of insurance and the number of cars is conservative. The number of cars will increase, and it is probable that the cost of insurance will also increase. Property damage insurance ought to be included in a comprehensive compulsory law. This would add $300,000,000 more, or a total of $900,000,000. Need one refer to our war experiences showing the enormous cost to the Government of damages in business to justify the belief that the compulsory automobile insurance bill placed one billion dollars annually?

From a close study of the situation in all parts of the United States, I have come to the belief that the justifiable irritation of the American public over this situation springs from the fact that so little is done in a majority of cases to penalize the motorist who causes the accident. Drunken, reckless or incompetent—he too often pays a cash fine and continues his drunken, reckless, incompetent motoring habits. He should be banished from the highways!

The public that has but little confidence that laws will be enforced and penalties imposed, says in disgust, "Let the injured get something out of it." And so with this back-hand gesture an already overtaxed population may because of an indifference to consequences or lack of understanding, suddenly awaken to the fact that a new burdensome tax is levied, and that an additional billion-dollar a year is being spent without a nickel of that amount being used to wipe out the hazards that cause automobile injuries and deaths.

As a motorist, I want to see stricter supervision of traffic. I want to see present laws enforced and the adequate traffic force to do the work. Fools First, Then Angels Fools will rush upon railroad crossings where angels later tread. The smart grocery clerk tears up and down my quiet street and goes around corners the two wheels of his car are regulated. A drunken driver leaves dead and injured in his wake. He never should drive.

As a motorist, I want to see the student plays he is on his own campus in the streets of my city. Armed men and dead men and men whose sight is affected have a right to drive an automobile in many places. People who ought to be in a sanatorium are out in automobiles.

Why? Because in too many places, in the past, state legislatures haven't had the nerve to enact modern motor code, or haven't had the requisite knowledge to write a law with teeth in it. For fear of offending constituents they dare not enact a strict drivers' license law and eliminate through examination or forfeiture of license, the person who should not drive a car.

Instead they offer a solace of money as a recompense for death. What a double tragedy!

Now Under Experiment
Massachusetts has adopted a compulsory automobile insurance law. It is already involved in complexities. It covers only personal injury liability. It is in force only on state highways. And so it must be supplemented by other insurance if all roads and all conditions are to be covered. Its advocates admit its present weakness by giving assurance that time will point out its defects and they may be remedied by amendments. It would seem, therefore, that other states might want to avoid the outcome of the Massachusetts experiment.

It is not to be presumed, however, that death and injury will be allowed to multiply while awaiting the outcome of the experiment. The American Automobile Association, the largest federation of motor car owners, after a thorough investigation rejected compulsory liability insurance. It believes that personal responsibility for safe driving must be accounted and not defended by a payment of cash. It feels that guards must be set up and education in safety carried on.

It feels that the most potent remedy is ready for use.

It is ready for application in forty states. The Highway Safety Conference of 1927. I refer to the traffic and safety code of the National Conference on Highway Safety, which was adopted two years ago by Secretary of Commerce Hoover and supported by nine national civic organizations.

Traffic Experts in Conference
The traffic experts in the conference were included in the various investigating committees. For nearly two years the committee met and considered every phase of the work. The national conferences were held. Every remedial suggestion was given consideration. Compulsory liability insurance was rejected. A universal traffic and safety code, however, was adopted. It is the distilled essence of keen brains and humanitarian purposes. It offers the best solution for the present problem and if all the state legislatures will adopt it, the United States will have taken the most important step forward in accident prevention.

Why ignore that code and, in its place, submit a "Pay as You Kill" program?

No Universal Traffic Code
There is a universal code for ships that sail the seas. There are building codes that faulty construction may not endanger lives. There are safety codes for railroad operation. All have contributed to the preservation of human life.

But to date there has been no universal traffic code. The greatest transportation moment in the world has ever seen has grown apace in places not fitted to carry it. It has been regulated by a multiplicity of laws—derived from local judges as puzzled by the complexities of the situation as were the motorists themselves—and enforced by police forces usually inadequate in numbers and in training to perform the task. State laws are of little value, however, unless there is strict municipal regulation. The cities, in which most of our deaths and accidents occur, must have similar traffic and safety rules, such, for example, as are being adopted in Pennsylvania and Michigan. These are based upon the Hoover Code.

ation? Must we strike a cash balance on human lives?

Hoover Presents Best Solution
The most constructive solution in sight is the Hoover Code, applied nationwide with adequate traffic forces to insure its operation and respect for its ratings. The public can ill afford for its own protection, to ignore that code. It can ill afford to ignore the principle of personal responsibility. This nation cannot quit a traffic conscience or save the traffic wounds of the country with a postiche of currency.

Curran Worries Are Remedied by the Ideal

Springtime is housecleaning time for the curran problem. Is one that every household has to face. But the ideal laundry at Willard has installed certain machinery that eliminates all the work and worry attached to the curran question.

The material is handled with utmost care and when the curtains are finished they "hang" straight and even. The manner in which they are returned to you will be surprising for they are like new.

With the machine and increased capacity for handling this class of work the cost of having your curtains laundered is quite small. See the advertisement on page 4, this issue.

AIR-TIGHT RADIO

The new Federal Radio Commission has been holding public hearings on the radio situation. Representatives of the National Broadcasting Company are urging limitations upon stations serving local or limited areas, but they advocate giving stations that have a wide service the full use of the air, as that is the only way, they claim, to bring the highest grade programs to country-wide audiences. Representatives of the arts, science and industry, are giving the Commission the benefit of their superior judgment. Heretofore only the fans and the commercial interests have been able to make themselves heard.

PATRONIZE AMERICAN SHIPS

The United States Shipping Board has appealed to the leading merchants of the country to cooperate in the effort being made by the Government in behalf of the merchant marine. Over in England it is a part of the patriotic code of the people to boost England's ships. They send their freight on them, and when they travel abroad it must be under their native flag. Hence, England has the greatest merchant marine in the world.

There are several thousand regular tourists from the United States who go abroad each season and boycott the American boats. About the only reason they have to offer is the difference in the quality of drinks served on the American and foreign ships. The Shipping Board thinks that it is a very poor measure for patriotism.

Why didn't the government prevent the corn borer from entering this country? Because the borer probably entered about 1909, and it wasn't until 1913 that federal inspection of plant imports was authorized.

VOLUME 1

P. H. S. First In Annual Sales And Advertising

The P. H. S. part of the Rich-Cornell annual is on press with a long string of honors attached to its name. The work on this edition was capably taken care of by the following staff:

Editor-in-Chief—Marguerite Boardman.
Business Manager—Corinne Scott.
Assistant Business Manager—Helen Becker.

Circulation Manager—La Verne Sommerlot.

In addition to the regular staff, Betty Bachrach and Martha Bowman assisted in editing the issue by writing Basketball notes and Senior prophecy respectively.

All our efforts were amply repaid when we were told by the county editor in chief that our copy was by far the best of any in the county.

P. H. S. headed the list in number of annuals sold, our total sales being 213 copies. This part of the work was headed by LaVerne Sommerlot with Margorie Becker, Deryl Stork, Raymond Hatch, Junior Bachrach, Alveta Hale, Emeline Fate, Dorothy Straub, Eloise Shaver, Helen Colyer, Thelma Kerman, Eunice Henry as assistants.

Not content with being second in and part of the work the business department of the staff, sold the greatest amount of advertising in the county.

It meant a great deal of hard work to put P. H. S. at the head of the list all he could and the result was a success. We only wish we could feel that every one in the town was working as hard for the best interest of the school.

Shocking Time in Physics Class

There has been a good deal of sparking done in the Physics classes lately. What is more, we were shocked to see Flips and Helen holding hands! We have had the opportunity of seeing Lena blush, something very unusual; and have been entertained by watching Flips do the Charleston. All of this excitement and commotion has been due to an experiment with the static electrical machine and Leyden jars.

CHRIST, OUR PASSOVER

1 Cor. 5:7

We have no definite knowledge why the apostle Paul did refer to this wonderful saving force of the Passover, but suppose that the allusion in the text may have been suggested by the time of the year, or by seeing some of the devout Jews leaving Ephesus, where the apostle then was preaching the Gospel of Hope, to whoseover would listen to this strange story of salvation, to start for Jerusalem that they might eat the Passover, with their friends. It matters not so much as why Paul refers to the Passover, for the Passover as it does that the same was an established fact, for the Passover in the land of Egypt many years before was only a shadow of the sufferings and death of Christ in the Passover of the new testament. It was the old testament shadow of the Cross, the active prophecy of the future, as well as an historical memorial of the past.

Let us briefly look at the facts in this case. What an analogy between the Jewish Passover, the slaying of the lamb without blemish, and the sacrifice of the Christ, the pure and holy lamb of God slain for the sins of the race of man. Under the Jewish dispensation the Egyptian Passover delivered the faithful from death at the hand of the avenging spirit of Jehovah, under the Christian dispensation the sacrifice of Jesus upon the high altar of the cross without the city gates, saves the believer from an endless death. The most significant fact stands out boldly in this truth, that both were appointments of God the Father. The Jewish people were in a deplorable condition in the land of Egypt. They were about to leave the land of bondage for the land of Canaan, and as it had been ordained that the first born of the land should die during the night, the same peril of death hung over Israel as Egypt, and if they had been left to themselves they would have perished along side of their cruel taskmasters. The Passover was not a conception of the

Shall Cup be Awarded According to Present Plan

The joint Literary program of the two societies was given on Friday, a.m. at 2:30. Although the Orythians won the program, keen rivalry was shown throughout.

Perhaps the outstanding event was the stunt of the Clinians. Interest was evident from the appearance of the room, for the top of most every desk was occupied.

Another outstanding feature was John Root's vocal solo. The first solo "Just a Cottage Small" was so pleasing that he responded to the applause with a second selection, "In a Little Spanish Town."

As a whole the programs were both very well presented as was evident from the time it took the judges before they were able to announce the decisions.

It is not certain as to whether a third program will be given, as the constitution will have to be amended before these programs will be in accordance with the constitution of the societies.

The idea advanced at present is that the constitution not be amended but the contest carried on in this manner. The silver cup can be awarded only after a program as sponsored by the constitution. This is the solution of the puzzle.

To have the contest between societies on the evening of May 3, consisting of debate, declamation, short story and oration, and the literary cup awarded to the respective winning society according to the decision of three interested judges, not town people, instructors.

The remainder of the program not relating to literary, as put on in the past semester in High School, vocal solos, sketches, quartet and stunts, presented on the afternoon of May 3, in assembly room of High School and judged by the three usual judges, Berry, Walters, Gooding. These judges will also judge the evening presentation in collaboration with the afternoon, regardless of the first decision, and thus settle the rivalry.

According to the number of points each society has attained in the three programs.

This plan would settle the indecision of the students as to whether the Rules Observed by Social Side of P. H. S. in 1887

1. After twilight a young lady would not be conducting herself in a becoming manner, by walking alone.
2. When tripping over the pavement, a lady should gracefully raise her dress a little above her ankle.
3. In passing over a bridge the gentleman should offer his hand to the lady.
4. When dancing—unmarried ladies are accompanied by their mothers or chaperons.
5. In place of saying "Can I go, too?" the gentleman must say, "Miss _____, allow me to be your protector home." The answer should be "with pleasure, sir!" if my company will pay you for your trouble."

"Fighting 69th" Congress Cannot Compare With English Class in P.H.S.

The famous feats of the late congress certainly have nothing over on the second year English class. Although the students have not come to blows as yet, it has been remarked that there will be a few black eyes before the sessions are over—for the class is studying Argumentation.

A series of debates were given by the students in English II on various topics in "Julius Caesar." This was not enough; hot arguments arose over the questions for debate, which was very amusing indeed. More and more arguments have come up, until now the entire class period is consumed in staging these arguments.

It is immensely interesting to listen to them; and immensely dangerous to engage in them. And yet these arguments have developed much ability along argumentative lines, and we foresee intelligent and impressive debate teams.

silver cup should be awarded according to the outcome of an unconstitutional final contest.

The vote of the students will decide whether this method is to be used or not.

A Word With the Old Folks

Elderly People Are Learning Importance of Good Elimination.

In the later years of life there is apt to be a slowing up of the bodily functions. Good elimination, however, is just as essential to the old as to the young. Many old folks have learned the value of Doan's Pills when a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys is required. Scanty or burning passages of kidney secretion are often signs of improper kidney function. In most every community are scores of women and children who acclaim the merit of Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

WHAT CHILDREN SHOULD KNOW

In the Arabian Nights tales folks used to sit on magic carpets and make wishes that carried them off to distant lands, and their journeys were made in ease and comfort.

Accident insurance companies have had a bitter hate for magic carpets in houses and homes, as they pay out a great many thousands dollars each year for injuries received from slipping on rugs. An insurance magazine carries the picture of what is called the du pont rug anchor. It takes the magic and the tricks out of rugs and keeps them flat on polished floors, and prevents them from slipping. The anchor rug is placed between the rug and the floor, and it creates a suction that makes the rug stay put. It is quiet, well-behaved and does not injure the floor or the rug. And you

A letter may be posted in New York and the air plane mail will deliver it in San Francisco the following day. Bird men travel in airplanes "with the swiftness of the wind." There is no magic about it except the magic of electricity, gasoline and a scientific machine. Magic carpets are stupid in comparison.

"There was magic in the history of Aladdin's wonderful lamp. By rubbing it and wishing wonders were performed. The magic of lamps of today unfold without even rubbing—you simply touch a button and electricity lightens up everything about you. What is electricity? Edison says he doesn't know. Let's call it modern magic. Modern chemists do not need iron, wood, or other raw materials, to get together lamps, electric light, switch wall plates, or similar decorations. They make pyroxin finishes that decorate everything and are made to harmonize with beautiful color schemes.

There was not enough magic in all of the ancient days to keep window shades clean. "Oh, what a dirty window shade" is an expression as old as the hills. But there is a recent invention known as a tontine window shade. You can turn the hose off it and wash it the same as one does a handkerchief or a shirt. It comes out perfect.

CHURCH BUILDERS GO TO CUBA
Gifts aggregating $25,000 are being sought by Dr. Henry Van Dyke, poet, author, preacher, and former Minister of the United States Government to the Netherlands, and his associates on an American committee which has undertaken to assist in building a "Union Church" in Havana. The movement asks for nation-wide attention and support, as a cause which will contribute largely to the progress of Cuba and to good relations between the two countries.

Officially and unofficially, the cooperation of Americans in this enterprise has been applauded. The State Department and other branches of the national government feel that this is a long step in the tardy development of philanthropic interest in a southern neighbor, while American church organizations in a southern neighbor, while American church or organizations have repeatedly asserted their approval of the project.
