Included in the remarks will be a brief history of the establishment of the company, what the company is and has done for the war effort, and the future outlook of the plant. Also many humorous and interesting incidents and events that took place during the past 45 years will be recalled by the "old timers" and officials.

HOUGH'S UNDER NEW OWNERSHIP

Through a business transaction closed last Monday, Harry Chronister, well-known Plymouth resident, has taken over the Hough Market, operated by Mrs. & Mrs. William Hough.

Coming to Plymouth in October, 1929, John Hough and his son William, opened up a grocery store on the southside of the Square in the building now occupied by the post office. For years they continued their partnership, but about seven or eight years ago, Bill purchased the interests of his father in the store. The store was moved from the southside to its present location in May, 1941, where Mr. and Mrs. Hough have continued to enjoy a splendid patronage.

With the war coming on, Bill put in time at the Shelby Tube Works for a year, but his health gave out, and he has been forced to take a little ease.

Mr. Chronister has been employed at a foundry in Crestline, and prior to that time, has been employed at various jobs in and around Plymouth. He took possession of the store Monday and announces that he will continue to carry the same high grade merchandise, and that he expects to employ the services of a first-class meat cutter.

HOLD RITES

Herman Van Zoest, 79, a native of Holland, died at his home in Celeryville, near Plymouth, on Monday. Death followed an illness of many months. He was one of a group of 30 who came to the marshland and established the village of Celeryville 41 years ago.

Survivors are two daughters, Jennie, a nurse in the Willard Municipal hospital, and Evelina, a teacher in the Willard schools, and three sons, Master Sgt. Cornelius Van Zoest in Italy, and Berend and Frederick of Celeryville.

Services were held in the Christian Reformed Church Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. Burial was made at New Haven.

As a pioneer of the marshland, Mr. Van Zoest saw the black and rich weed-producing soil turn into the finest celer gardens of the country. He has seen the growth of Celeryville from a few houses to one of an exceptionally ideal settlement — a village in which he was interested, both in its church and civic affairs.

His passing will be keenly felt not only by the family, but the entire community.

Hears From Son

Mrs. Ed Phillips who resides on Plymouth road, northwest of town was happy indeed on Monday when she received a letter from her son Eugene, a prisoner of war in Germany. This was the first letter received since in April. Written June 1st, it takes about three months to reach its destination. The letter follows:

June 1, 1944
"Today was the best I have ever had on the mail situation; seven letters were received; two from home, two from Joan Wachra (a cousin), who by the way has sent more letters than any other person and I appreciate them very much. The rest were Christmas cards. According to your letter of March 19, all of my letters, which as you probably know are limited, have not been getting through."

The time is occupied by reading in a fairly good reference library, a few athletics and gardening; quite a change from the wild and fast life lead immediately before.

PLYMOUTH BOY IS WOUNDED

Word was received Wednesday at noon by Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Davis of New Washington, former Plymouth residents, that their son, Omar, had been seriously wounded in action in France. There were no details from the brief message sent out by the War Department, further than stating that young Davis was seriously hurt.

Omar has been in the service approximately two years, and had a splendid record behind him. The family had just received a letter from him about a week ago asking that cigarettes be sent him.

Local Churches Plan For Communion Day

World Wide Communion has become one of the really great days in the church calendar of many of the churches. It is interesting to note that the observance of communion begins at Willing of New Zealand at 10:30 Sunday morning, when it is 7:00 p. m. Saturday evening here. On this day church members of most denominations will forget their denominational affiliation or submerge it in the greater fellowship with all Christians of whatever race or sect. Every Christian should be in the church of his choice this Sunday morning.

ILL IN HOSPITAL

Around the Square

(By Phineas Whittlesseed)

THE SCRAP PAPER drive will be on in Plymouth Saturday. Scouts will collect from every home. Let's put Plymouth over the top! Get your paper ready today!

WORK never hurt anyone, but the HEAT has sent Wayne Hough to the hospital, where he will be for some six to eight weeks. Wayne joined up with the Marines, but being just a beginner, the 132-degree sun waves at Parris Island, S. C., were too much for him. He had a couple of sun strokes and is now in the hospital. He'll be a lot more cheerful about the situation if you boys and girls will drop him a card this week. His address is: Pvt. Wayne Hough, U. S. Marine Corps, Parris Island, S. C.

JUST to remind the home folks once more, Oct. 15 is the last day for mailing Xmas parcels overseas. It's tough to try and pick something for a soldier, but send him something for Christmas. It will do him a world of good!

IT'S BEEN a long time since we have seen a display window that had a "pre-war" appearance, such a window this week is at Brown & Miller's hardware store. Wrenches, saws, rips, crowbars, screw drivers, and scores of other items — all made from METAL. Machinists, carpenters and others who no doubt are attracted by the wide variety of tools now on sale at this store.

WE REGRET to report that A. F. Dennewirth's condition remains critical. It is hoped that he has been ill for some time, and trust that he may soon show signs of improvement.

IF I KNOW human nature, there is going to be some "tall stories" told at the FRH 20-year-old banquet next Tuesday night. Van Wagner, Hisey, Rogers, and the rest of the too-room boys can really "remember when," but if they get ahead of Bud Stewart Bert Hunter and the other boys in that tall machine room—well, they'll have to sharpen their wits on the best lathe in the plant!

VERN ROGERS will again be in Plymouth next Wednesday and Thursday. He's bringing with him all the new styles and materials for Fall and Winter suits. Ladies, you're invited to stop in at JUMPS and see for yourself just what's for you! You're under no obligation to buy, and you'll find Mr. Rogers highly versed in what the women like in their new suits.

SHE ISN'T an old maid, but she is a little "man shy," and what made it so funny was that she had gone into a strange room—her neighbor's to change her clothes. She pulled the light cord, and in a few seconds she heard a man's voice. It's needless to try and tell you her thoughts, but when she turned out the lights the talking came from the radio was hooked onto the same light socket. Was her face red?

COULD BE WORSE—If you're upset over the current situation think how much worse you'd feel living in England where its unlawful to ice a cake. That's included in the memoranda on side-lights of the war sent out by the OPA this week. In Pabst beer is $8 a pound, while eggs cost 30 cents each. In Mexico where there is no price control flour costs per pound and beans have gone up from four to ten cents a pound since 1940. And down in Florida orchids grow in the front yard while we pay $5 for one of them in the States. Making comparisons, those above words help the peach-growers and the American housewife to understand why there wasn't sugar at canning time!

W. M. Johns, who has been a patient at the Mansfield General hospital, was removed Monday to Columbus for further treatment.

GERMANY'S SURRENDER

The office of war information has sent out a warning to watch out for increasing rumors of Germany's surrender. There have been several such rumors so far. Some are started by enemy propagandists, others by over-enthusiastic radio announcers and still others by "reliable sources" which no one is ever able to trace.

But there is no doubt about it that, when the real surrender comes, it won't be announced to us via any back-door route. The real surrender news will come from General Eisenhower himself, will be shouted over every radio station in the land and played up in giant-sized type on the front page of every newspaper. Church bells will ring, sirens will blow and people will be shouting the news from their house-tops.

TIME FOR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

"Send Christmas gifts before December 1."

You'll see that slogan advertised everywhere for the next two months at the railroads, the express companies, the post office and other government agencies. And it must be taken seriously if we hope to avoid the maddest Christmas scramble ever experienced.

That slogan has nothing to do with the gifts for the armed forces. Those gifts must be sent long before December 1 to reach their destination on time. The December 1 slogan is concerned with shipments of gifts in this country—shipments on railroads cars which are now groaning under their wartime load, express trucks which are bulging at the sides and by a mail system which already is taxed to capacity.

The Office of Defense Transportation estimates that because of the wartime population dislocation, Christmas gift sending will top 1943 by 25%, and the average gift will travel more miles than before.

All of the transportation agencies are making plans to try to take on the extra Christmas load—but there will be many a disappointed family on Christmas morning unless the people comply with this request for before-December shipments.

IT CAN AND WAS DONE

Some years ago Prof. Simon Newcomb was one of the most learned and most distinguished men in America. His knowledge of science was profound. He was distinguished both as an astronomer, and as a scientist in other fields. He was the only American since Benjamin Franklin who was made a member of the "Institute of France," which was France's most learned body.

What he didn't know about the laws of physics could be written on the back of a postage stamp. A subject that interested him intensely was flying. He gave several interviews in which he said that man would not fly until he discovered some new metal, or discovered some new force in nature, comparable to gravitation.

In October, 1903, he wrote a learned article for a magazine proving that man would never fly. The reasons were irrefutable: they marched in the relentless steps of an army. He said that man could not fly in a heavier-than-air machine because if he once got going, the forces of nature were such that he could not stop. He said that if a man in a flying machine slackened speed he would hit the earth like a dead crow. In his exact words, he said, "He will fall to the earth a dead mass."

All this was very impressive. Except for one thing. At the time he was writing the article two Ohio boys were in the sand hills of North Carolina working on a machine they had constructed together. Yes, the Wright brothers.

They were not half so well educated as Prof. Simon Newcomb. They stood in awe of the learned man's name. But they had an idea and they wanted to see what they could do with it.

So, at Kitty Hawk, they went ahead assembling their machine.

Well, just six weeks after the learned professor proved that man would never fly, the Wright boys got up in the air and flew! They hadn't known that it couldn't be done. They stayed up in the air only 12 seconds that first time, but man for the first time in history had lifted himself off the face of the earth in a machine that weighed more than the same amount of air, and had flown. A stupendous event!

When the learned professor heard about this, do you think he changed his tune? No! He said there must be some mistake and that he had checked and re-checked his figures and theories very carefully and that they must stand. Well, they stood, but the boys flew.

And that is the way that most of the worth-while things in the world are accomplished. By people who don't know they can't be done. So if you are trying to accomplish something that people say can't be done, remember what the learned Professor Newcomb said about the two Ohio boys who built their airplane in their bicycle shop. Then go ahead and do what you started out to do.

PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN WILL BRING RETURN OF ROORBACKS

The forthcoming political campaign will no doubt unearth a string of the same malicious mudslinging that has dogged every political candidate since Washington's day, according to an article in the October issue of CORONET Magazine. And it's a good idea to get an idea of how these roorbacks, as the rumors are called, originate and how they are scotched.

Some historians contend that Washington started the two-term tradition because he refused to endure four more years of gossip-mongering such "as could scarcely be applied to a Nero, a notorious defaulter or a common pickpocket," to quote his own words. Health, sexual irregularities, religious heresy, mixed blood, drunkenness and business dishonesty head the list of popular subjects for these whispering campaigns.

Perhaps the most tragic incident connected with such low campaigning was the death of Mrs. Andrew Jackson, directly traceable to a breakdown brought

Exhibit Captured Nazi Equipment

This pile of German helmets surrounded by Nazi guns and equipment was captured by the Red army in the battle of Leningrad. The exhibit which opened recently contained every type of German military equipment which the Russian defenders seized and collected after their heroic stand against the Nazi hordes.

on by publication of the story that she and the General had lived together for years without benefit of clergy. The truth was that the Jacksons, before their marriage, were improperly informed that Mrs. Jackson had been divorced from her first husband. The error wasn't discovered for years, but after it was, they were promptly remarried, according to CORONET.

Of Woodrow Wilson it was hispers villainously that he was estranged from his wife, that he was not the father of some of his children and that he kept a mistress in the White House. Even these serious charges paled, however, before those publicly aired about his successor, Warren G. Harding. A public made credulous by the Teapot Dome and other political scandals of the Harding administration, lapped up The President's Daughter, a book in which Nan Britton charged that Harding was the father of her child, Elizabeth Ann, and confessed to a long series of assignations with the President, some of them in the White House itself. A Klunk of Marion, Ohio, refuted the stories in The Answer To The President's Daughter, and Miss Britton lost a $50,000 libel suit against him, says CORONET.

Theodore Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith were among those accused of drunkenness. Teddy Roosevelt instituted, and won, a friendly libel suit against a small paper in Michigan that had printed the rumor, to vindicate himself. Smith denied that he ever was drunk, as charged, at a New York state fair and, in a remarkable article in The Atlantic Monthly, answered the charge that he would be unduly influenced by the Roman Catholic Church if elected President.

Wendell Wilkie was the intended victim of the first important 1944 roorback when C. Nelson Sparks published One Man—Wendell Wilkie, containing a letter supposedly written by Harry L. Hopkins to Dr. Humphrey Lee, President of Southern Methodist University. The letter, purporting to show that the White House expected that Wilkie again would be the Republican candidate and that he would not oppose the Administration's policies vigorously, was proved to be an absolute forgery, CORONET relates.

So think twice before you accept any stories about the President's health being impaired, or about the Russians using lend-lease butter to grease their boots, or about the First Lady being boozed in New Guinea. They're all just roorbacks, concludes CORONET.

net, attempting to blind you to the nature of the important issues of 1944.

ASKS CLOTHES FOR WAR RELIEF

With the approach of winter the need for clothing for victims of the war becomes an urgently pressing problem.

Herbert H. Lehman, head of the United National Relief and Rehabilitation administration has asked the churches and synagogues of the nation to undertake the collection of clothing in their respective communities. Local churches are responding to this appeal and asking the help of everyone. Clothing may be left at any of the churches and would like it to be in by Friday evening. Church doors will be open for arrangements made to take care of it.

The campaign objective is 15 million pounds of clothing, which will meet the urgent needs of war-torn peoples in liberated countries. The clothing will be distributed free to needy men, women and children through UNRRA. The need is for good serviceable used clothing. The following types are indicated: Infants' garments, all types, particularly knit goods; men's and boy's garments, overcoats, topcoats, suits, jackets, shirts, work clothes, undershirts, pajamas and robes. Women's and girls' garments, coats, jackets, skirts, sweaters, dresses, underwear, aprons, jumpers, smocks, robes, nightgowns. Bedding, blankets, quilts, sheets, pillow cases, quilts, etc.

Clothing need not be in perfect repair, but must be useful to the people who receive it. Cotton garments should be washed, but need not be ironed.

The need is great and the quantity of clothing large, but the willingness of the American people to help the unfortunate people of Europe is assured.

EXPLANATION

The organ committee of the Presbyterian church wishes to explain why there are several errors in the memorial list in the church histories. These mistakes are, of course, unintentional and no one is more sorry about them than the committee.

Due to haste with which the committee had to function to get everything ready by the anniversary dinner set, and the fact that several names were handed in after the material mentioned went to press, these errors developed.

However, a memorial plaque with the entire memorial list will be procured as soon as such things are available and plans are being made to compile an organ booklet containing a resume of the entire project, list of donors, memorial list, pictures, etc., for the benefit of all interested. Our sincere apology is extended in this matter.

The Organ Committee

Shiloh Beats Union!

Union came here Friday for a baseball game that cost them with a score of 11-4. It was a hard fielding and outting game with the Drummer Boys on top as usual.

SHELBY DEPOT IS PERMANENT

The increasing demand for civilian workers at the 831st AAF Specialized Depot has resulted in the provision of many full and part time employment opportunities. Already one of the largest military installations of its kind in the world, plans are underway here, eventually may take the work of the Shelby Depot in the near future. It has also been announced that the Depot is to be a permanent part of the Army Air Force installation and will continue to function as a supply center after the termination of hostilities.

Civilians are employed under the provisions of the U. S. Civil Service and thus secure all the benefits that this system of employment has to offer.

In commenting upon the situation, Colonel Richard Gimbel, the commanding officer of the post, said, "The increasing tempo of war and the possible shift of combat activities from the Atlantic theatre to the Pacific theatre, which eventually may take place, has greatly augmented the vital role which the 831st Depot is playing and will play in the future."

Princess of Castles

LOUIS ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM

CHAPTER XIII

The Princess Meridel and cousin arrive in Canada to visit Baron Budd Meprin, her uncle. Madame Fabre, who employed him, turned the castle over to the Baron as his own. Roger Fabre, nephew of Madame Fabre, was CAP on a furlough fall in love with the Princess. Her cousin found a photo of Roger's brother, who was killed in the Nazis. When the Princess learned that Roger's brother was the owner of the castle, they all left. Roger soon found them and had them return to the castle. Michel, Roger's brother, escaped from a prison camp, came to the castle and in a fight with Roger, caused him to lose his ear. Alarm was sounded. Michel returned and informed Madame Fabre that he was a captain in the British secret service and not a German spy. She had never lost faith in him and wanted him to stay—she knew the Princess and Michel were in love, even though his brother was to marry the Princess.

She saw the red temper rising in him and, knowing it of old, recalling many such encounters and their unhappy outcome, she fought to control her own not too gentle spirit.

"Maybe I didn't believe so much as I loved you, but I know now that thing that seemed to be against you."

"That is what I mean. But it was not so with her." "Can you expect a girl to go on waiting for a man who has been a few hours on a mountain or something, in some Ruritanian land, long ago, even when that man seems beyond doubt to be a traitor and worse?"

"Yes," said Michel softly. "Yes, I can expect that. A mountain, you say, madame—but you do not think what a terrific mountain Ruritanian land, you say—but you cannot dream what a magic land that is; for a few hours you say—but you—this must know that such things as this are not measured in hours. We knew each other always; we were to love each other always."

"It was so said!"

"It was so understood."

"But Meridel—I am being a traitor to Roger now—I know Meridel has never ceased to care for me."

"I watched her tonight in the lovely bright glow. I saw my brother and kiss her. I knew then it was time for me to go."

"Because your pride was hurt. Because you expected her to believe in you, no matter what happened."

"Not entirely that," he said wearily. "Roger loves her. He's a great lad, Roger—one of the best, the salt of the earth and also one of the noblest of the noble breed with whom he lives. Well, suppose she still does care for me, can I come back now and—"

"You mean—you are stepping aside for Roger? You'd give up your—"

"The only great dream I ever had, madame."

"You know it of old, that voice was flat now, toneless. Like Oberleutenant Faber's voice. 'I'm going away tonight and I shall not tell anyone that I was here. That is understood. When—when we are married, I shall return.'"

"Why, you headstrong—"

"Stubborn, thick-headed mule. You know it of old, that every bit of it. But that's the way it is, Tante Mimi—and that is the way it will be. I don't think I have self I can take her from Roger and steal his happiness, but I shall not even run the risk."

He stood up. He came to her and bent and kissed her. "It is goodbye for now, a little while, in a few days, I shall be back. I have to return again; I may even get a post here. I don't know."

"Don't go, Michel! Don't go!" "What? You're running out of ammunition. You're turning soft on me again. These are new tactics, and clever ones, but I have learned and I shall not fall for it. I shall go as I came—quietly. And you will not speak. Promise!"

The old eyes looked at him and there was no softness about her face, but that was all. She was content for suddenly it smiled—a rare, sweet smile.

"I promise, you mule—you lovely, splendid dog. But I tell you it is a very foolish thing you do."

"Neither the first nor, I think, the last. Farewell, ma tante."

He retrieved the hat, turned at the door to smile at her, to show her the wild lips in his eyes. "We shall quarrel, don't you see," he called. "And always make up."

Meridel and Roger walked over the big hill that lies between the castle and the village of St. Didier des Montagnes. It was a narrow path among the great spruces and cedars that grew thickly on the mountain-side. In winter the trail was usually closed by the drifted snow, but now one could walk easily enough over the crust. They were on the way, the house of the Chamberlands, the government agent, to bring back Pol Martin and Rosine who had been invited to be a supper with the little Chamberlands.

The stars were dim, but the track lay clearly marked through the darkness of the wood. From the time they left Philbert they had talked little. Both of them felt constraint, uneasiness. Roger, always ready with gay talk and laughter, was strangely silent. Meridel, walking along beside him, looked up at his shadowy profile and longed to say something that would break the tension. But she could find no words to say. And she thought, Is my heart empty of things to tell him—so soon empty? This is not the way of love.

"Do not girls who are about to marry often cry?"

He said at last, "You cried to-night, Meridel. Your tears fell on the lovely gown that is being made ready for your wedding. You did not think I saw you. It was when you left the room after my aunt had gone upstairs. You first looked at yourself in the mirror and then you cried. Why did you cry and—"

"I do not know, Roger. I really do not know. Do not girls who are about to marry often cry?"

"Not like that. It was a different thing. He was silent for a moment. Then he said what Madame had said that night after his departure: 'Un qui aime; un qui se laisse aimer, celui qui aime, celui qui se laisse aimer, celui qui aime, celui qui se laisse aimer.'"

"I have looked there."

"And you have not found it."

She did not answer, but he knew from her silence that she had looked in vain.

"You told me once," said Roger, "that only one key would unlock your heart. You remember?"

"Yes," it was only a whisper. "I remember well."

"And I have not told that key? You must answer me."

"I cannot. I tell you I cannot."

"Because it is so near the time, and I have waited and waited and hoped constantly that I would find in you the answer to my love. The answer hasn't come."

"But in time—oh, Roger, why must we talk like this? But if it is 'no'—"

"We must," he said doggedly. "Before it is too late. We must have this thing settled. If I do not see how it ever can be settled. What would you have me do?"

"Michel is still in your heart, isn't he? Haven't given up your dream that you told me of long ago?"

"I could never give it up. I tried, Roger, believe me. But believe me, it was no use trying. It is part of me. It will be always there. Need it make no difference—for us?"

"Only a shadowy thing," he said. "A few hours against all my love—a few hours that echo for ever."

"He will not come back—not ever now."

"He does not need to, he never went away. I know what love is, Meridel, because I love. I saw you cry and the tears fell on your wedding dress—and I knew."

They had come to the Chamberland house. Pol Martin and Rosine, with Gerard and the two Chamberlands, were waiting for them. Roger called to them. "Holla! It is late, my infants to be abroad. We must run all the way home."

On the way back, he tried to talk to Rosine, but everything they said fell flat. It had no zest, no savor. It was a cold, dead, uninteresting thing.

Something that should have been vivid and shining had faded for him, and both felt that in some way the blame lay between them. He thought, I should not have allowed myself to be questioned by her. I should not have been so greedy, so greedy. I should have taken the generous gift she offered me and thanked God for it. But I could not, I could not.

And Meridel thought, What is wrong with me that I cannot love him? Respect, liking, loyalty, admiration—all these things I have for him. But not love. Perhaps in time it will come, but God help us if it does not. And Roger is wise enough to know that it is a grave risk we run. Why did I shed those foolish tears tonight? The dress is so lovely; it is made for one who gives herself to love—Roger.

Even the children, after chattering for a while about the games they had played and the good time of the afternoon, noticed the silence of their elders, and gradually they ceased to talk and plodded along with Roger leading the way. Meridel close beside him. All about them was the vast stillness of the forests. Far off an owl hooted and from a farmyard over the hill a fox barked sharply. Those sounds died and then in that great stillness they heard a deep voice singing, coming toward them around a bend in the path. They froze in their tracks and the little ones clutched Meridel's hands.

"Bonsolo, Mignaud! Bonsolo, Fricot!"

"It's he!" whispered Pol Martin. "It is Bonhomme Fricot!"

"What folly!" said Meridel, but a strange shiver, not of fear, moved over her body. "How could it be?"

"Listen!" said Rosine. "Yes, yes. It is he! It is he!"

"Bél Bonhomme Fricot!" called Pol Martin in his shrill soprano. Bonhomme Fricot, what are you doing here?"

The song perished. They saw only a shadowy figure in the path before them, the glimmer of white at his throat. After a moment he spoke, reluctantly it seemed, yet with laughter in his voice. "Are you sure, Pol Martin and Rosine, that it is Bonhomme Fricot you have here?"

"Yes, yes, we are sure indeed!" "It could not be the laughing soldier, then!"

"The laughing soldier would not know our names," pointed out Rosine. "Why do you play this game, Bonhomme Fricot? We know you."

"I was the laughing soldier," said he. "I gave the game to my old clothes and shaved off my beard and cut off my hair and now you know why I laughed—because the soldier tried to kill Bonhomme Fricot and himself was killed instead."

"You see, I work for the French in England and I must sometimes do strange things."

"But it is a brave!" cried Pol Martin. "It is grand. Did you come here to visit us?"

"It's no use, Mike," said Roger stepping forward, finding his brother's hand in the starlight. "You were going the wrong way. You don't need to run, do you?"

"I talked with Tante Mimi. I—"

"You were not going because of me?" Meridel came forward now and reached for the hand Roger held so that their hands were clasped together, hers so small between the two strong ones of those men who loved her.

"We can talk when we get home," said Roger, and thanked God for the darkness, for the dim stars that let no one see his face. "I'll go on ahead with these two fellows."

A moment, Roger, said Michel. "Please—"

He paid no attention to them. He sent Pol Martin and Rosine scampering down the trail and hurried after them. They heard his voice faintly. "You can pretend it's the road on the magic mountain, if you need it."

But he knew, none better, that any road is a magic road if you have the right charm in your hand. And somewhere for him there would be such a road, one that no other foot had trod before and the one of it someone who waited—for only him.

Behind him, under the stars, Meridel and Michel Fabre had stopped to gaze at each other in that strange light. "It was wrong," he said. "You did not forget our hour."

"You did not mean it when you said you left me then, that you would not return?"

"You knew I did not. It was written. All this—long ago. Nothing could ever change it."

PLYMOUTH 9 WINS OVER N. FAIRFIELD

Last Friday the local high school baseball team journeyed to North Fairfield and came through with a decisive 12 to 7 victory.

The local lads wasted no time in getting started as they scored six runs in the first inning while holding their rivals scoreless.

North Fairfield, however, came back with two runs in the second, three in the third, and one in the sixth while Plymouth was being held to a single run in the second and fourth.

Going into the last inning Plymouth held an 8 to 6 lead, and at this point they unleashed a scoring barrage, chipping up four runs on four hits and two walks. The host team tried desperately to overcome the lead in their half of the seventh but managed only to push one run across.

Instead of going to Shiloh tomorrow evening as scheduled, Plymouth will journey to Monroeville, and go to Shiloh, Tuesday, Oct. 10th.

On Friday, Oct. 13, Monroeville comes to Plymouth, and Friday, Oct. 20, North Fairfield will meet the local team.

Arrangements are being made for games with Tiro.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Did you hear that Tom is going to be inducted into the Army next week, Judge?"

"Yes, Frank told me this morning down at the barber shop. Our town's got a lot of men in the service now. In fact, all towns have. I was just reading in the paper there are more than 10,000,000 men away from their homes in the armed forces. And from all reports, they're doing a grand job bringing victory closer every day."

"We folks at home have a mighty big obligation to those 10,000,000 fighting men. We've got to produce the food to keep them well fed. We've got to keep them supplied with the ammunition and equipment they need to finish their job. We've got to help the Government pay for all these supplies our men need in the fighting more and more War Bonds. We'll have another big chance to do that by helping to put the next War Loan drive over the top, Jim."

"And, in addition, we must be sure that, while they're away and can't express their opinions, we don't go voting on and deciding any things that will displease them when they come back."

"WHAT THE FARM FAMILIES FACE IN THE FUTURE DUE TO NEW DEAL BLUNDERS" SAYS FARM WOMAN

In the September issue of the Dairy Farmers' Digest published at Metuchen, N. J., Mrs. Henrietta Jones of New York state writes, interestingly, of some of the problem farm families who have to face.

The women voters of the nation will no doubt participate in the coming election more than ever before, and there is every reason to believe that the women will give much serious thought to their home and family when it comes time to cast their vote.

The article, written by Mrs. Jones, is as follows:

"The stepping stones for future agriculture have been laid during the past twelve years under the present administration. These stepping stones will be farmer stumbling blocks, unless there can be some drastic changes in the near future.

Since 1920, the farmers have been forced to try countless political, and economic programs. Today, after spending millions of dollars, and establishing thousands of agencies with well paid office forces, the farmer's situation has grown steadily worse. Cold figures are the best proof of this. It is true, according to government figures that the 1943 index of all farm prices stood at 192 against 92 in 1939. Against this figure we must check the more than 100 per cent gain in both inferior grain and hired help prices. Only farmer foresight and endurance has enabled him to meet the tremendous handicaps. Without knowing what he was doing or why he was doing it, the farmer has been forced to waste valuable gas, rubber, and time following up governmental boards to learn his ABC's in rationing. If properly applied, this time and energy could have done much toward avoiding rationing of food in our country in order to feed hungry nations of the world.

"Farmers have arisen to the challenge for more food as a patriotic duty, regardless of the lack of sufficient machinery and the loss of hired help which has forced farm women to do nearly 20 per cent of the labor on the farms.

"There has been a steady trend away from the one-man farm for more than a decade. At first this trend seemed to point toward co-operations, but the picture now clearly points to government regimentation, which will be just one more link in a chain of a political scheme toward Dictatorship. These one family farms have been the foundation of our Democracy, and are a necessity to preserve it.

"Even before the war, credit rates had become too high to enable the farmer to make use of them. The farmer's income had no comparison with that of other workers, red tape and bureaucracy had reached a high point. Fair competitive prices have never been received by the farmer during the past twenty years. Social reforms have been necessary in some cases but only a stability of income can ever put the farmer back onto his feet. Given fair prices, he will adjust his own problems.

"Abundance is the key word to future farmer success. This word abundance has been abused beyond recognition during the present administration. There has been an abundance of sugar bursting warehouses, yet food has been wasted and rationed because the housewives were not allowed the necessary amounts of sugar to preserve this food. There has been tire and gas rationing to preserve these commodities which to a certain extent, were only tied up for political reasons. Short of beef, there were thirteen carloads of government beef on Recently, when the northeast was the Metropolitan tracks so tied up with red tape that they could not be unloaded. In our section alone, there is an abundance of peas, which the growers are plowing under, because at the very low price in New York City, they can not afford to pay the costs and ship them for consumer use.

"When we stop to think that every taxpayer today is in debt at least $3,500, that our southern neighbors are enjoying point and ration free the foods and necessities of life which we have been denied, that our tractors, equipment and seeds have been sent to other countries as a good will offering, and that this same equipment is being used to develop the agriculture of these countries which will one day compete with our country in a world trade, we are convinced that political blunders of the New Deal have dealt a death blow to the farmers of the future.

"These same politicians who now hold office are so strongly entrenched, that at least a part of them will remain in office after election to carry out the present program if given a chance, but farmers who have endured these blunders at the expense of working 80 to 85 hours per week, been deprived of the use of their cars, seen the price for their products established by the government and paid the increased price for what they bought to eat and wear in order to enable the workers in factories to reap a harvest under union wages gained only by strikes and political backstabbing one day find that their patriotic duty to their son and their neighbor's son is at an end. What then will happen to agriculture? Can it be that the OPA and government rulings will hold him to his job?

"There will be a tendency for soldiers to return to farms where they can be free from despotic government rulings. Under the present set up of unfilled promises and handouts by the government, the New York milk shed has already lost 12,900 tried and true producers. What then can be that the OPA and government rulings will hold him to his job?

"There will be a tendency for soldiers to return to farms where they can be free from despotic government rulings. Under the present set up of unfilled promises and handouts by the government, the New York milk shed has already lost 12,900 tried and true producers. What can the future hold for a young man to return and take up agriculture for a living in competition with promised wages in industry, and a five hour working day?

"Perhaps the boys who have faced death in cold blood will have the foresight and courage to defy the rotten, political worms who have been leeching away our form of government. On the other hand, they have fought their battles, and if they must be appeased and live by government doles, they may go into the bread line and avoid work and worry. The Democratic platform promises no future bread lines, but to date, their policies would seem to make them a necessity.

"To save agriculture, government control must be removed from commodities to lessen the red tape which today hampers farmer initiative. Price disparity must be eliminated and farmers must insist that government regulations, subsidies, and vote getting policies are a thing of the past. The elimination of these and many other unfair practices will be the problem of the farmer tomorrow.

"The American farmer asked for none of this. It was forced upon him. It will be the sacred duty of our generation and the generations to come, to wipe out the black marks which have been made on agriculture, through the blunders of an egotistical, ruthless, vote buying political ring whose goal has not been our Democratic form of government.

"Whether we lose our Democracy and become a nation of National Socialism, whether agriculture continues as a free enterprise or falls to regimentation and government control which would seal the doom of future farmers and send them down the road in bread lines are the issues which the coming election will settle. We shall vote not for a party but for a policy for future security and happiness for ourselves, our children, and the nations of the world.

YOUR MONEY AIDS THE BOYS

Mrs. Jane Merrill of Wauseon, Ohio in a letter dated March 5, 1944, written from New Guinea to her parents said, "when we landed in New Guinea we spent three days trying to get planes to take us to our destination. Our first day out at the airport we sat in trucks in the boiling hot sun all the entire day, and no dinner except what the Salvation Army gave us, iced coffee and cookies. It was certainly appreciated."

So you see why the local American Legion Post pledged itself to raise $350.00 for the Salvation Army. This great organization is doing a splendid job of serving our forces in every part of the world. They're giving our boys food, shelter, entertainment, smokes, etc., with a wholeheartedness never before dreamed of The Red Shield canteens operated by the Salvation Army is doing a swell job on the home front. For example, let us take our own State of Ohio. The S. A. has served service men in this state alone a million cups of coffee; a million and a half sandwiches; two million doughnuts and many other items in like quantities.

Now, if you really want to help in this work, you can do so by contributing a small amount to any member of the American Legion. We can't all work on the front lines, but we can give money, so let's do our part and place Plymouth at the top of the line

Leads His Squadron Over His Home Town

That squadron of sixteen drab-colored naval-planes that streaked criss-cross over Shelby late last Wednesday afternoon carried more significance to local residents than the usual flight over the city since one of the pilots was Ensign Glen Earl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Earl of 21 Wilson avenue. The planes were Gruman Hellcat night fighters, carrying tear-drop gas tanks under their fuselages. Both planes and men are handpicked and will likely be assigned to a carrier.

Ensign Earl has been stationed at Charleston, R. I. and his squadron was headed for the west coast. Others in the flight include Dick Kosky of Mansfield and a pilot by the name of Powers from Oceola.

Ensign Earl entered the navy in July, 1942, by first entering pre-flight training at Wooster and getting his secondary at Ann Arbor, Mich. Additional training included Pensacola, Fla., and several other bases.

No Paper For Her Groceries

Alice Force, who won national fame as a state winner in the recent Hour of Charm contest, cannot sing of wanting a "paper doll to call my own" because the can't even find enough paper to wrap her groceries.

Here she comes from a Kroger Grocery and Baking Company store after making several purchases and was told she might be forced to carry her packages like this if she forgot to bring her own shopping bag.

Kroger stores throughout 18 midwest and southern states have pledged their cooperation to the War Production Board in its national campaign among all food retailers to conserve paper, now so vitally needed in the war effort for shipping materials overseas. Each store has a pledge card signed by the store manager on which he promises to urge customers to bring shopping and paper bags to carry their purchases; not to wrap or bag packaged articles which can be safely carried unwrapped; to use the smallest bag possible, and to make every bag carry a full load; and not to use a bag within a bag except when absolutely necessary."

CELEBRATION WELL ATTENDED

A capacity filled auditorium witnessed the historical pageant of the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning portraying the one hundred and twenty-five years of its existence.

The pageant was written by Miss Florence Danner and Mrs. Gladys Phillips Vandervort and dedicated to the memory of their fathers, Rev. C. B. Phillips, pastor from 1919 to 1922 and Dayton W. Danner, Elder from 1901 to 1943.

Divided into four episodes, the pageant took place Feb. 22nd, 1819 in Paris, at the home of Abram Vanhanten where a group of pioneers decided to hold religious meetings. As time progressed, the church circle grew, and a church is built about 1825, one and a half miles south of Plymouth. Rev. Wm. Matthews headed the church which consisted of 41 members, nearly all of whom came from New York. Services were continued in this log church until 1836 when the brick school house in town was used until 1840.

They next erected a good substantial frame building with stone basement and choir loft in the rear of the auditorium where a small pipe organ was located. This was situated in front of the present Pioneer cemetery and was used until 1886 when a majority of the congregation felt that it would be to the advantage of the church to have a location nearer the center of the town.

Accordingly, the then unoccupied Congregational church was purchased, rebuilt and remodeled in 1885. This is the present church home with alterations and repairs.

Miss Florence Danner was reader and gave the explanations between the episodes. Characters were quite dignified with their sideburns, mustaches and the ladies dressed in costumes of the times. Other highlights of the history was the first wedding in the new meeting house, and the formation of the Ladies Society. The women decided they had been the silent partners long enough and they too could do something for the church. The first offering for the new music instrument was $56, donated by the ladies who also agreed to hold dinners and give of their time and talent to further the musical project of the church.

The concluding scene of the pageant was "Our Thanks and Memorial for the Past and Our Hope for the Future." A lighted cross with a floral offering at its base, was the background against which two young girls placed in white floral vases, a beautiful flower for each of the pastors who served the church. The past and upon a altar three more vases were filled with flowers by three young girls as the memorial names were read by Miss Danner of gifts for the new organ. The final tribute was a patriotic bouquet of red, white and blue flowers placed in the various vases in memory of the late Gene Cornell.

Dedicate Organ
For years the music-lovers of the church had been anxious to have an organ and this became a reality with the dedication of the new Hammond electric organ in connection with the observance of the 125th anniversary. Mrs. Helen Sams, as teacher of the Catherine Taylor class who sponsored the affair, presented the organ to the church with E. B. Miller accepting it in behalf of the trustees. Rev. Bethel, as pastor dedicated it to the work of the church and the Lord.

Organ Recital
A half hour organ recital was given following the program by Mrs. Vera Hatch Thauvette, organist of Cleveland. Mrs. Thauvette is an accomplished musician and enthralled her audience with such numbers as Festival Teccata, by Fletcher; Minuet in G. Beethoven; Novelt Medley (Marimba Imitation); Songs My Mother Taught Me, and many others. An outstanding number was Rhapsody for Organ and Piano with Mrs. Francis Guthrie, Pianist, accompanying Mrs. Thauvette.

Among those from out-of-town noticed in the audience were Rev. and Mrs. O. A. Laughbaum of Bucyrus; Rev. & Mrs. Homer Nefl; B. R. Jenks of Willard; Mr. Fred Charbonneau, Detroit; and Mrs. M. B. Mohn, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hatch, Mrs. Newton Carson and granddaughter of
