

QUOTA HERE IS $250 FOR 1930

Red Cross Workers Headed By Mrs. Earnest Will Solicit Town For Year's Membership

The annual drive for membership in the Red Cross is under way over the entire United States, and in receiving special emphasis in Richland county. Officials in the county chapter wish to make it clear that it is not in the Community Fund, because it serves the entire county, but does cooperate with all the agencies participating in the fund, clearing all cases through the Clearing House, and is a member of the Council of Social Agencies and Social Workers Club.

As the Red Cross is for the purpose of relieving suffering, and bettering conditions prevalent in the country, aid is interested primarily in the war veterans, his needs, benefits, and medical care, you are asked to open your door to the Red Cross workers in Plymouth, and to cooperate with them. Last year 314 men in Richland county were assisted by funds and aid from the organization, and received homes, compensation, or insurance.

The call comes but once a year, and the membership fee is not excessive. Let us reply with a smile. The chairman of the workers in Plymouth is Mrs. E. L. Earnest. She is assisted by Mrs. E. H. Hoffman, Mrs. J. E. Nims, Sandusky street; Mrs. C. P. K. Root, North and Portier; Mrs. P. E. Root, Mrs. Eldon Nims, Plymouth street; Mrs. C. H. Hershner, East High and Mulberry; Mrs. H. Rogers, Trux street; Mrs. T. P. West High; Mrs. E. F. Fisher, East and Franklin; Mrs. J. E. Berber, West Broadway; Mrs. Y. E. Nims, Park and Walnut; J. E. Nims, Main Square; J. E. Berber, Industrial collecting.

The quota for Plymouth and the township is $250. To 1929 $154.75 was the total sent in. The workers and the chairman receive nothing for their time and merit the satisfaction of aiding a worthy cause.

Former Resident Is Killed in Accident

Oliver Faust Dies in Mansfield Hospital Following Crash

Private services were held Wednesday for Oliver A. Faust, 55, a former Plymouth citizen, at the late home in Butler, at 2 o'clock. Rev. William Dunning, of the Methodist church, was in charge, and burial was made in the Butler cemetery.

Last rites for Glenn Swank, 17, were held Tuesday in Butler, at the Evangelical church, with interment in the Butler cemetery.

The death of Faust and Swank occurred when the car in which they were riding last Saturday night crashed into the trunk of a tree which was lying in the road on Bell street, Butler. The two, both of whom were in company, Clarence Dunning, also of Butler, were thrown to the ground by the car driven by Faust, hit the obstruction.

According to witnesses, the tree was lying about two-thirds of the way across the street, with a white light hung midway to the end. It is thought that Faust failed to notice that the light was not at the extreme end of the trunk. The tree had been cut by Guy Spahr at the front of the Spahr property.

Medical aid was unobtainable given at the Mansfield General Hospital, where Dunning is yet confined with a broken leg and other injuries. High school chum of Swank's acted as pall bearer at the young man's funeral.

Faust was employed as a telegraph operator on the R. & O. for about 35 years, previous to his work in Bellville, and was a resident of this village for many years. A large number of Plymouth people attended the funeral.

Peace Contest At New Haven Sunday

Seven Contestants Enter Contest Won By Miss Irene Clark

The Prince of Peace contest was held at New Haven church last Sunday evening, with Irene Clark winning first place.

The seven contestants, Hermina Kruger, Vera Moore, Florence Snyder, Irene Clark, Lucille Loftand, Alice Van Wagner and Earl Snyder, each of whom presented a well learned declamation in a manner that was interesting, instructive and impressive. The judges' scores were high and very close, indicating that the speakers had spent much time and effort in preparation.

The purpose of each speaker seemed to be to impress the audience with his or her particular message as a contribution to the cause of peace, and in this splendid work they all deserve much commendation. Although but one medal could be awarded, there were really seven winners.

The judges gave third place to Miss Alice Van Wagner who also interpreted of Bernard C. Claussen's selection entitled "The Strategy of Peace." Second place was awarded to Miss Lucille Loftand who gave in her own impressive and impressive way Charles W. Johnson's selection on "Fighting War."

First place was given Miss Irene Clark who gave to her audience a beautiful picture of world peace in the declamation, "The World in My Country," by Edgar Winter. Miss Clark will represent the New Haven high school in the county contest to be held some time in December.

DRILL TEST WELLS FOR LOCAL WATER SUPPLY

Pure Water In Sufficient Quantity Assured After Successful Trials On Plymouth Lands

The possibility of a pure and sufficient water supply for Plymouth is becoming more of a certainty each day. For years the village has been in a struggle over a water supply that would receive the approval of the state board of health, and a few years ago the matter brought much heated arguments, pro and con, over the best source of water for the town. But today the realization of water fit to drink and use in the household is near at hand. Already test wells have been drilled and these wells are proving to be an exceptional indication of both quality and quantity.

Some weeks ago the village council secured A. E. Kimberley of Columbus to engineer the project of well drilling, and he has rushed the work through in every detail. Carl Fife of Greenwich is doing the test well drilling, and so far he has had excellent results. His first trial was successful and the second well which he is now drilling points to a fine flow of water, and it is believed to be of the soft variety. The test wells are 4 1/2 inches, and those that are approved will be enlarged to 8 1/2 inches. The first of the wells was drilled on the Wm. Ellis place near the old ball diamond. The second one is located on the A. O. Brooks farm just west and north of town near the B. & O. tracks. Several other sites are in mind before the test work is finished. While no pumping tests have been made the last well indicates that a flow of 400 gallons per minute will be secured. The estimated water demand for Plymouth is around 5,000 gallons daily. It is probable that if the wells are approved that two of them will be used in giving Plymouth its water. A tentative plan of tapping on the mains on West Broadway or Park avenue, and onto the main on Sandusky street, and in doing this the town will have ample fire protection as well as an unlimited supply of water.

Village officials stated today that they expect water for Plymouth by February first if everything goes well, and we are certain that this will be welcome news to our townsmen.

SATURDAY OPENS HUNTING SEASON

Guns Prepared For Biggest Season As Legal Hunting Season Opens In Buckeye State

With guns cleaned, and oiled, and the hunter ready for action, Ohio hunters were prepared for the legal hunting season which opened Saturday morning in this state.

Early in the morning the men equipped to the fields and brush and were ready to aim at the first cotton-tail seen. The specified time for hunting rabbits is from one hour before sunrise until one hour after sunset.

An approximate number of hunters opening the season on Saturday was given at over 425,000. They have been forcing the village, township, county and deputy clerks to work overtime issuing licenses. Last year 422,000 resident hunters secured licenses from officials.

The cost of the license is $1, in addition to the fee charged by the clerk or the deputy, of 25c. A non-resident hunter must pay $15 for the license to hunt in this state. The operating costs of the fish and game bureau of Ohio, a self-sustaining organization, are met by the money received from these licenses.

The most popular animal is the rabbit, the season being open from November 15 until New Year's Day. The law forbids a hunter to bag more than five rabbits a day.

The season for killing possum, racoon and skunk is open until February 1, while the fox season closes January 1. Muskrat and mink may be killed until March 1. The open season for the ring-necked pheasant and Hungarian partridge last until November 25. In Plymouth, 215 licenses were being issued up to Wednesday. There were 250 issued last year.

People's National Bank To Distribute Checks to Members of Clubs in Dec. for Year

The People's National Bank is counting on making many homes happy this Christmas through the checks that will be sent out in December for the Christmas Money Club for the year 1936. Approximately $4,000 will be distributed to the members.

In spite of hard times the Christmas Club at the bank is fully as large as last year, and more people are beginning to realize that this is an easy merry way to provide for a real Merry Christmas. Depositors in the club range from little children to grandparents, and the books range from 25c to $5.00 a week.

The 1931 club will start early in December and can be joined at any time, but the earlier, the sooner or the settlement. Thrifty people are urged to get in line with the happy club for your 1931 Christmas.

LIONS CLUB DISBANES, AFTER WORK OF 2 YEARS

After a struggling effort of two years, the members of the Lions Club decided at their last meeting, held Friday at the Brown & Miller Hardware Company, to disband.

The balance in the treasury was turned over to Supl. Miller to be used to purchase shoes for needy boys and girls.

The organization at first seemed to flourish but one by one the members dropped out, until only four business men were left as members, with possibly 14 other men from the community coming to the will.

Lack of cooperation and interest were given as the reasons for disbandment. Dr. Geo. Searle, Jr., was the first president, and E. E. Balduf served last year until he moved to Columbus.

The different committees reported on accomplished work. The board also made out plans for the coming two months. Plans were made for the banquet which will be held during Christmas week at Peru. TAX COLLECTION DATES FOR RICHLAND COUNTY

The collection of 1931 taxes will probably commence between December 10 and 20, it was announced by Auditor Arthur Beck and treasurer John Charles, following a conference.

Clerks in the auditor's office are now working on the tax duplicates for the various political subdivisions of the county and certification will probably be made about the end of November. Treasurer Charles then has considerable work to do in making out the tax slips before his office will be in a position to start the collection. The commissioners will probably fix January 20 as the final date for payment without a penalty to taxpayers.

HUNTERS INVITED TO DINNER ON TWO FARMS

Hunters are still looking for the catch in the report that two farmers southeast of Shelby are welcoming guests to their dinner.

"Joe Mott and Lester Jewett, who reside on farms southeast of Shelby, not only permit hunting on their farms, but provide that if the hunters are within hearing when the dinner bell rings they are invited to come in for dinner. This is quite out of the ordinary as most farmers now prohibit hunting. It will certainly please the hunters to know that there are two farms where they will be welcome to hunt and to be dinner guests if they happen to be hunting at the dinner hour.

MORE MEN ON B. & O. IS LATEST REPORT

"More road men are being called by the Baltimore and Ohio," is the recent statement which serves to brighten the winter days for a number of families.

Several men have been added to the Willard yards, and like reports come from the office headquarters in Germantown. Monday, usually a light day in the yards, was reported heavy for last week. Perhaps with cold weather or an improvement in the employment situation will be evident, instead of the expected decline.

laxly over the side of the chair, smokes a cigarette, forcing Ernestine. As the maid went out with the tables and covers and a tray of ash boxes, Ernestine flung herself down with an exclamation of weariness. Lillian was astonished.

"What's the matter with Will, kitten?"

"Why—he's all right. He's a little thin, but he'll pick up. He always loses weight in hot weather."

"But it's October now. It hasn't been really hot for weeks. I saw him on North Clark street today while I was waiting in the car for Loring, who was visiting one of his Greek friends. He came and talked to me. He looked very white and thin, I thought, and his eyes were too bright—feverish. I must give him milk and eggs. Will is the type, I think. Will told me that, that runs easily into T. B.'s indoors too much."

Ernestine was silent, thinking swiftly. "Will's all right, I think," she said a little shortly, but she looked grave. Lillian arched her brows in disbelief, but said no more. After a while she left in her own car, and Ernestine sat on the big couch, the silk and satin pillows, the wide low room with its charming furniture and carved fireplace forgotten in an instant.

What was Will doing in North Clark street? He and Mr. Poole had had an office there long ago. Will had been strange to late.

Ernestine rose abruptly and went to her room to change her dress before the children returned to climb upon her. Her mind went reluctantly to Will, as though forced against itself to consider dangers. Perhaps he needed mothering. He was subject to periods of nervous and mental depression because he could not remember that he had a body long enough to take care of it. She wondered if he were worried about money. They were spending it like water, but there seemed so much of it.

The children came in, noisy and laughing from their walk, and crowded upon her. She tried to have them come down. They chattered excitedly as she sat down with them to their simple, appetizing supper, the curlew-milk and talking to her with a goodly defiance. She and Will had dinner together, later, after the children had half an hour with their father, and went up to bed. But Will did not come in at their bedtime as he usually did. Disappointed, they finally trailed off up the stairs, and Ernestine wondered if he had mislaid his key.

"He's in the garden, ma'am," the maid replied.

Ernestine went out through the dining room windows, across the tiled porch and paused at the garden steps, to stare. Will stood about fifty feet away from her, leaning against the corner of the garage, his hat off, his head tilted back and his eyes in the one tree that stood on the lot, a tall narrow poplar tree.

Ernestine had never seen him look like this. The slight, almost effeminate figure that had become set in her mind was gone. His lips were relaxed and full, like a child's. His black eyes, always so bright and alert, were soft now and strangely luminous in his pale thin face. And in his countenance was such yearning, such poignant beauty, that Ernestine could scarcely forbear crying out.

He had not noticed her, and silently she turned back to the house and silently closed the door behind her. For what was Will hankering there in the dusk? What did he want? Something she did not know, see nor feel. Something beyond her. Again, in the absorption of life he had slipped away from her, into some secret path he had to follow alone. Again his mind had escaped while his body only remained by her side. The poplar tree—she was ailing, as he had felt before.

She gathered herself together with a spiritual strength. She strengthened herself. Something was troubling something was to befall them. She realized with horror that they had not saved a cent, in all their new prosperity. She was without a dollar in the necessity to cease her butterfly whirling and turn squirrel again. For Will's run of luck would inevitably be disaster of some kind that she could not even foresee.

Thinking of the longing and the sorrow of his face, Ernestine forgot the moment her but a short time ago she had loved her house and blessed her possessions. Was there anything she could do for Will? Nothing. She had learned this hard lesson, and let her not forget it now. He was always to be lonely? Could not her body encompass him, her love unfold him? At times she could be almost certain his heart—perhaps his mind—would be remote from her, from all of them. Her spirit cried out in protest against the sense of alienation that was revealing down upon her.

Her throat ached bitterly. She shook herself. This was nonsense. Because Will stared at a tree and a star she was invoking disaster. He had come in early and gone out in his garden to enjoy the evening, and the light had come over his look then.

But these thin mental comments died unheeded. Nothing could shake the deep fatalistic conviction that had laid itself upon her, that—

Ernestine watched Will during the winter months that followed without making much headway in her efforts to understand him. His abstraction at times was so intense that he behaved like a somnambulist. The children bloomed. Peter was a tall strong boy with a lively mind and body. It was evident that Elaine would be able to start with her lessons in another year. The baby would be three in the summer, and he was every one's darling.

Mamma was always sending him things from New York. She could not stop without remembering him.

But none of Ernestine's joy in her children carried her from his strangeness. Sometimes he came out of his absorption and was feverishly bright and active. He was guarded against her, and put on an artificial manner. She saw this casually, without the irritation that had almost disrupted them before. His whole air and manner were of a man who was entering a secret love affair, but Ernestine knew that Will's grief was not so simple as that.

Nevertheless, she began in a quiet unobtrusive way to spy upon him, being compelled by the need to know something more. His habits away from home were revealed to her by small patient inquiries.

He spent every morning at the San office and kept his strip well ahead, did his work in an orderly, workmanlike manner. In the afternoon it was the common belief that he went to the small outside studio where a young man named Hobbs worked on the movie. She had seen him there some time there, and then either played bridge at the Press club, or at one or another of the clubs on Michigan boulevard where he was casual, and leisure to spend around the card tables in the late winter afternoons.

One day, downtown shopping, Ernestine went over to this movie studio, but the two greeted her inquiry for Mr. Todd with such astonishment that she knew Will was seldom there.

"Has the No and the Yes?"

"He comes in once a week or so and works all afternoon. He can do more work in an hour than anybody I ever saw. We keep them busy, Mrs. Todd."

"I'm sure you do," said Ernestine, smiling at him. She talked to him for a while about his work and told him how Will had received his training doing just such chores for John Todd. He was a little more than a legend to this youngster, she saw, but he was interested and flattered by her confidences.

She went away, filled with conviction, without more logical reason than the instruction of instinct. Lillian had seen Will on North Clark street. He was not spending his time at the outside studio. He was probably not playing cards as much as she thought.

He had learned the old studio where he and John Poole had worked for over two years and he was working there now, nearly every afternoon and sometimes probably at night. What was he doing?

She thought she would ask him, but that evening when he came in she was waiting down the stairs with Elaine, naked on her arm. She was going to the kitchen to get some olive oil to warm, for she had found the skin dry on the child's arms.

Will came in from the front door and stood, drawing his scarf from within the collar of his great coat, staring up at her. His face flashed at her and he said importantly:

"Stand still."

She stopped, in amazement, and stood poised on the stairs, the child on her arm. Her simple house dress falling against her long limbs, and Will looked up at them with concentration, power in his eyes. After a strange interval he began to fold the silk scarf about his throat, to button his coat, to draw his gloves over his fingers, still staring at them, and then without a word he turned and went to his room.

It was very late when he returned, but Ernestine was awake, waiting for him. He came directly to her in her room, and his face was like a drunkard's, flushed and relaxed and happy. He caught her in his arms and kissed her passionately. His heart—perhaps his mind—would be remote from her, from all of them. Her spirit cried out in protest against the sense of alienation that was revealing down upon her.

against her throat, he put her short dark hair back from her brow and stared at her, entranced with what he saw.

"You're so lovely," he said, "so beautiful, Ernestine. Not even the old masters have a face as lovely as yours. Your eyes—your eyes are sad, my sweet. Why are you sad?" He ran his fingers over her face, his strong fingers that could touch lightly, wonderfully.

Ernestine felt as if her heart would break.

"Will—tell me. What ails you?" she implored him. "You haven't noticed me for weeks and weeks—all winter you haven't even seen me, and now—you come in like this?"

He moved away from her. He was erect, triumphant, under the impulse of strong excitement.

"I've done it, Ernestine."

"What have you done?"

He made a gesture with his fingers "a stroke" in their air, either with brush or pencil.

"I've done something new and different. Something I've wanted a long time. I'll tell you about it some day, when I'm ready. But now, don't question me. Just love me. As you used to. Can't you come to me as you used to come? My love, and mine alone!"

He wooed her, and she yielded to him, finding an instantaneous burning joy in his old eagerness—his old starting enthusiasm. This tide of human love was not new to her. Its sameness was like an enchantment. But after he was sleeping by her side, she slept secretly. He was so strange. Even in his ardent, deep honesty warned her that not her beauty, not her love, not her distress had allured him—he had been impelled toward her by something within himself. His deep and secret springs of artistry were awakening.

solitary even in his passion and his love.

The next morning she rose with her heart hardened with determination, and after he had gone downtown, she hunted out among her possessions the old key he had given her, so long ago. She took the bus and went back to Erie street, walked the old familiar way again and came to the old office, fitted her key in the lock and opened the door. The office was empty, and she entered and shut the door behind her.

The light in the place was fine. A long window crossed the back of the room, and here was a slanted table and stool. Ernestine moved to it and calmly, deliberately, she began to hunt for Will's scarf. She had no more scruple about it than she would have had if he had been her son and in some trouble she must learn about.

In the middle of the drawing board, on white rice paper pinned down with tacks at the corners, was a sketch. Only a few strong lines in charcoal. She saw herself, coming down the stairs, the naked baby on her arm, one hand at the balustrade. The long lines of her limbs were a subtle and flowing exaggeration. It was beautiful. It was alive. It moved and in its motion were poetry and sound. It was hers, work of a kind she had never seen before. But she understood it. The outlines were clear and hard—the work had authority, fire, but nobody knew he had made a picture like this. Un-derstanding filled her. Last night, Will had not loved her. His heart had told her truly. It was this picture—the bright mental image of womanhood that he had loved, had taken into his arms and caressed.

"No, no," she whispered. "That's married. It's I whom Will loves. It is only his way."

On the corner of the sheet, like a signature, were the round hard photographs of faces. Ernestine went, standing there and looking at this new work and thinking of Will—and the Todd case.

She looked through everything and found material with the dust of a year upon it. In a pile were pictures of the poplar tree. He had made the tree again and again. She caught a hint of desperation. He had been deliberately careless. He had distorted the limbs, but neither the carelessness nor the distortion had given him the reality that lay next on the board with the charcoal sketch of herself on the stairs—a thing called life. Even in his ardent, deep honesty warned her that not her beauty, not her love, not her distress had allured him—he had been impelled toward her by something within himself. Interesting Letter From J. M. Taylor

One of the best things to receive on Blue Monday is a letter from an old friend. Below is a communication from a Plymouth "boy" of some years ago, who remembers Plymouth best when the Square was made of mud instead of bricks, and we hope that you enjoy the greeting as much as we did.

The Advertiser, Plymouth, O.

Dear Mr. Thomas:

I owe you some money, and am enclosing a check which I think pays me up and then some. Let me know. I enjoy the paper, and after reading send it on its way to our old Plymouth friend, Mrs. Jane Burkan Prentiss, now in Osborn Memorial Home at Harrison, N. Y., who enjoys reading it.

Your notice in last issue that we are due to have a severe winter as heralded by the migrants in northern Ohio—same in Jersey. Is that due to the late election in Ohio?

I have for many years been deeply interested in Industrials—as they may be adapted to our smaller cities and villages. Plymouth has one of outstanding importance—and it is most interesting to learn that they are now working on orders for spring delivery, as well as for anticipated orders later on. That is fine. The pay roll of an industry in your community is one of the most valuable conditions your merchants have at hand, and which induces an activity on their part in the effort to keep the trade at home, and should be encouraged to the last degree. Might there not be room for one or more in Plymouth?

If the subject would be of interest, I would like to send you an article for publication on the general subject of Industrials—their value (say) to our smaller cities and villages. Again—I have a classic "Riley Gramman's Funeral"—the passing of a character in Nevada some years ago, at which the Dominio official was well known to me. His address was free from all creed or cant and has been referred to as a classic. It is fine reading.

Regards to you, to Bob Nimmons, and to any of the "boys and girls" who remember.

Yours sincerely,

J. M. Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Beck were returning from Canton. A Mansfield automobile enroute from Norwalk, crashed into the Beck car at the crossing, eighteen miles south of Norwalk. The driver of the Mansfield car made an effort to avoid a collision, driving his car into a field, but was unable to prevent the accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Beck were taken to Greenwich, where they received treatment, and were later taken to their home.

Chapel

Chapel was opened by the song, "Holy, Holy, Holy," sung by the students.

Reverend Stittler gave his farewell speech, "Temptations Upward." We appreciate his interest in our school and there is no one in Plymouth that regrets to see him leave us more than the students of Plymouth High.

Mary Ruth Stittler sang a religious number, "Some Morning," and "When the Organ Played at Twilight," a popular number. She was accompanied by her father, Reverend Stittler, at the piano. Mary Ruth's encore was "Cheer Up."

The announcement by Mr. Miller for the following week was: P. T. A. meeting a week from Thursday night. A very interesting scientific exhibition. Chapel was dismissed by the school song, our "Alma Mater."

BETTER ENGLISH CLUB

The Better English Club met Wednesday, Nov. 12. A short talk was given by Mr. Miller on the subject of Better English. Everyone in the club volunteered to correct their English and to find the common mistakes of others.

CROSS COUNTRY

Hoorah for Plymouth High cross country team! They have just come back from Columbus with honors. They finished eleventh out of the 28 teams that ran. They ran at Ohio State-Pitt football game, which they saw.

Most of the 28 teams held the class A type, but Plymouth held their own. A new state record was established that morning, the former time being 12 minutes and 19 seconds and the new record being 13 minutes and 15 seconds and one half. With Briggs finished 27th out of the 156 men running. Plymouth finished 12th last year out of 14 teams qualifying and this year 11th out of 28 teams qualifying. This is a good event for Plymouth and let's hope that next year we will do even better.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The girls had practice two nights last week and from present indications we will have some basketball team! All they need is more practice and confidence.

Mary Anderson very unfortunately broke a bone in her foot at practice last Monday night. She will be unable to play for some time. The team hopes Mary will soon be back to play with them.

BASKETBALL

Announcement of Sat. Games Well folks, just think what Saturday night means. It means the first basketball game of the season. It is to be played at Greenwich, Saturday night at 7:30. Now isn't that something?

We sure have the prospects for one of the best seasons Plymouth has ever had. Come out and give the teams your support.

MANUAL TRAINING

The manual training department is making fine progress now. They have recently purchased some hardware. The woods are cedar, oak, and walnut. Out of the wood there will be some very fine articles made. There are a few boys doing some weaving. There have been several foot stools woven, and at the present a fern stand is being woven and an end table. This department has also made some very useful things for the school.

This department is one of the most important in the school, so let's keep it going great!

THE CASTAWAY

On a lonely island in the Atlantic there lived a rugged castaway sailor fevered with the sun and fretful with the stillness of the bay. One glance at his pale face which was covered with a thick beard would indicate he had been on the island for months.

In the office he could see a ship, shot with fire. His heart gave one bound and was about to bound for the islands of Desire.

"HOW STRANGE"

Wake up friends, and look about. What is it that we all see? What is this power that God has To change the earth before me?

Why it seems 'twas just yesterday That snow was flying down, All was white, all was clean About our little town.

Then over night the snow did melt And snows jumped up from rest, Birds came back from the sunny South, A merry song in their breast.

I must have come to sleep again And when I woke at morn I found my eyes on fallen leaves, And fields of yellow corn.

And now, all about me I feel another change, It is nearly winter again How strange—how very strange. —H.D. '31.

THE FINISHED SIDEWALK

The sidewalk to the main entrance of the Plymouth High School is now complete.

Instead of walking on boards and in mud we now have large stones taken from the sidewalk of the old first and second grade buildings and placed at the end of the walk so the students of Plymouth High don't have to get off in mud and on the new school yard.

This is a great help to the school for the present but in the future we expect to have a complete cement walk, and this will look very nice with the new school yard.

"THANKSGIVING WILL SOON BE HERE"

One week from Thursday we will not be in school. No sir! The girls will be busy in the kitchen preparing a feast of either turkey or chicken, and we all know that is Thanksgiving. We get a vacation and a big meal so for what more could we ask? The boys, at least most of them will go hunting, but everybody will be home at dinner time.

We hope the teachers eat too much and have to stay at home at least half of the day. We will probably forget to eat our appetites and the doctors will be kept busy tending to our ills.

We are very grateful for this vacation, so let's have a good time and try not to eat too much.

"NATCHEZ"

Natchez is a little port along the Mississippi river of about three thousand in population. There is a large bluff or cliff east of Natchez that hides the river from view. There is a railing along this bluff to keep people from walking off of it, one can go to the railing and look across the river and see Vadaia, Louisiana, and a ferry crossing either from one side to the other, or probably it is at either port.

It is fun to be there when the Tennessee Bell goes to New Orleans.

Jim Root: "When I dance with you I feel like I'm dancing on clouds." Betty A.: "Don't kid yourself that's my foot."

Society

Lucille Moore spent Saturday visiting Doris Eryin in New Washington. Al Lutz from Germany is visiting with his sister, Doris Lutz, for a few days.

Lucille Pugh and Miriam Donnem visited in Shelby Sunday afternoon.

Helen Williamson spent the week end in Carey, visiting relatives. Thomas Webster spent Saturday rabbit hunting. "We hope Tubby caught something, although we don't know what."

Mary Anderson has returned to school again after dislocating a bone in her foot.

Huldah Davis, Don Ensel and Harry Long attended church at Shiloh Sunday evening.

Betty Aslakson, Jane Bachrach, Correll Scott, Ben Smith, Jim Root and Bob Bachrach motored to Shelby Sunday afternoon.

Harry Long was a visitor in Shelby Sunday.

Katherine Tursen spent Saturday night visiting friends in Mansfield. Ruth St. Clair visited in New Washington on Thursday.

Miss Thomas Forkner had week end guests from Shelby.

FISH AND FISHERIES OF NO. ATLANTIC SEABOARD

The story of the fish and fisheries of the North Atlantic seaboard is one of fascination and romance. The world annually levies a tribute on the seven seas amounting to one half billion dollars worth of fish. The amount collected by U. S. A. is 2,600,000,000 pounds. Three-fourths reaches the market fresh and the other goes canned and smoked. Some fish that inhabit the north Atlantic seaboard are anadromous, that means that they live most all their lives in salt water but swim up the fresh water streams to spawn. On the Pacific ocean the best example is the chinook salmon who migrates 2000 miles up the Yukon to spawn. The jumpfish has won fame for its guarding the eggs. The male eats nothing but continually fans the egg mass with his fins to keep them free of silt and dirt. He does not desert his post until the eggs are hatched and is then a picture of hunger and exhaustion. Some fish lay their eggs in their mouths and carry them around till hatching. Most of the eggs when hatched are ate and destroyed. The chances of survival are very, very slim. The natives of Slam have been able to breed into the fish of that region pugacity and they watch a fish fight like the Spanish-Americans watch a bull fight. Pollution of the streams kill fish quickly. There are six million fish hatcheries in the United States and as the demand grows they are steadily increasing their production. The eel is a catadromous fish. (That means that they live all their life in the fresh water but go to the ocean to spawn.)

The region of the eels spawning is unknown until recently, when a Danish scientific expedition succeeded in locating it at the region between Bermuda and the Seward islands. The eggs are laid at a depth of 550 feet and the larvae continue to rise toward the surface as they grow. They are at this stage mere ribbons and so transparent that the vertebrae of their backbone can be counted. The European eel and the American eel start out at the same time but part at the Bermuda region, though they have never traveled that way before the American eel and the European eel hit their respective shores accurately. After the female has laid her eggs the male fertilizes them and covers them with gravel and they both drift tail first down the current to die. The Whiting (merluccius bilanerus) inhabits the middle of the ocean and feeds its feeding grounds near the surface. It preys upon the herring in schools, their teeth are sharp and a trim muscular body which propels it a terrific rate. The depth of their spawning is 150-300 fathoms and many fish are found there 1-3 inch to 5 inches long. The spawning period is from January to April. They then lose their ravenous appetite and are caught in nets and trawls.

THE PTARMIGAN

The Ptarmigan belongs to a group of birds of the grouse family, found in northern regions of both continents.

A characteristic feature of these birds is a covering of short feathers on the feet. Most species have several changes of plumage during the year, the winter coat is a pure white and that of summer a mixture of reddish brown, buff and black, the coloration serving at different seasons to protect the bird from discovery by its enemies.

Ptarmigan nest among mosses on the ground. Their eggs, six to eleven in number, vary in color from cream-buff to reddish, and are spotted and blotched with black or dark brown.

Resolutions

In memory of Sister Mary Drennan who died Nov. 4th, 1930.

Death has again entered our Chapter Hall and called to the Eternal Home a dearly beloved sister who has completed her faithful labor here and as a recompense has received the welcome "plaudit" well done from the Great Master.

Whereas, the loving Father, has called our beloved and respected Sister home and She having been a true and faithful member of our Mystic Order, therefore be it resolved, That Plymouth Chapter No. 231, Order of the Eastern Star in testimony of its loss, drapes its Chapter in mourning for thirty days and that we tender to the family of our deceased Sister sincere condolences in their deep affliction and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to them.

There is a proverb that philosophy bakes no bread, but because of a bad philosophy much flour has been burned in the baking. Who is the real builder of the commonwealth? It is the man of vision, with his dream of better social conditions. Whenever

God wants to usher in a new epoch He drops a new idea into the soul of a Moses, a Paul, a Milton or a Shakespeare. Our century is blessed with material things, and too often overlooks the man who brings the dream of an ideal commonwealth. If our eyes be hidden, and the problems of today are hard, let us lift the veil and face the light and look out on God's beautiful world and see the time coming when Christ's gift of bread and bequest of peace shall be for all. NEWSY NOTES FROM DELPHI

L. A. Goon was an over Sunday guest of friends in Detroit and Windsor, Canada.

The first quarterly meeting for the North Fairfield circuit of the M. E. church will be held in North Fairfield church this week Monday evening. Dr. C. B. Hess presiding.

Paul Born, who has been working for a road contractor the past summer arrived home Saturday and will now plan for running the farm. We are appreciating our young neighbor to the fullest.

R. E. Gleason, E. E. Sloan and H. O. Stillman have been appointed administrators of the estate of the late Frank E. Craig of Bountonville, Mrs. Maude B. Craig is the administratrix.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gray and son George, of Tiro, and daughter Marie, husband and two children of New Washington, were callers at the Catlin home Sunday while on their way to Greenwich to visit their daughter, Mrs. Ellen Lowery and husband. The Grays were former residents of Ripley.

G. S. Cattin is using his spare time soliciting for the Stark Bros. Nurseries and Orchard Co., of Louisiana, Mo. He will preach the gospel of giving more attention to the production of fruit in place of growing 20c cats and the wheat as at present. Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Duffy arrived home Thursday after a sojourn of over two weeks, passing through cities of Ohio, Tennessee and New York visiting many places of scenic beauty driving out from the home of their son, Marcus M. Duffy who is working for an accounting firm in Syracuse, N. Y. Mrs. Marcus M. Duffy and two children accompanied the parents on their return trip to Ohio.

Mrs. J. H. Dawson, of Plymouth, spent the day at the Duffy farm eagerly awaiting the arrival of her children and especially her great grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Steele believe in plenty of light and sunshine for health and enjoyment. A carpenter was busy Thursday afternoon placing a large window in the southeast corner of their commodious home—sun-parlors are always in good taste.

Janice, the second daughter of Rev. and Mrs. M. E. Williamson, was taken seriously ill with asthma last Wednesday. A physician was called and normally was restored.

Hershell McLaughlin, a B. & O. trackman at Nova, was given a furlough a week ago.

Clifford Campbell, took a vacation of one week from his labors on the B. & O. at Bountonville and spent the time with friends in Pennsylvania.

S. C. Howard is busy writing music and sitting it to words for a broadcaster in Mansfield.

The young people from the three places on Rev. Henderson's work are plans on Rev. Henderson's work are planning for a Sunday afternoon trip to the Old Ladies' Home in Elyria, Nov. 30, and cheer the aged mothers with songs and greetings.

As to the playlet. The first day of school, one of the division plays, using a personnel of about 20 people. We can only say it was one of the best and most laughable playlets ever used in Ripley in our opinion.

"All of the caste were people that could be called good actors in person. Many of them having been trained in the days of the Ripley Literary Society.

They all proved to be real masters in caricature. We have called them famous florifiers of the American boys and girls of the days gone by. They gave the playlet in Delphi Armistice night and by special solicitation at the Congregational church on Friday night, both houses were more than capacity. We all join in thanking our friends for their labors and sacrifices in time for practice in bringing about these evening of mirth and cheer.

OBITUARY

OBITUARY OF FRANK E. CRAIG
Frank Ence Craig was born in Ripley township, Huron county, on July 16th, 1889, and departed this life November 7th, 1930, having attained an age of 41 years, 3 months and 21 days. Mr. Craig was the son of Elias Craig and Sarah Ann Craig, both of whom were residents of, and passed away in, Ripley township, the latter having died when Frank was in infancy, and the former having survived until 1907.

The deceased, Frank E. Craig, leaves to survive him his widow, Maude L. Craig, and two sons, Chester and Theodore, and a sister, Mrs. James A. Merritt, and a brother, G. R. Craig. For 23 consecutive years and until about six months prior to his death, Mr. Craig had faithfully served his community as a carrier and distributor of mail for the Federal Government.

The hour of my departure's come:
I hear the voice that calls me home;
At last, O Lord! let trouble cease;
And let thy servant die in peace.

The race appointed I have run;
The combat's o'er, the prize is won;
And now my witness is on high,
And now my record's in the sky.

Not in mine innocence I trust;
I bow before thee in the dust;
And through my Savior's blood alone
I look for mercy at thy throne.

I leave the world without a tear,
Save for the friends I held so dear,
To heal their sorrows, Lord, descend,
Add to the friendless prove a friend.

I come, I come, at thy command,
I give my spirit to thy hand;
Stretch forth thine Everlasting arms,
And shield me in the last alarms.

The hour of my departure's come:
I hear the voice that calls me home;
Now, O Lord! let trouble cease;
Now let thy servant die in peace.

REPORT ON OUSTER OF OHIO ELECTRIC POWER

Arguments were made in Federal court at Toledo in the matter of the ouster proceedings started by the city of Norwalk some time ago against the Ohio Electric Power Co. with an electric service department here.

The appellate court some time ago decided in favor of the city and issued a writ of ouster on the ground the company was operating without a franchise. The Equitable Trust Co. of

New York City, which holds bonds of the Ohio Electric Power Co. filed a motion relating the ouster and this phase of the litigation was argued at Toledo.

Among those present from Norwalk were Prosecutor E. G. Martin and Attorney G. Ray Craig, who represented the city in the case, and Mayor Cort M. Schock, City Solicitor Rex Bruce and County Auditor Frank G. Warner.
