TOO MANY PRESSURE GROUPS

SELFISH pressure groups, employing high-paid contact men who "know their way around" in Washington and state capitals, are becoming one of the greatest threats to our democracy.

We have organization is necessary among those who have a common interest to defend. But when we see how far these pressure groups go in their "me first" activities, we realize that they must be curbed.

And the best way we can suggest for curbing them is to get back to the status where the greatest pressure of all is exerted by the consumer. Only by more voluble expression of views by the people themselves can we hope to drown out the voices of the self-seeking lobbyists who disregard the public welfare in their scramble to gather up loot for the group which is paying their salaries.

A BILLION RATINGS

RATION boards have now been operating in practically every community in the United States for three years. In that time they have issued more than a billion ratings, including 534,000,000 food ration books and 229,000,000 gasoline ration books.

These ration boards, says Chester Bowles, head of the OPA, have made it possible for civilians, through three years of war, to get their fair share of available goods at a fair price.

In a democratic, quickly organized, largely voluntary set-up, such as ration boards are, there are bound to be some mistakes made and some charges of favoritism or unfairness. But as we look over the present status of our civilian life and compare prices and the availability of goods with the last war, it is apparent that the ration boards of the nation have made an invaluable contribution to our welfare.

We want to take this opportunity, on the third anniversary of rationing, to thank the workers on our ration board for the service they have given to us.

"HOW TO WIN FRIENDS AND INFLUENCE PEOPLE"

POWER OF A LETTER SHOWN

DID you ever stop to think of the power of a letter? Yes, a letter to a newspaper. In 1898 a school boy in Cincinnati, Ohio, was stirred by the blowing up of the battleship "Maine" in Havana harbor. He sat down and wrote a letter to the newspaper, "The Enquirer," and suggested that the school children of America should contribute a dime each and try to raise enough money to build another battleship and give it to our government.

The next day, after the letter was published, there was a knock at the door and when they opened it there was the mail man mopping his brow. "I've got a whole bag full of mail for the boy," he said, and dumped the bag on the floor. When they opened the bag they found 720 letters, all were letters of approval and many with dimes.

That boy is now a grown man, of course, and lives in West Los Angeles, California. He is W. Rankin Good.

But to go on with the story: the power and feeling expressed in that letter stirred people. It even stirred President William McKinley, and young Rankin Good was invited to come to the White House. He grabbed the chance, of course, and lived in the White House for two weeks.

He went out on a speaking tour and was put up at the Waldorf Astoria, New York, where newspaper reporters flocked in to see him.

The battleship was to be called "The American Boy," and it was with this understanding that the money flooded in.

Rankin Good was invited to the New York stock exchange to be its guest. He grabbed that, too, and was honored by the whole organization.

Rankin Good traveled across the country making speeches and became famous from coast to coast. Four and one-half million dollars was raised. Then trouble came and looked in the window. It was discovered that congress had passed a law that all battleships of the first class had to be named after states. So a bill was introduced into congress that there should be an exception for this one ship. The bill passed the house.

Meantime we were licking the whet out of Spain and the war was about over. So the senate let the bill die.

Next thing was to decide what to do with all that money. The money was finally sent to the public schools to be put into a library fund, and really started public libraries in public schools in this country. And who can say that wasn't as helpful as if the money had been put into a battleship?

This is an excellent illustration of the power of a letter, and the power of a conviction. Rankin Good believed a battleship should be built to replace the Maine and he threw himself into the cause, and got results, too. If you believe in something, heart and soul, then do something about it. Tell people about it, write a letter to your newspaper, start something. You never know how far a candle beam is going to be seen.

WOUNDED . . . wishes

When a boy wounded in France is brought back to this country, what does he think about and talk about? Is he depressed? Is he anxious to get back into a civilian working life? Does he talk about the war?

I heard dozens of questions like that fired at a girl who for two years has had the nerve-racking job of welcoming the wounded when they first land in this country. At a hospital near New York, where approximately half of the wounded are sent immediately after landing here by boat or plane, this Red Cross worker, with a small group of assistants, works night and day to make these unfortunate young men comfortable in their own country. If anyone knows what these men want most, she certainly qualifies.

And the thing which she says stands out above all other wishes is to get back again in the front as soon as they possibly can!

Why? Because they left their buddies over there. They left their friends they ever had—and they left them to handle a dirty, tough job. They felt that they had let them out on them. Even though some of them hated everything about war, they couldn't get right being over here in a comfortable hospital when their buddies were still going through a hell of a time on the battle fields of Europe.

MESSAGES . . . "mom"

At this eastern hospital, which is a distribution point for the movement of wounded to hospitals nearer their homes, each boy is given a chance to send messages to his family as soon as he arrives. Many of them have to dictate those messages to nurses—short telegrams about their arrival. And in 9 cases out of 10, the first telegram sent out is to "mom".

That would seem natural enough with boys who had lived at home until they went to war, but according to this girl who handles a lot of the messages, even those who have been married for several years will send the first message to "mom". And often it is a "you-to-laugh place, they'll burst out that they want the telegram signed "mommy" or by their affectionate nickname which is strictly and confidentially for mother's use only.

Most of the boys aren't depressed about their own condition. They are most often upset about the wounds of their friends. Those who can get around well do all they can to cheer up the boys who are worse off than they are. They don't get sympathetic and "dusky" at their own condition. They are "all jokes" and keep up an attitude of genial comradeship which helps to keep the most depressed from keeping their minds off their troubles.

RED CROSS . . . gifts

Most of the people who asked questions of this Red Cross girl are doing. But hearing the story of their activities at Christmas is enough to make most of them feel about the wounded. One who couldn't help but become more and more impressed by the story of the being done by the girls themselves, who are handling all the arrangements for bringing up the morale of the thousands of men who arrive each week.

Somehow you don't hear much about the work these Red Cross girls are doing. But hearing the story of their activities at Christmas is enough to make most of them feel about the wounded.

A couple of days before Christmas over 2,000 wounded arrived at the hospital. The girls went through the usual routine of receiving, sending messages for them, and making them feel at home. Then they went to work on the gifts for each of those 2,000 plus several thousand others who had arrived previously, stocking up on gifts each bed. After that, dozens of truckloads of presents, which had been sent in by individuals and by individuals, were opened and distributed.

And Christmas at this hospital didn't end on December 25th. For there were more thousands of wounded coming in on the Christmas day, some of whom didn't arrive until a week or two after Christmas. So, when most women were relaxing and enjoying a small family Christmas, these girls, who had thousands of gifts to open, began working Christmas night to prepare another Christmas for late arrivals. As far as public recognition is concerned, the Red Cross girls may appear to have a thankless job. But public recognition is not their way. These girls will enjoy the more lasting satisfaction of knowing that they have helped to bring returning wounded veterans will be remembered in the hearts of those men for years to come.

Census Valuable As To Nation's Economy

Many Groups Use Figures As the Basis for Activity

By AL JEDLICKA

Reaching into every rural home in the country, 26,000 enumerators are currently taking the usual five-year census, gathering statistics on population; land and building valuation; machinery worth; production expenditures; auto, truck and tractor ownership, and residential facilities such as electricity and telephones.

Specially trained, these enumerators are nice enough people, but why go through the trouble of giving them all of the voluminous information?

There's a good reason. All the information the enumerators collect is put at the disposal of American agriculture, business or government in impersonal figures, helping them study current trends, plan operations or shape up new policies.

In recent years, scientific principles have been adopted to measure human activity with figures used to indicate buying tastes, living conditions, the economic status of individuals. Much of the new system has been stimulated by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the U. S. Department of Commerce, which has taken the lead not only in the compilation but also the distribution of such important data.

As a result of this developing scientific principle, present day censuses are a far cry from the original one taken in 1790, which was merely a distribution of such important data.

In 1940, for instance, the census was taken on a moving, listing information valuable to the building industry; on retail business, showing the extent of purchasing power and demand for products in certain areas; and on manufacturing, providing makers of machinery with production with sales possibilities.

Letters received by the Bureau of Commerce indicate the uses to which such vital information is put:

A chamber of commerce used the data for the purpose of determining the effect of improvement of highways on urban areas and how that might affect the territory served by their railroad.

A transportation company made considerable use of census data in studying present conditions of the territory served by their railroad.

because operators deal with "movable, or liquid, products which result in frequent readjustments. Business concerns seek to keep its material up to date, drawing upon the census population figures to do so. During the war, this task has been greatly enhanced by the complicated equipment required rationing, with the sugar registration, for instance, affording an accurate check on population.

In addition, the Bureau of Commerce develops many special studies on the economic aspects of the census. At the present time it puts out no less than 30 pamphlets advising business and industry of the different businesses they may intend to enter after the war. Recently, it has provided business men and others with valuable information for the foundation of postwar activity.

Generally, the Bureau of Commerce's figures are broken down into larger districts, but information on counties is more complete, thus affording a closer check on economic conditions for business and other purposes.

"Information may be had for free," says Frank Wells, of the Chicago office declared.

Newspaper Meetings Are Called Off

COLUMBUS—Annual convention of the Ohio Newspaper association and the silver anniversary celebration of the Buckeye Press association, scheduled for Feb. 8 and 9, have been called off, it is announced by R. B. Howard, president of ONA and publisher of the Madison Press, London.

The action was in keeping with recent requests from Washington that conventions be discontinued in the interest of the war effort.

Although the convention has been dropped, judging in the annual Osman C. Hooper Weekly Newspaper Show will proceed as scheduled. Possibly the latest of the copies yet ordered by Howard says, are now in the hands of the judges and the winners in ten classes will be announced in early February. Those not awarded certificates will receive confidential criticisms of their papers.

The fifteenth anniversary of the Buckeye Press, weekly group, will observe the anniversary under conditions permit, according to Howard.

This Week in WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C. (OWNS)—Sub-judice is still debated if Congress is right now is that of determining how to get the military and a half million which army and navy officials are now in the hands of the enemy. Because of the heavy losses in Europe the rate of induction must immediately be accelerated.

The most likely method will be that of drafting all physically fit men between the ages of 18 and 20, even though such a plan would, at least temporarily, seriously impair the production of war production. The army insists that it must have young men. Spoken for by the army make it clear that older men might be trained for war work and for farming, but could not ever be a soldier.

The chances are that certain white-collar men on our home farms and in war factories will be deferred for a time, but it is not clear how long that will be. TRIBUTE TO MRS. ARMINA LATTNER

Mrs. Grace Wolfesberger received a check from Ralph B. Hunter of Cleveland, with the request that it be given to the Women's Missionary Society in memory of Mrs. Armina Lattner. He says in his letter: "Since she had a deep and abiding interest in the Lutheran church, I want to recognize it in this fashion. I like the practice of our Jewish friends, who send money in cases like this, instead of sending flowers in memory of the dead. To me it is much more beneficial and realistic to remember those who are left behind, especially when it happens to be an institution or organization which the deceased had been associated with during life."

It seemed perfectly natural that Ralph would express his sympathy to Mrs. Lattner's two sons, in this memorial for their mother.

Ralph's own mother, the late Mrs. Jennie Hunter, although a resident of Cleveland for many years, never forgot her association with the Women's Missionary Society in Shiloh and reared her children to reverence the work in the church.

This will be an enduring tribute which will be recorded in the books of the Society for an inspiration for the young people of the future.

It's Done With Checks

Many a man's rise in business traces from building a substantial checking account.

Known to have money, things "came his way." His strong checking account enabled him to take advantage of one opportunity after another, each adding to his growing financial standing and business interests.

during the last quarter when their opponents held a one point lead. But the local boys started hitting the hoop again, soon erasing the lead and serving through with a 32-29 victory. Berberick and Ream led the scoring for Plymouth with 13 and 7 points, respectively. Snyder was high man for the visitors.

The Plymouth Reserves had a much easier time than the varsity coming through with a 20-13 victory. After the first quarter Plymouth led 5-1 and there was little doubt as to the outcome. The Reserves are clicking together better each game and should continue to increase their victories. Kennedy and Fenner dropped in the most points for Plymouth while Risner was high for New Haven.

Local Lads Drop Two At Belleville

Too much Ritter, star center of the Belleville Blue Jays, proved to be the difference between victory and defeat last Friday night at Belleville. Ritter scored 24 points, equalling the total points scored by the entire Plymouth team, as our boys went down to defeat 46-24. Ritter, without a doubt, is one of the finest basketball players in this and a good many other counties. Controlling the rebounds almost at will, working smoothly in the pivot position on offense, and stopping numerous shots by our boys, Ritter was the spark plug of the Blue Jays. Plymouth, although outplayed, never let up and in fact were outscored only four points the last half. Berberick and Scott shared scoring honors for Plymouth. We need remembering who was high for Belleville.

The local Reserves really lost a heart-breaker in the last fifteen seconds. Plymouth out-played their opponents all through the game, but for some reason there seemed to be a lid on the basket during the last half. Shot after shot would start to go through the hoop but then would never bounce out. As a result they scored only two points the entire last half.

New Hope for Missing Airman

E. B. Miller received a clipping the past week taken from a newspaper at Wapakoneta, O., which raises the hopes of the Miller family that Major William Miller, reported missing since last February, may be a prisoner of war.

In view of the reports previously received from his officers, the hope is very slight, but confirmation by the war department, has never been made and the hope still lingers.

In the article reprinted below, both young men mentioned were members of Major Miller's squadron on the same mission, and both reported missing about the same time. Stranger things have happened, and the family is pinning their hope and faith on such meager items as this:

"Mr. and Mrs. Oscar R. Voorhees, Wapakoneta, have received word from Mrs. Elsie Brenneman of Des Moines, Iowa, that she has had word from her son, S-Sgt. Robt. Brenneman, saying that he is a German prisoner."

"S-Sgt. Brenneman was on the same Liberator that S-Sgt. Ralph Voorhees, son of Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees, was on."

"This is the second crew member who was on the Liberator and who has been reported a prisoner. Lt. L. J. Samsa Chisholm, Minn., was the other one, and gives rise to the hope that Ralph Voorhees may eventually turn up in a prison camp."

"S-Sgt. Voorhees has been missing since February of last year. His parents were notified March 19 that he was missing. S-Sgt. Voorhees was radioman on the B-24 Liberator. The ship was on a bombardment mission to Steyr, Austria, from Italy. His plane was seen falling near Weis, Germany, about 12:10 p. m., on Feb. 23."

LETTERS FROM OUR BOYS

Dear Tommy:

Just a line or two to tell you that I read in your paper all about the bad weather up there. I always knew that the little old town of Plymouth would be out from. I think it was nice of all the people in Plymouth to help out in that bad storm.

Well, Tommy, I am still in this grand place of Gordon Johnson, Fla. I guess you all think that Florida is a nice place to be in during the winter, but just come to this place once, we all love it like 777. We don't have any snow but we sure have lots of sand; that is a lot worse than snow I think. I sure will be glad to get back to good old Plymouth, some day I hope. I sure enjoy your paper of Plymouth. I will see you some day, we all hope.

Takes Trip On Iran Railroad

T-Sgt. D. C. Slessman who has been in the service three years, writes an interesting letter of his trip by rail over in Andimesk, Iran, to his brother Neil Slessman, Rfd, Plymouth. That trip would certainly be one for Ripley and we know our readers will be interested in it too.

Dear Neal and Family:

We are doing a little traveling as you will notice by the heading. I wish we were on our way home but I don't think we are. We had a ride over what we are calling is the most unusual railroad in the world. It seems to me that there is more of it underground than there is on top. It's almost like a gopher hole. Just comes up once in a while to look around and get a little air. In 136 miles there are 135 tunnels and some of them are over a mile long. One spot you can see the entrance to 5 different tunnels, all on different levels. It should be written down in history as one of the most wonderful engineering feats ever performed. By all these tunnels you will know that it's pretty rugged country. Early this morning we came through some pretty heavy snow. Tonight we are in a place that is just about like April at home. The whole country is so barren

JANUARY 14-31

Last summer America experienced the second worst epidemic of infantile paralysis in its history.

The disease attacked weak and strong alike, invading the richest and poorest homes in the nation.

Your dimes and dollars, supporting The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, made it possible to render expert care and treatment to all polio victims, regardless of age, race, creed or color.

Many of these thousands of new victims will need care for months, years, some perhaps for a lifetime.

Next summer America must be prepared to meet whatever epidemic emergencies may arise.

Support the Fund-Raising Appeal in your locality and send your dimes and dollars to President Roosevelt at The White House.

of anything that I don't see how the people live. I guess they don't live...they just exist. There's plenty of them too. Any place you go. We've been here before, but this is the first time we traveled by rail.

I'm sorry I didn't get to write before. I have a picture to send you, but I don't have it with me. I'll get it in the mail as soon as I can. I can't say just when that will be.

I hope everybody had a good Christmas and will have a good New Year ahead. This New Year should see the end of the war with Germany. That is if the Allies get any breaks at all. Otherwise it can last indefinitely. We certainly don't want that. Here's hoping anyway. This war does seem so unnecessary.

Write whenever you can.

Love,
Carl

Christmas In Germany

The following V-Mail letter was not received locally, but it does give an idea of how a great many of our boys on the western front spent Christmas. It is far cry from the glitter and tinsel known to most American homes at Christmas time and where in a great many homes the most flimsy excuses were used for not attending church services for the ONE whose birthday was observed.

Dear Grandma: Merry Christmas and Happy New Year from somewhere in Germany. Wish you would pass this letter to Mom and Dad.

Went to church on Christmas or rather the church came to us. The chaplain set up his altar underneath a tree and we gathered around, not too close together, because a shell might land and get us.

We were a motley looking bunch. No shaves for three or four days, clothes dirty and torn, jumping up a hymn book to warm our feet, a hymn book in one hand, rifle in the other. On our laps a corsage of hand grenades plus some in our belt. Church in combat! Love, Pat.

Home Is Great, Say Soldier.

Away Thirty Months

There is no place like home. That is the conclusion reached by hundreds of thousands of American young men who have gone overseas with the armed forces and Staff Sergeant Richard Shepherd's sentiments are no exception.

Sergeant Shepherd is home in Plymouth and Shelby on a 30-day furlough from Italy after having been overseas 30 months. He will return to his job in the administrative office of a U. S. heavy bomber base in Italy whose Flying Fortresses take off for missions over enemy territory farther north.

Dick had been in the Mediterranean theatre since he landed at Oran in December, 1942. Planes from his base did some of the most precise pinpoint bombing of the war to rout the Germans out of Tunis and Algiers. From there he went to Italy.

Like other returning Yanks he expresses a new appreciation of the American standard of living. Filth and poverty are reflected in the habits of a large percentage of the natives.

"Greatest trouble in these countries seems to be lack of education and opportunity for learning," Shepherd asserted. "The natives have been pushed around so much they have lost concern over who is governing them at the time being. They seem to welcome whoever feeds them."

The practice of American soldiers in feeding camps to children in liberated regions was heartily received by the natives, who accepted the generosity as an indication the Yanks had lots of money.

"First Yanks into a liberated town usually were able to purchase articles quite reasonably. But as soon as the natives found out what the Americans wanted, prices skyrocketed. A woman's purse sold as high as $80. There is no ceiling on Italian merchants."

The old Roman ruins at Carthage and elsewhere in the liberated Mediterranean area tell of a civilization existing several centuries ago that must have been superior in many ways to that found in parts of that same region today. The engineering skill still in evidence is marvelous. Shepherd said. Sewers hewn out of stone were laid underground and there still remains parts of an underground aqueduct that carried water for many miles.

Especially impressive is the mosaic that involved the most intricate and delicate workmanship. These mosaic walls have been largely unmolested by the Germans and Americans or any of the preceding armies that have waged battles over the historic land.

The most beautiful sight I saw overseas was a field of blooming red poppies last Spring that covered several square miles in Algeria," he said.

Dick has a scrapbook that "some day" will be invaluable to him. Included are pictures of harvesting small grain in Algeria. Techniques vary from the cradle to quite modern combines, many of American make.

Here's one for Richland county farmers: It is a reaper with an eight-foot cut that is pushed by eight horses hitched behind the machine. The cut grain is carried up a table to a height of some nine feet and dropped into a huge bag that reaches nearly to the ground, and with a drawstring at the bottom. A man walks along beside the bag and at intervals releases the draw string and deposits the cut grain in a pile.

Among Dick's souvenirs are a key-wind watch he got from an Arab for a few cigarettes and an American-made cigaret lighter from a German prisoner of war. Dick is the son of Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Shepherd of Plymouth. He was formerly employed by the Shelby Salesbook Company—The Shelby Globe.

THE BEAUTIFUL SNOW

Here in this part of the world King winter comes and summers go, There's nothing quite so pure and white As a blanket of "Beautiful Snow".

This beauty is widespread and everywhere No matter where you look On housetops, trees and fence posts, Hill, vale and every nook.

We used to love to see it fall When we were kids you know, Never too cold and stormy for us, To sled on the "Beautiful Snow".

We'd stay right out 'till we were blue Troubles then we did not borrow,

We, with our sleds, would head for home Hoping for more snow tomorrow.

In this modern age, we travel fast,

Just think we can't go slow, There's nothing that will change our minds, Like a fall of the "Beautiful Snow".

Sometimes it falls for days and days, The drifts are piled up high, Our modern stuff just will not work,

No use to give up and cry, What makes a brighter picture Than a cover of snow so white?

Many there are, who have never seen, "Beautiful Snow" on a moonlight night.

Around the Square

FROM THE way the Russians are moving in on Berlin, it looks as though "Winnie" and E. D. E. won't have so much to say at the Peace table!

IF YOU want to get rich quick mix up a formula that will keep hair from growing! The underground tells me that Barbershops are going to increase their prices around the first of February. Oh, well, the barbers have to pay taxes, and more for food. Just because their job is simply giving a shave and a haircut doesn't indicate they don't have to pay for living. And even at that Plymouth barbers have been low in price for years, while neighboring towns have had a higher income for some time!

DO YOU ever stop to think of the "good old days" when you could get what you wanted, instead of taking what you can get?

VERNA RAE SMITH has such a "forlorn" look these days. Wonder if it could be a "boy friend" far, far away!

A NUMBER of our readers down in Florida will be interested in knowing that the Loflands, F. B. Blanche and Pete, have survived the severe winter here so far, but Blanche says she is certain they won't spend another one up north. She tells me that Pat Chappel is still in the sign business down at Lake Worth, and going strong. What do the signs say Pat? Remember the bridge on route 91? It's still there, but we'll never be the same. How would some of you former Plymouthites like to buy a few of our oranges at 90 and 95 cents per dozen? They're real nice to look at, but a little tough eating at that price, don't you think?

ALTHOUGH ten days later the March of Dimes campaign were received Wednesday afternoon in Plymouth and Mrs. Mabel McFadden will again act as chairman. Your cooperation in patronizing the campaign is asked and the containers will be placed in business houses around the Square.

NOW SHOWING SELECTION OF "STAMP FREE" SHOES

If you are hard up for that extra shoe stamp, you'll be interested in knowing that the Plymouth Shoe Store is now showing a line of women's "No Stamp" Shoes. Harold Cashman, proprietor, says that despite the critical shoe situation, he has been able to secure a very good assortment of shoes which he thinks the women of this community will be interested in.

Mr. Cashman also points out that he has added new brands of men's shoes to his stock, which he believes will be appreciated by the man who wants a good pair of shoes at a reasonable price. "While we cannot get everything we want," says Mr. Cashman, "we are fortunate in securing reliable shoes from well known manufacturers, and we believe the styles and quality we are offering are the best that can be had by any shoe store."

BELLEVUE TO GROW

Announcement has recently been made that the Nickel Plate railroad is to spend an approximate two million dollars for the improvement of yards in Bellevue. It has also been made public that a $2,000,000 soybean processing plant is to be put into operation in Lyme-tp just adjoining the east Bellevue city limits. These two projects will give Bellevue two good reasons for expansion and growth.

85 Ohioans Celebrate With Standard Oil Co.

In eighty-five homes in Ohio on January 10 there was a three-decker birthday cake, decorated with seventy-five candles.

This cake was sent as a birthday gift by the Standard Oil company (Ohio) to residents of the state who celebrate their 75th birthday on the same day that Standard Oil celebrated its 75th birthday—January 10.

In reaching this number the company found fifteen more people of that exact age than insurance actuaries figured would be forthcoming. Statistics showed that at the time of the last census Ohio had approximately 162,000 citizens who were 75 years of age or older. Of this number insurance actuaries estimated there would be seventy of the state's 7,000,000 population, who had been born on January 10, 1870.

The 21 Schio birthday parties held in Standard Oil operating centers were attended by more than 20,000 employees, their families and friends.
