LOCAL GIRL FLIES HOME FROM EGYPT

New Haven To Open School On Tuesday, 8

The 1942-43 term of school for the New Haven schools will open on Tuesday, September 8th. The classes are announced for the usual time, 9 a. m., and will be in session only during the morning for assignment and seats. Wednesday, full day sessions will be held. Buses will convey the children on the routes at the same time and stops will be made as in former years.

The school house has been completely cleaned and necessary repairs completed. Some new laboratory equipment has been added.

The faculty is as follows: Supt. V. L. Ullman; principal, Miss Jessie Cole; Miss Treva Allison of Wooster will teach English, Latin and Commercial; Miss Leora Kuhn, Route 61, Music and Home Economics; Mrs. John Laney, Plymouth, History and English; L. A. Basinger of Willard has Vocational Agriculture; Mrs. Claude Wilcox, first and second grades.

Mrs. Nora LaDow Laid To Rest Here Saturday

Committal services for the late Mrs. Nora LaDow, wife of Jesse LaDow of Mansfield, were held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock with the Rev. H. L. Bethel, officiating. Arrangements were in charge of the Miller-McQuate funeral home.

Mrs. LaDow passed away last June 1 in Mansfield and the remains were placed in the mausoleum there until completion of the sepulcher in the new addition in Greenlawn cemetery.

A Lasting Monument
Several years ago Jesse E. LaDow of Mansfield, who was born and raised near Plymouth, donated a number of acres of ground to the village—the ground to become a part of Greenlawn cemetery.

Mr. LaDow began construction of a lasting monument or vault on the lots he retained. Work on the monument has just been completed and is the cause of much admiration.

The monument is constructed of reddish brown highly polished Wisconsin granite, and it required the full capacity of a flat freight car for its shipment to Plymouth. There are 30 tons of the granite in the foundation, while 250,000 pounds are above the ground. There are only nine similar ones in the United States, and this is the only monument of its kind this side of Dayton, Ohio.

The construction of the memorial is air tight and water-proof and will withstand the elements of time and nature.

REMODELING BUILDING
Vincent Milano is remodeling the former store building at New Pittsburgh, south of Celeryville, into a modern dwelling. He is employed at the Pioneer Rubber Co. plant, Willard.
Nearly all of the houses on the Tri-County Ohio Farms Co. property at New Pittsburgh are now occupied and a family is even living in the school building at the corner.

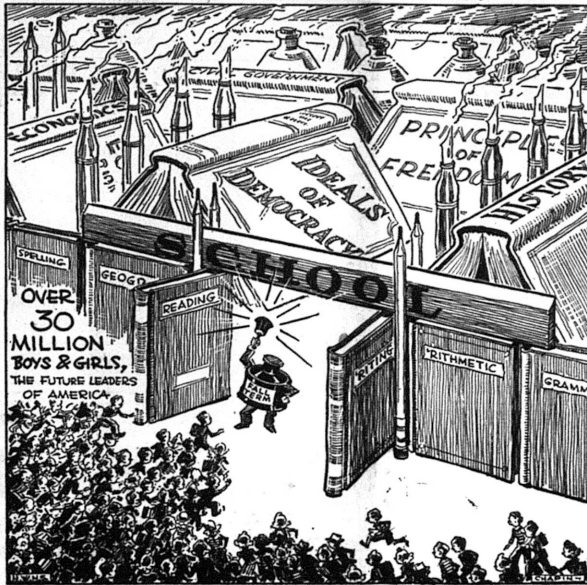

RITES ARE HELD FOR TRAIN VICTIM

Funeral services for Junior Elwood Houck, 21, of Willard, were held at United Brethren Church Sunday at 2:30 p. m.

Rev. Paul W. Sharp officiated and burial was made in Greenlawn cemetery, Willard.

He died early Friday after injuries received when he fell from a car in the Baltimore and Ohio railway yards.

Renews Subscription To The Advertiser For His 53rd Consecutive Year

For the 53rd consecutive year, D. J. Harding of Angola, Ind., renews his subscription to The Plymouth Advertiser. Not only that, but the Plymouth paper has been in the family ever since its beginning, which was 86 years ago. Even after all those years, and having been away from Plymouth so long, Mr. Harding still thinks the Advertiser is a good paper.

Mrs. Florence Mellick of Shiloh states: "I like the paper very much and am sending my check for another year's subscription." The Advertiser has been adding dozens of new names each week. Is yours on the subscription list?

Teacher Shortage In Ohio Is Very Acute

Plymouth isn't the only community experiencing difficulty in obtaining teachers. In some parts of Ohio it is so acute that it may cause the closing of some departments.

Ohio Education Director Kenneth C. Ray says the teacher shortage is intensified by the fact that married women teachers are refusing to accept jobs for fear that their husbands will be drafted.

Ray says the lack is particularly acute in the northeastern part of the state where there is a shortage of about 600 teachers.

SHELBY GAS STATION HIRES GIRL ATTENDANT
Miss Winifred Cline of near Shelby is believed to be the first girl service station attendant in that city.

Miss Cline, who is employed at the Standard Oil filling station on West Main St., started to work on Saturday.

She does about the same work as the men with the exception of changing flats and working on the pressure lift.

Not New Here
Shelby has nothing on Plymouth in the way of lady attendants. For years, Mrs. Ray Dininger and her daughter Audrey, when home, have assisted at the Dininger garage and service station, doing the same work as any gas station attendant, and doing a good job of it.

TRANSFERRED TO BUFFALO

BALL GAME AT WILLARD

After traveling fourteen thousand miles which took her over twelve countries and the Atlantic Ocean, Mary Becker, former Plymouth girl, arrived here last Thursday for a few days' visit with friends and relatives. A resident of Cairo, Egypt, since 1937, Miss Becker has seen the ravages of war gradually make its inroad of destruction and terror into North Africa. She has heard the roar of German planes and the crash of bombs; she has lived under the terrorism of war since Germany and England started the conflict, and in recent months she has undergone a strain that is almost indescribable.

Leaving Asmara, on the East African coast, Miss Becker made the trip home in just one week—82 hours flying time, and 86 hours for refueling and servicing the planes. Despite the cramped quarters, long hours of travel and her first experience in a flight which took her over half the distance around the world, she arrived in Miami, Fla., Aug. 12th in high spirits, for it was her first sight of American soil since the start of the World War.

As the big Pan-American plane which carried the 24 evacuees from Egypt neared the Florida coastline, the pilot of the plane experienced a bit of difficulty when the passengers rushed over to one side of the ship to get the first glimpse of American soil. Miss Becker said: "There was no Statue of Liberty, but a glimpse of American soil proved about the sweetest thing I have ever seen. All the passengers were so eager to get a first look, that the pilot had a real job of balancing the plane. No one could tell you how wonderful it was to see the good old U. S. A. once more."

The experiences of Mary Becker Awd began back in 1937 when she left the States after visiting in Plymouth for almost two years. She and her daughter Shelmur had been depending some time here with her mother. Complications arose over passports and other international affairs. Miss Awd's husband was in Cairo, and in 1937 she and her daughter took passage to join him there. On their way over they stopped in London for a couple of weeks, completing the trip to Cairo which took them through the Strait of Gibraltar, down the Mediterranean to Cairo. After her arrival there her marital career soon ended, for she was granted a divorce from Mr. Awd, and Shelmur returned to the United States. Mrs. Awd was restored to her maiden name—Mary Becker.

With thousands of miles between her and her home in the States Miss Becker decided to make her own way. With only a few Americans in Cairo, and a host of Egyptian friends which she made during her former residence there, she secured a position teaching school. After a couple of terms she became associated with the British Army for a period of two years. For the past year and a half she has been employed as a receptionist at the American Attaches' Office at the American Legation in Cairo. It was during this time that she saw Cairo change its normal way of life, into one of war activity.

Little News from Miss Becker
"For many months," Miss Becker said, "I was in the dark as to what was happening over the entire world. The mail ways always late, and it seemed never to bring any direct news from America. We had only an occasional newspaper and magazines, and very little news over the radio. As all of Egypt is considered a neutral country, we experienced no difficulty up until the time when fighting started in northern Libya, around Tobruk, which is about 180 miles west of Cairo. We have had practice blackouts and have taken every precaution against air raids and attacks."

Tobruk, if you will recall reading press dispatches, was captured by the British and occupied by them for some time. It was a quick and startling surprise a few months ago when the Germans counter-attacked, taking Tobruk once more from the British. In an estimate of Tobruk it is stated that several thousand English soldiers, and supplies also were included in the capture. Miss Becker did not discuss the action around Tobruk at that time, but the information as stated above was printed in the American press.

On Monday night, August 24, word was received by radio that eminent action is contemplated in and around Cairo as both the British and German armies are active in anticipating an attack—which army will start first is yet to be seen. No doubt but what the American officials in Egypt knew what was about to break and therefore ordered the evacuation of all American women.

In recent weeks German raiders have been over Cairo and in some instances have dropped bombs on British settlements. The Germans, however, are reluctant about bombing Cairo, due to the fear of causing an antagonistic mood by the millions of Moslems. It is not the desire of the Germans to gain the ill will of the Moslems, and this they can easily do by bombing the famous old mosques of Cairo. The mosques, places of Mohammed worship in Cairo, are numerous. Hundreds of them are found in the city, and it is almost impossible for any German bomb to find its mark in Cairo without damaging one of these places of worship. The Mohammedan is very temperamental when it comes to his religion, and any infringement on his habits of worship may cause the entire tribe to uprise against those who try to oppress or destroy it.

"Strange as it may seem," Miss Becker states, "we in Egypt were under very strict censorship and had to watch very carefully what we would say or do. And now that I am back in America, I am confident that the Germans and Italians gain most of their knowledge of operations from the United States. What we may think as harmless or useless information to the enemy, is printed in the newspapers and magazines and don't forget that everyone should be cautious as to what is disclosed during a conversation. Asked if she saw any American troops in Egypt, Miss Becker replied: "American leadership and men and supplies have done more in Egypt in six months toward winning the war than the English have done in two years. As an example she pointed out that when the American contingent arrived in Egypt, plans were made to clear away some of the jungle land and establish air bases. The British had contended this was impossible, and that the idea of establishing an overland trail was above all impossible. The Americans had done the job within a few months."

In Cairo a few short months ago while passing near a construction job I noticed a small locomotive. I could easily distinguish the name "Plymouth" on it, and I felt like going over and caressing it. Seeing this locomotive and knowing it had been built in my own home town —for a few minutes it made me mighty home sick.

There is a vast difference between British and American officers. Take the British officer in

LETTERS from the BOYS IN SERVICE

Aug. 23, 1942
Sioux Falls, S. D.

Hi, Tommy:

In all the Plymouth Advertisers I have received the following: Plymouthites now in the Army, Navy, etc., have told how hot it is where they are. By reading these, one would think all Army camps are hot.

So just to be different I'll tell a little about Wayne Field, Sioux Falls, as it was so named yesterday. About one-third of the soldiers here are wearing O. D. (winter clothes). Last night I had two G. I. blankets and one comfort over me. The temperature was 50 above according to the paper this noon. At 6 o'clock a. m. I could see my breath and a strong west wind was blowing.

Wayne Field is on a sort of a plateau, west of Sioux Falls. The Main Street is about one and one-half miles from the main gate of the camp. We get the benefit of the west wind. They tell us it gets 30 and 40 degrees below zero in the winter. So any soldiers that do not like the hot weather can just get transferred here.

I spent seven weeks at Keesler Field, Miss. I'll agree it gets quite warm in the South.

Abe Lyman and his orchestra gave a performance in back of our barracks on a band stand. It was good.

So long,
Pvt. Evan Richard Coe.
T. S. S. 809 Br. 216,
Sioux Falls, S. D.

Tuesday night, Aug. 25,
Hey, Fellers:

Did you read what Coe says about the weather. Well, a few weeks ago I was crabbing about the heat in Plymouth. Last night, which was Monday, the old mercury took a plunge to 35 degrees. It got so cold my tomatoes started calling for blankets, and even the vines twisted around each other trying to keep warm. I heat the metal on the linotype with a gas pot, and it is so cold tonight my pet files took a grandstand seat on the gas pot and liked it.

Oh well, I guess the weather is always an interesting topic in any part of the world.

I don't suppose a week goes by without my having a thought or two for each of you. There isn't so much news right now—what little there might be I'm afraid to print it. As to the number of inquiries I've received concerning "that brunette" I'm beginning to think none of you boys ever saw a black-haired woman. Well, I'm going to keep it a secret a little longer, but the first letter I receive after the paper is published I'm going to send the writer the name and address. There's a contest on, and it's worth entering!

Talked to Wayne Somerlott a little while tonight. Wayne, as you know left the hamburger and coffee trade a few months ago and went to work at F. H. H. He told me tonight he is now going to night school to learn the machinist trade—marine machinist, I believe. I think Wayne's conscience is bothering him a little. He says he'll never go back into the restaurant business—remember the coffee?

Not changing the subject, but I need some pictures mighty badly for the display window at Brown & Miller's hardware store. Won't you get busy and get us some new ones—showing yourself in that nifty uniform? The folks at home will appreciate it very much.

I hope you find this week's Advertiser interesting. I'm big hearted to get out this sheet, for I'm working for nothing, but have a lot of satisfaction in knowing you fellows appreciate it. Last week you gave me a big lift—did you read the letters? Now get a little time off from KP and write again.

Tommy:

P. S. It's about time for Apple Pie season again, and I'll be thinking of you if I learn to make a decent pie crust. Perhaps I'd better get in touch with old Happy Hank Watts for a recipe. PWT.

Shibler Is Named Head Of Highland Park School

Supt. Herman L. Shibler, formerly of Mt. Gilead, and known to many in Plymouth, was employed last week by the Highland Park, Mich., board of education as superintendent there at a salary of $7,500 a year. He was given a contract for three years.

He had served one year on a three-year contract at Birmingham, Mich., where his salary was $5,100 annually. The Birmingham board of education released him from his contract, after the board had met and the Highland Park had asked his release. Highland Park is a Detroit suburb.

From the Mt. Gilead position, Dr. Shibler went to Euclid, a Cleveland suburb, where he served as principal to a year ago.

Farm Bureau Field Day Is Discontinued For Duration Of War

The annual state-wide Farm Bureau Field Day has been abandoned for 1942, and probably for the duration of the war, it was announced today at the offices of the Ohio Farm Bureau at Columbus.

The Field Day event, which last year attracted 30,000 farm folks to the Ohio State Fairgrounds in Columbus, is being dropped from the Farm Bureau activity list this year primarily because of the importance of conserving transportation equipment and services. The shortage of farm labor, however, and the consequent difficulty for farmers to get away from their vital production responsibilities, was another factor that resulted in the decision.

DON'T DISCARD WOOL GARMENTS

How much usable wool do you have around home? Have you looked through the cast-offs in the attic lately? What about the partially worn winter clothing that's about to be disposed of for another season? Don't store it away out of the sight and out of use. There's no such thing as useless wool now!

Wool supplies are low. We depend for more than half of our new wool on imports from Australia, South Africa and South America. The war in the Pacific is cutting this source of supply, while the army is drawing heavily on what's available for uniforms, blankets and other military needs.

All the wool you have can be put to use. Some of your wool clothing will no doubt be usable as it is for another season. Clean and store it carefully. But some of it, both knitted and woven, is ready to be discarded. It may be partially worn out and not worth mending. It may be simply outgrown. Maybe you've had some of it stored in the attic for a number of years and it's entirely out of style and no longer serves any particular purpose as it is.

The yarns for this remade clothing will come from raveling or ripping worn sweaters and other knitted garments. Wind the yarns carefully as you ravel, using either a stiff cardboard or the back of a chair to keep them from tangling. Tie the hank securely at both ends and in the middle. If the wool needs washing, follow the usual instructions for any knitted article. If it merely needs to have the kinks taken out, dip the hank into lukewarm water and let it dry on the board or chair on which it was wound. When the yarn is dry, it's ready to use in a number of ways.

Don't wait until next winter to start this job. Do it now. And when you've sorted and mended and used all the pieces you can, remember that the Red Cross will have use for small knitted squares to be made into quilts, and that the ragman can turn in the smallest of scraps to make the reused wool materials that your country needs.

SIX INCH SERMON

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

Jacob Seeks God's Help.

Lesson for August 30; Genesis 32: 1, 2, 29.

Golden Text: Psalm 46:1.

Jacob had found himself in a situation when, as he has so often described it, "he could not stay where he was and couldn't go anywhere else." But Laban, Esau was before him. But the appearance of angels encouraged him and with confidence he sent messengers to awe Esau with an account of his brother's wealth. When they returned, reporting that Esau was coming with 400 men, Jacob was afraid.

Still depending upon the craftiness he had often shown, he divided his camp and then sent rich presents unto Esau. But he also sought the help of God. And again, the night before Esau's arrival, "Jacob was left alone, and there wrestled a man with him until the breaking of the day," but no such man as had ever wrestled with mortal man before. Completely subdued by the hand of God upon his thigh, the crippled man still clung to God and cried, "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me."

At the end of all human effort and schemes, Jacob realized his utter dependence upon God, and a changed man limped across the brook Jabbok that morning, with a changed name. For God had said he should no more be called Jacob but Israel. And it is so, a man, Jacob was lame through life, his lameness was ever a reminder unto him that in the hour of his need he was to depend upon God. He ceased to be Supplaciter his new faith had lifted him to the dignity of Prince of God. And here we see one of us in our own flesh learn the truth of the Golden Text.

SUCCESSFUL PARENTHOOD

HOW FRIENDS CAN HELP

Have you ever discovered how helpful friends can be in straightening out problems with your children? Take the "teen-ager" who won't keep herself presentable. She is scornful of the least touch of makeup, and mousy hair and droopy clothes seem to satisfy her. Of course, sometimes girls go through these stages of carelessness because they are honestly so intent on becoming a second Mme. Curie or Florence Nightingale that thought of clothes and appearance seems to them in their young earnestness a very trivial thing. Other girls may be so disappointed at this with the kind of face or hair nature gave them that they pretend to have no interest in looks and try to be as sloopy as possible.

Now here's where your friend steps in! Choose the one who is the most attractive and well groomed, provided she is also a nice person—but she would have to be that to be your friend, for vain, shallow women rarely have genuine friendships. Take this friend into your confidence and together you can arrange a luncheon downtown with your daughter. Make it casual—you might better appear to run into her by accident. Ask her to wear her trimmest clothes and her very nicest perfume—your girls admire an older woman who has a delicate scent because they themselves can't wear perfume without feeling self-conscious. Now no matter how un-dressed-up your daughter may be at the moment you'll make a casual but an interesting complimentary remark about her eyes, or her facial expression or the texture of her skin or hair—even nice eyebrows or dainty ears can cause a girl's pride in her appearance if they are admired by someone whose taste is superior.

This is just a beginning, of course. If the two don't hit it off try the plan with another friend. But if your daughter shows a spark of liking and admiration for your friend, then go on to further encouragements. Have your friend drop in for a cup of tea about the time daughter is due from school. What you are trying to do, of course, is encourage a friendship between your daughter and this older woman. They may have known each other for years, but on the plane of child and adult.

Friendship blooms slowly so don't expect miracles at once. When your daughter's confidence has been won, this friend who is clever about clothes and hair and grooming can begin to make suggestions to the girl about her appearance—suggestions she might ignore if you made them.

This same method often works in reverse—that is, if your daughter is too much taken up with her looks and neglects her brain try to foster a friendship with a woman who is both nice looking and intelligent, preferably one with an interesting career to her credit.

Not only will your daughter benefit but friends who have no daughters of their own will cherish an opportunity to have a hand in helping a young girl acquire the charm and poise of womanhood.

PICKLING-

FOR THE PANZER ATTACK

FOR THE PANTRY SHELF

Pickling to the homemaker is a method of preserving pickles and other vegetables. Pickling to the war worker is the process of dipping forgings in hot solutions to cleanse them of rust, scale and grease. Both processes are important in America's total war effort. Both depend on gas service. This is the double duty job of your gas service at war . . . a double duty job with a single purpose . . . VICTORY!

Scrap Metal Goes "Flat" Gathers Here

Last week a scrap metal drive was announced by The Advertiser, and the information was sent out as to where the scrap could be placed—a roped off spot on the public square, which would act as a constant reminder to all citizens to bring in their extra ounces of scrap metal.

Mayor Derr expressed his willingness on the part of the village to cooperate. Two old automobiles which have been in the village for several years, were secured to start off the drive, by placing them on the square.

Tuesday morning, Marshall Moore sent word to publicity chairman Thomas that some of the boys around the square didn't want to clutter up the Public Square with junk.

Well, to the boys who objected and to Marshall Moore for his splendid cooperation, I am quite certain that all of the boys who are now serving in the armed forces will also appreciate this fine "home front movement and co-operation."

What we've done our part, and as far as the boys who are now fighting, I'll always be grateful and appreciative of their efforts. Thinking that there may be at least ONE pound of scrap in Plymouth, the boys of the square didn't want to clutter up the square with junk.

Scoutmaster Stutenbury said to you for any old metal you might have. In the meantime, send to your radio and read your daily newspapers—and see if our boys don't deserve just a little consideration FROM Plymouth.

Mr. Nickler, who is canvassing the rural section, reports the drive is releasing hundreds of pounds of additional scrap.

Scoutmaster Stutenbury is the daughter of Walter Robinson of New London, formerly of Plymouth.

Do You Want To Work For Hitler?

That question is up right now to the American people to answer. For unless Hitler is stopped that is what we will be doing—along with hundreds of millions of people in Europe who failed to take the necessary steps to stop him in time.

Hitler will be stopped on the battlefields—and on the seas. If he is not stopped in his tracks there, we will have to stop him on our home fronts.

WOMAN OF THE WEEK

Sergeant Churchill can "take it." Perhaps she got that from her father, Mrs. Churchill's prime minister. "Taking it" has lately included scrubbing floors as a private in the ATS (Auxiliary Territorial Service), seeing action with an anti-aircraft battery during a bomber attack, and being spanked (all in fun) by a stout American "non com" who didn't like her joking remarks about his big feet. Like her beautiful mother, 19-year-old Sergeant Mary is charming in a thoroughly feminine way. But her father is completely informal and democratic in manner.

BOK SCHOOL: In Philadelphia an interesting experiment is being conducted by the Bok Vocational company and the Bok Vocational school. A few months ago officials of the company began assigning women to aircraft jobs and then sending them to school to learn the work. Now the Bok school is turning out, every three or four weeks, a new group of workers to be made for their particular jobs.

GUN DRILL: Although they will not be expected to do combat duty, even as members of the WAAC or WAVES, many American women are learning to shoot. Some, like Mrs. Potter Palmer, are outstanding marksmen. Others are learning how to "beat the enemy to the draw." But the AWVS (American Women's Voluntary Service) is going about it systematically, with a complete course conducted under army supervision.

"NO GUARANTEE": The OPA has followed the WPB order on the manufacture of cosmetics with a warning to women to use the currently adequate supply of cosmetics. The OPA says there is "no guarantee" that the supply will remain adequate unless the WPB order is supplemented by careful buying.

SUNNY SIDE UP: There are really two morals to this story. Maj. Martin Moody, post signal officer at Fort Bragg, N. C., decided that girls could run the telephone switchboard then operated by soldiers. But he didn't have any money with which to hire them. (Moral No. 1: "Where there's a will, there's a way.") The girls, by offering to teach them the telephone business. Later he brought them to the civil service, and Fort Bragg became the first post to use girl operators in an army telephone office. (Moral No. 2: "One road turns—") The girls have repaid Major Moody by working hard and paying for smart uniforms.

Wickard Proclaims '43 Wheat Marketing Quota

Local wheat growers were reminded today by county AAA Chairman Robert E. Finlay that Secretary of Agriculture, Claude R. Wickard has proclaimed a marketing quota for the 1943 wheat crop.

A national-wide referendum will be held in the Spring, before June 10, 1943, he said, to determine whether growers wish to have the quota remain in force. Similar marketing quota programs have been in force for 1941 and 1942 wheat crops.

In making the announcement, the Secretary said the proclamation may be made anytime prior to May 15, 1943—under terms of the law making quotas mandatory in years of excessive supply—but explained that he wished to get the word out early to all farmers now planning their fall wheat sowing operations.

The marketing quota will apply to wheat grown on 1943 wheat acreage allotments, announced June 17 at 55 million acres, the minimum provided by law.

"Because of the great wartime emergency the urgent need for certain types of commodities other than wheat, I hope winter wheat farmers will divert as much wheat acreage as they can to soybeans, flax and various feed crops," Secretary Wickard said.

"Wheat is a valuable wartime crop, as shown during the first World War when we didn't have enough of it. Fortunately, however, we have plenty of wheat today—so much, in fact, that the nation is hard pressed to find adequate storage even though large amounts are being fed to livestock. In order to make his best contribution, every farmer would divert just as much wheat land as practicable to crops more urgently needed, at the same time storing on his farm as much as possible."

The Agricultural Adjustment Agency reports virtually complete cooperation with the 1942 quota program by U. S. wheat growers. Out of an estimated 904 million bushels of crop in 1942, only about one percent will be subject to penalty because of non-compliance on the part of growers.

The marketing penalty, which it intended to discourage marketing of excess wheat, is half the basic loan rate for 1942, the basic wheat loan rate is $1.14, making the penalty 57 cents per bushel.

ble of the wheat he produces, and marketing it whenever possible in the form of livestock and poultry."

The law provides that a quota shall be announced for an approaching marketing year whenever it is apparent that the total supply of wheat will exceed a normal year's domestic consumption and exports by more than 35 percent. Due to a succession of large crops and decreased exports, this is the third successive year for which a wheat marketing quota has been proclaimed. In previous referenda, favorable votes have been cast for quotas. For 1941, the favorable vote was 81 percent; for 1942, it was 82.4 percent.

Under marketing quotas, each grower is allotted his fair share of the available wheat market, and for which a wheat marketing quota may be assessed upon growers who produce and market more than their quota.

In proclaiming the quota program Secretary Wickard said that latest figures indicate the carry over of wheat on July 1, 1943 will be about 848 million bushels and the 1943 winter and spring wheat production based on the announced national allotment of 55 million acres will be approximately 680 million bushels, making a total supply of U. S. wheat for the marketing year beginning July 1, 1943, of 1,528,000,000 bushels.

He pointed out that the average domestic consumption, based on the 10-year period 1932-41, is 683 million bushels, adding that this may be exceeded somewhat because of programs to use more wheat for livestock feed and industrial purposes. Heavy wheat exports cannot be anticipated in the immediate future, even with a more favorable turn of the war, he said.

"Obviously," Secretary Wickard said, "the 1943 wheat supply not only will exceed domestic consumption and probable exports by 35 percent but actually will be twice the size of these outlets. Today we have approximately a two-year's supply of wheat on hand; a year from now we'll have more than a two-year's supply, even with greater diversion to livestock feed and industrial products."

The Agricultural Adjustment Agency reports virtually complete cooperation with the 1942 quota program by U. S. wheat growers. Out of an estimated 904 million bushels of crop in 1942, only about one percent will be subject to penalty because of non-compliance on the part of growers.

The marketing penalty, which it intended to discourage marketing of excess wheat, is half the basic loan rate for 1942, the basic wheat loan rate is $1.14, making the penalty 57 cents per bushel.

A pleasant surprise was the gift on last Sunday from one of our young women, Miss Mary Farnell, a member of the staff of the Mansfield General hospital. Gifts and memorials were received also from friends in Michigan and Los Angeles.

MAKE THE MOST OF TODAY

How much are you going to get out of today? I know of not many sentences of ten words that are of more importance to you.

Are you letting your days slip by without getting much out of them? Are you making the most of the precious, golden hours which will never come back? John Ruskin, the English writer, used to keep a piece of marble on his desk which had one of the finest and most significant mottoes in the world carved on it. Just one word—TODAY. Every time he looked up he saw, chiseled in everlasting stone, a reminder of how precious today is. Doctor Johnson—the famous "Doctor Johnson" of England—had a reminder written on the face of his watch so that every time he looked at his watch he would see it, "The night cometh," it said. And old Doctor Johnson so lived that he made the most out of every fleeting moment, and when night did come he had accomplished so much that his name lives on and on.

Marcus Aurelius, one of the greatest men who ever lived, had his existence on this earth 150 years before the birth of Christ. A mighty warrior; he flung the boundaries of the Roman empire where they had never been before. He lived as busy a life as a person could well live, but he managed to toss off a book that still goes marching on. In it he said: "Don't conduct your life as if you were going to live forever."

The important thing is to get something worth while out of today, no matter how busy you are. How about reading? Do you read something worth while every day?

When the first Bull Moose convention was in session in Chicago, bands were playing beneath the window of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, and people were surging through the streets shouting, "Hooray for Teddy." We want "Teddy!" Amidst all the shouting and tumult, "Teddy Roosevelt sat in a rocking chair in his hotel, reading a book by Herodotus, the Greek historian.

A few years ago a friend of mine was visiting a business man in Detroit who asked him, "Would you like to meet Henry Ford?" That afternoon they drove to Ford's factory and Henry Ford got in the car with them and they started for an adjoining town to attend a meeting of a hospital board. On the way they passed through a stretch of woods. Ford leaned out of the car and said, "Listen, do you hear that? Stop a minute!" The driver thought something was wrong with the car. Without another word, Ford got out, walked a short distance into the woods and stood gazing up at a tree. Presently the other man joined him and they found that Henry Ford was listening to the song of a bird—the song of a brown thrush. "Isn't it beautiful," Ford exclaimed, "that's the first one I've heard this season."

We can all get something out of today. Remember, it will never come back.

By LYTLE HULL
The Farm to the Rescue

It is estimated that about 13,000,000 pounds of bombs were dropped on Cologne and Essen in the two big raids made by the Royal Air Force. Half of this tonnage would be steel and half of the steel would be made from "scrap." Or in other words about 3,250,000 pounds—1,250 tons—of scrap were dumped on the factories of Cologne and Essen in just two big air raids.

These figures give us a rough glimpse of what we are going to need in scrap-iron and scrap-steel to win the war. Every pound which each one of us can dig up is going to be needed. We have got to have a stock pile of millions of tons in reserve. We can't just keep doing it out to the factories day by day hoping that the salvage collectors will keep up with their daily needs. If we handled it in this manner factory after factory would have to close down because they had run short of material temporarily and had to wait for their allotment. This would be the way to lose the war.

Over and above the terrific load which has been placed upon the industries is a new job which they have taken on voluntarily and in a spirit of patriotism of which Americans can be proud. Volunteer committees of business executives are already operating in over 400 industrial centers in a tremendous drive to salvage every ounce of useful material which the factories can spare. Obsolete machinery, tools, stocks and dies, fixtures, etc., are being gathered for the national scrap heap. Stuff which "may come in handy some day" is going in with the rest of it. "Some day" must take care of itself today.

is the all important moment! But the industries can't do it all—they haven't got the amount of scrap we must have to win this war. The six million farms in the United States must do the rest—and they will do it and are doing it. In small towns and big towns, all over the country, scrap committees are being formed. Towns, counties and states are running an imaginary race to outstrip their rivals. It should be made a real race with public honors to those who lead.

But it takes the individual farmer to make the town scrap heap. If he puts his contribution off week after week—the scrap heap won't grow. If he thinks "it may come in useful some day"—we may lose the war some day. Every piece of useful material which we own but which we can do without at this time should go toward victory. If we put all the money we can possibly spare in savings banks and war bonds we can buy new and better things when the war is won. And won it will be—of we do our full share! Every farmer throws something on the town scrap heap every Saturday when he comes to town. If every town forms a committee to push the drive and keep it going and if we "do it now" and keep on doing it.

Our county war board or farm implement dealer can advise us how to start a town scrap heap and how to sell it. The proceeds can go to some Town Institution or Charity. If no one knows what to do to get started—write The Conservation Division, War Production Board, Railroad Building Building, Washington, D. C., for advice.
