Tuesday Important for Polio

Poeless Tells Mothers Child 'Natural Poet' Rhyming Helpul

Mary Ansapich Simon of Shelby spoke before the Mothers' club Tuesday evening at its regular April meeting.

Mrs. Simon, well known for her poems, which appear regularly in one larger newspaper, gave a highly entertaining talk, "Unraveling U with Poetry," for which she used her own poems as the background.

She spoke of how she became interested in writing poetry, a natural thing for young children. Her father used to keep his children awake by reciting lullabies with gestures instead of lulling them to sleep with something more quiet. Mrs. Simon said that "the creation of art begins with a 'poet' and once an idea presents itself, it is sometimes necessary to search for background material to complete the idea. She used as an example a poem called "Aboutness Zevo" for which she had the thought but needed to know who was responsible to adding the zero-in words. After reading two volumes, she found the answer.

Poeless glean their ideas from everyday happenings which make headlines, but the finished poem hardly resembles the incident which started the idea on its way. Mrs. Simon offered a piece of advice to budding poets: always write in the first person, so that a neighbor can not identify himself as the subject of the poem.

To illustrate the fact that a young child naturally can compose rhymes, she read several poems which she took in shorthand as a young child recited them. They showed vivid imagination and the ingenuity of a young mind which is natural to all children and can be further developed.

A short business meeting followed Mrs. Simon's talk. The Mothers' club voted against serving the alumni banquet. It was felt that the group had participated in enough projects for the year.

Put a red ring around Tuesday's date. It's Apr. 12, and the whole world will know whether last year's polio shots were any good.

The National Infantile Paralysis foundation will announce Tuesday the results of the controlled Salk vaccine tests administered to school pupils in 1954. If the results are favorable, Salk vaccine will be administered to first and second grade pupils, with parental consent, in the near future.

Mrs. Ardella Starks, Richland county visiting nurse, says response of parents in Plymouth schools is above the county average.

Why are only first and second graders given the shots? Because they are the most susceptible group.

Why is no control vaccine given? The control vaccine was given in 1954 to afford scientists a means of establishing the efficacy of the serum. If the report Tuesday is a good one, there will no longer be any need for control vaccine, a harmless, sugared dosage.

Will the shots be painful? Aside from the initial slight pain deriving from the prick of the needle, no pain is usual. Some pupils reported a headache and other disagreeable symptoms after receiving the shots, but none was serious.

Who will give the shots? Trained medical personnel will administer the shots under aseptic conditions.

Why is parental consent necessary? Any treatment of a child by other than the family doctor normally requires the consent of the parent except in instances of emergency. Some parents have religious scruples against vaccination, while others are not convinced of the efficacy of the Salk vaccine.

Is there any charge for the shots? The shots are free.

Park Board Plans New Fence in 1955

Plymouth's park board will meet next week to consider plans for the opening of Mary Kate park. It is understood the board will request the village council for an additional transfer of funds with which to accomplish needed repairs to the benches, fence, and buildings.

Teenagers 'Good', Judge Tells Club

"The 1955 crop of teenagers is well-adjusted and doing a fine job of coping with its environment," Kuchland County Juvenile Court Judge Stuart H. Cramer said. He is to emphasize the character-building agencies such as the Sunday school, the Girl and Boy Scouts, the Y. M. C. A. and the 4-H groups.

"I seldom have a boy or girl in trouble who has a history of a close church affiliation or character-building organization connection," Judge Cramer said.

"Last year I failed on 18 cases, five girls and 13 boys who had to go to the industrial school, perhaps because we didn't have enough time to 'get through' to them."

Traffic offenses make up the principal number of juvenile offenses, which run to about 245 juveniles among every 100. Other traffic offenses, Judge Cramer said, and the figure drops to below two.

"We should certainly be severe with offenders in crimes of violence, but I have found that patience and understanding generally

Sproles Resigns At Board's Wish

BULLETIN
Supt. of Light and Power Lincoln Sproles turned in his resignation to the village offices yesterday morning, it was learned last night.

He had been detained out of town for some time.

Supt. of Light & Power Lincoln Sproles was fired by the Board of Public Affairs Monday night.

The Board voted unanimously to ask Sproles to hand in his resignation, failing which Mayor Glenn West would be authorized to discharge him.

John Kline, Willard, appeared before the Board voluntarily to clarify his status with respect to his trade union. He said he had notified his union and his employer prior to his acceptance of part-time work with the village and had received their authorization. He reiterated his statement that save for two hours he has not worked for the village since Decoration day last year, when he worked on a transformer on the Richland county side of the village.

The trade union is aware that its members engage in extra work. Mr. Kline said, and has no objection so long as the work does not obstruct a contractor from obtaining work.

He said he wished to cooperate wholly with the Board but did not wish to allow any thought that he may himself be guilty of dishonesty to impair currency. He emphasized that he has not accepted employment with the village for nearly a year, except for two hours as a transformer in front of the Plymouth theatre building, despite several requests by Sproles that he do so.

President Francis Burrer was absent from the meeting and Donald J. Levering was elected acting president. The motion to demand Sproles' resignation came from George W. Cheesman, and was promptly seconded by Mr. Levering.

The Board has already made inquiry respecting the availability and qualifications of a prospective successor to Sproles, and hopes to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Meanwhile, handwriting experts in Cleveland are going over checks allegedly endorsed by Kline and others which they deny having signed. Huron County Prosecutor Bernard Freeman heads the investigation and will take criminal action before the grand jury if the evidence warrants.

The Ceiling Fell In!

The composing room ceiling fell down Tuesday afternoon, and as a result the advertising copy of Miller's Hardware & Supply and Mac's Clover Farm Market are slightly imperfect.

When the plaster fell, it marred the castings of advertising mats, and before the bewildered staff could pull it together, the original cardboard mats were also damaged.

It is hoped the reader will not be inconvenienced by this unforeseen incident, and that the advertisers will appreciate the extraordinary circumstances which caused the damage.

Council Votes to Limit Business Area Parking

Two hour parking will become effective in the business section shortly, the village council decided Tuesday night, authorizing the preparation of an ordinance to that effect and the purchase of traffic signs to inform motorists of the restrictions.

The limits will be effective from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Sundays and holidays, and the police force has been directed to enforce the ordinance as soon as it is in effect.

Teenagers 'Good', Judge Tells Club

The council passed unanimously a resolution authorizing the payment from public funds of local telephone charges on telephones connected with the private homes of the mayor, the street supervisor, the police chief and the superintendent of light and power and his assistant. The resolution was made necessary, the council was told, because the present assistant, Paul Reeder, cannot obtain domestic telephone service upon his own application. He is to emphasize the character-building agencies such as the Sunday school, the Girl and Boy Scouts, the Y. M. C. A. and the 4-H groups.

"I seldom have a boy or girl in trouble who has a history of a close church affiliation or character-building organization connection," Judge Cramer said.

The club voted unanimously, on motion of J. E. Nimmons, to ask business houses to close tomorrow between noon and 2 p.m. to allow employees and others to attend Good Friday services.

No collection or solicitation of the community will be conducted, the club decreed, but notice in this manner will be considered sufficient.

Mark M. Nimmons said, and the Peoples National bank will close between noon and 2 p.m.

Entered at the Post Office at Plymouth, Ohio, as second class mail matter under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

As newspaper people, we are compelled to note with some sadness the departure of two experts of the craft. Joseph Pulitzer, successor of his illustrious father as editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, were successful newspapermen who built great newspapers and exerted vast influence over the lives of millions of people.

As a technician, it is always sad to note the departure of skilled craftsmen. But it is not enough to judge a man as technician. We must penetrate his fiber to see if he was a man.

By this standard, Joseph Pulitzer comes off well. So well, in fact, that even the undertaker must have been sad to see him go. He was a militant leader for right and good in a day when right and good were suborned by evil and wrong. Readers of his newspaper are today living the better life in large part because he had the courage to lash out against the forces that shackled the people. The Post-Dispatch won four Pulitzer prizes despite the terms of the earlier Joseph Pulitzer's will that the rules should be suspended and made more difficult for his own paper to win.

The nation's loss in the death of Joe Pulitzer is a great loss, and we join with the millions of people who know and respect the Post-Dispatch in mourning his death. He was a good newspaperman. A good newspaperman means a good citizen.

And by the same token, Robert McCormick was a bad newspaperman. He gave the people not what was the truth, but what he thought they ought to know, to read, and to believe. The record of his support of the America First cause, of his backing of the Vern Marshalls and the George Sylvester Vierecks and the pre-1941 Arthur Vandenberg is indelibly written in the pages of the Tribune.

It is an unfortunate truism of American life that had newspapermen make money, and McCormick certainly did. That vast tower which houses his newspaper is the most notorious brothel in the great city of Chicago: it houses the thousands of honest men who have been prostituted by the McCormick style of journalism.

One need only read the Tribune to see what that style is, and to take pity upon the millions of Chicagoans who dine upon those lotus leaves each morning and are lulled into a false security and an even falser line of action.

No, we are not sad that McCormick is dead. And we know enough Tribune men to hope that in time the Tribune will come to be the newspaper that the Post-Dispatch became because it was founded and operated upon the three cardinal principles of a good newspaperman: truth, honesty of purpose, and a belief in the right of the common man.

"THAT LITTLE GAME" Interview! Carlson Co., N.Y.—By B. Link

Period Play Well Done, Watts Says

BY BROOKS WATTS
Members of the cast presented the director of "Gown of Glory," Supt. M. J. Coon, with a gift between the second and third acts at the high school Friday night. One hopes that it was a suitable recognition of what must have been an arduous task.

To have undertaken a period play was ambitious, both for director and for the cast, and all things considered the players and their coach brought it off exceptionally well.

It is usual for high school students to select a farce or a broad comedy for their vehicle, and to have chosen a serious drama is both unusual and pleasant. It contributes, after all, to one of the two main reasons for high school dramatics: to afford students an opportunity to develop poise and ease in public.

The success of the director and of his assistants in costumeing was the highlight of the evening, so far as this reviewer goes, despite the fact that there were some very capital performances. The beautiful gown worn by Larry Vanadale as the delivery man was a delight to behold, and the costumes worn by the female characters were certainly authentic in every way. Probably in no large community could such items of the Victorian era be found in such a fine condition.

Even the stage furniture (where did they ever find that monstrosity of an arm chair?) fitted in suitably with the decor.

The play was carried chiefly by the role of Rev. David Lyall, capably and energetically enacted by young Nelson Roberts. He appears in all scenes, and on Friday night he carried himself well, with a grasp of the fundamentals of drama and a growing sense of power over his role. At first, as was to be expected, he encountered what may have been case of stage fear, but he quickly mastered it and as the evening wore on he projected himself further into the character of the country parson.

In much of his action he was capably supported by Patricia Chronister as Mary, his wife. The casting of James Brown as Jeremy Lyall was an admirable choice. He conducted himself with aplomb, and showed himself completely at home in the role. He is a handsome chap, and the lines assigned him by the author fitted in with the character he portrayed and with his own character, as the audience knows it, as well.

C. Otis Port played the role of Ninian Ross, the harum-scarum son of the millionaire father who by happenstance becomes smitten with the Rev. Mr. Lyall's daughter, Lucy, enacted by Carol Cobb. Both young Port and Miss Cobb comported themselves in fine fashion, and the whole character of the play was suitable in the extreme. Port's costumes were exceptional, and what Miss Cobb lacked in opportunity to wear exceptional period attire she more than made up for with a fine performance personally.

Bernard Garrett played the role of Dillard, a clerk who is time serves to a church wedding with Minnie Masters, played by Nancy Barbour. Garrett is a genuine actor, and his performance Friday was almost that fine. The lines given him by the dramatist were not easy to turn, and he was a credit to himself, considering the task. One feels he would have done a creditable job of the country parson.

M. Pearl Lomas as Faith Lyall

Two of the characters of "Gown of Glory," annual senior class play, are shown here in a bit of "after the play" histrionics. Sue Helbig played Peggy, much taken with Jeremy Lyall, played capably by James Brown. A crowd of about 350 attended.

was well cast, and although her role allowed for few histrionics, she did so well in it that one found one's self thinking of her as Faith rather than as Miss Lomas. This is the secret of the drama.

Bill Ellis appeared briefly as John Harvey, a ruddy, non-too-intelligent farmer smitten with Faith, and did a very satisfactory job.

Miss Barbour as Minnie Masters, Sue Helbig as Peggy McDonald, Howard Compton as Colonel Harrison, Betty Reed as Mrs. Mary, and Janet Smith as Mrs. Bellamy had minor roles which were enacted satisfactorily; it is difficult to star in a role that is not cut out as star material.

A word need be said about two minor characterizations which were, to this occupant of a seat on the aisle, exceptionally well done. Alice Muma as Mrs. Crombie was the shrew the role called for, and her blunt characterization of a blundering bodyguard immediately drew the attention of the audience. The demure Jeannette Bettac, playing Mrs. Coates, was extremely strong in her role, and deserves credit for making much from so little.

Carol Jo Cunningham afforded some comedy relief as a "daddy" lady, and John Fox was a good type cast of the middle-aged son of the delivery man was funny, and one suspects he enjoyed the part as much as the audience.

Not until the final scene does Mrs. Ross, Ninian's mother, appear, and Marilyn Fisher acquitted herself in that difficult role with such force and style that one was tempted to hiss at her exit. She was very bit the villainess, and she projected herself into a characterization completely alien to her own experience and background. One wishes it were possible to see and hear this young lady in other characterizations, for she has real talent. Kent Knapp ably supported her as Mr. Ross.

The second major reason for high school dramatics is to afford the students a painless manner of extracting money for student activities. One is compelled to note with some candor that the hall was hardly filled.

Closet for Linens
DRAWERS built into an ordinary closet to make of it a handy linen closet are a feature of the plan illustrated. Under the shelves is room for a tank-type vacuum cleaner, adjacent to which is a portable clothes hamper.

Build the drawers according to standard construction methods, with snag-proof bottoms of 3/16" Preswood. They ride easily on hardwood drawer slides.
The hamper has a spring hinged door. The bottom and front are made of Masonite "Peg-Board" panels, which provide ventilation.

Around the Square

— By Phineas Whittleseed —

I guess you not say, ever, that it doesn't pay to advertise. Our bound is back and if Mrs. E. B. Miller will call at Phil's dwelling place, he will be rewarded with 1) two kisses (one each from the kids) and 2) 215 seconds free looting of the icebox.

Mrs. M. rang us up early Friday morning and said Cookie was carousing in her pasture. Sure enough, that's what he'd done, and his waistline has receded noticeably. Considerably crestfallen, too, because he hides behind the door.

Thanks to everybody who helped us find the rascal.

And thanks too, to Robt. Meiser, who dug us out of bed early Friday to give us a news tip on an accident west of Willard. Shortly thereafter, Brooklyn Dodge fan No. 1 came in and got us help. That'd be Jas. Ryan, from whom few whomer.

C. Reseger was in with a cigar to say thanks for the publicity given the Myrus appearance in Willard. Despite the bad weather, over 400 turned out. Mrs. C. O. Cramer asked a question about her grandson's future and Myrus was plain blank about it. The boy should study music, he said.

Congrats to Robt. Dubbert, who was man enough to recognize his responsibilities to the community which has supported his band and therefore declined any bid to go the state contest at Columbus.

To prepare for the contest, he told the parents, would be to steal a week from the annual spring concert. Robbing Peter to pay Paul is never good sense, as he wisely noted. Further it is better to enter a contest when you think you have an outside chance of winning, especially when your outfit is a young one without much experience. Next year, perhaps, we can afford the luxury - not financial, but moral - of going all the way to the state contest, but this year first things come first.

Phin hears tell that a representative of the Indians, perhaps Harrison Dillard, the two-time gold medal winner in the Olympic games, will appear at the annual athletic banquet. If it is Dillard, we'll be more than satisfied. Discrimination against members of his race is all too prevalent, and if we can, we'll, in our small way, that we have no discrimination, it'll be another stone in the wall against racial discrimination.

If Dillard is the speaker, or A. J. Smith, or one of the other Negroes of the organization, we should make a special effort to show that it doesn't matter what color a man's skin is, it's what he says and does that counts.

Now if we could only get folks to stop saying "Kay Wye" as an epithet, it would be just dandy.

We've had only a few entries for the World Series ticket contest. C'mon fellows, only a week left! To win, you must correctly pick the first four finishers, in their correct order, in both American and National leagues. Just for practice, we'll give you one of our own without much experience. Next year, suggestion: National, Milwaukee, New York, Brooklyn, Cincinnati, American, New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit. (Reserving, of course, the right to change 'em before the season starts.)

The new lady around the shop these days is Miss Elsie Dosson, who's from Adario. She'll try to be helpful to one and all if you'll just smile at her.

We heard a young blade in the sody parlor say the other night, "If you don't think a guy is explosive, just try dropping one." Now that guy has a future. Dunno whether it's with women or with advertising, but either way, it should be fun.

What should happen when we are trying to get to the game with the first run of this newspaper Tuesday afternoon that the ceiling falls in. Luckily the two persons who could have been hurt had moved only an instant before. It came down like thunder, and scared the livin' bejeebers out of all of us. On top of it all, it fell into lot of type and ink, and we spent a long time cleaning it up, out, and such.

Our friend Carleton Riddle will be installed as exalted ruler of the Willard lodge, BPOE's, Thursday night. He is a deserving chap, public spirited and we like to see folks like that get somewhere.

The Willard Elks are sponsoring the Shelby lodge, and they've invited 750 figures in Eikdom to partake of the ceremonies and the feed. Two youngsters from North Fairfield, Roger and Margaret Sweeting, will be awarded $25 savings bonds for youth leadership.

Our friend Ken Thornton rises to No. 4 in the hierarchy. He will be installed as securing knight.

The Elks movement is a useful and suitable addition to social and fraternal life. The work the Elks have done on crippled kiddies deserves much praise and the number of other down-and-outs who have been helped is legion.

We Americans are a joining race, and so long as we have to join, the Elks are as good as any - probably the best. Most of our type and ink, and we spent a long time cleaning it up, out, and such.

The Shelby or the Willard lodge is by no means closed, we are told, for those who care to associate with either. Christy Weber is one local member who can tell you more about, but Christy is pretty busy these days kiting up with a sick sister. Bet this is the first time in his whole life he can tell that story and mean it.

We hope Miss Weber sees this, and knows we're rooting all right - or to come out of her unfortunate accident all right.

"If we give to the public that which they think they should have rather than what we believe is right," Winston, "then how can we later justify our work - to ourselves, to others, and to the world?"

Mothers' Club Ending
'Successful' 7th Year

Since Oct. 4, 1949, when over 100 mothers of the elementary school children were the guests of the teachers and Mrs. Ford Davis, then principal the Mothers' club has been a continuous growing group.

In 1949, when the new elementary building was completed, Mrs. Davis suggested to the assembled mothers that a group be formed to devote itself to the problems of the grade school child. Enthusiastic response greeted Mrs. Davis' suggestion officers then chosen were Mrs. H. James Root, president; Mrs. R. Earl McQuate, vice-president; Mrs. Harris Postema, secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. John Armstrong, committee chairman.

During the six years that the group has met monthly for lectures, movies, and children's programs, it has also worked on various projects. Equipment added to the elementary school building is evidence of this. One of the first projects was the purchase of a motion picture projector with a sound attachment. Through the years, hat racks, a new fence around the playground, a well equipped kitchen, and recently a collapsible table for school lunches have been added. Teas, dinners, and the selling of various items have been used to aid the group's treasury.

Mothers and teachers have become better acquainted, and both the school and mothers have worked toward good will and co-operation.

Although almost every mother has had her share of responsibility in making the group what it is today, the group has been fortunate in having at its head, mothers who have been genuinely interested in the school and their children. The second year's president was Mrs. Robert L. McIntire, followed by Mrs. Donald Fettes, Mrs. Frank Brinson, and Mrs. Charles L. Hannum, current president. The group's most important committee projects, has been ably handled by Mrs. Robert Lewis, Mrs. Donald Fettes, Mrs. Donald Akers, Mrs. Frank Brinson, Mrs. Donald Shaver, and Mrs. Robert MacMichael, the present chairman.

The group has worked closely with the P.T.A. in sponsoring dances, and the annual Spring Festival for which plans are in the making at the moment.

Handsome Easter rabbit centerpiece, designed by Kaye King, Hallmark Cards stylist, is an easy "do-it-yourself" project.

Make a Novel Decoration For Your Easter Table

Let's decorate the Easter table with a captivating centerpiece. You can fashion the illustrated figure quickly out of corrugated cardboard and decorate it inexpensively with glamorous gift wraps. The centerpiece, which also will add joy to a child's room, a mantle or a window, was designed by Kaye King, gift wrap stylist for Hallmark cards. Using two-inch squares and the pattern above, lay out the parts of the rabbit on the sides of a grocery carton or similar cardboard. Cut out the pieces with a razor blade or sharp knife. Cover the sections in colorful Easter and spring floral gift wraps, attaching the paper with glue or cellulose tape. Fit the notches together to assemble. Add pipe cleaner whiskers and a Christmas tree ornament eye. Make the rabbit's tail from quarter-inch "curl-i-que" ribbon.

Curl the ribbon by drawing it over the edge of a scissors or tableknife blade. Attach the tail with cellulose tape.

From two-inch wide satin ribbon, fashion a large bow tie and affix it to the rabbit's neck. Tuck a gay Easter card—one shaped like the decorated Easter egg by Hallmark, as shown in the photograph, is especially appropriate—in the slot in the rabbit's hands to complete the job. Place the centerpiece on the holiday table and surround it with the Easter cards the family has received for an added touch of beauty and color.

Hair Styling . . .
The most important rule in hair styling is never to conform, to the shape of your face, except the oval. Repetition of the same shape in your hair style will only exaggerate the shape of your face. The long face should use a low or no part at all with fullness at the sides; the short face should use an off-center part with a high and low point — smooth at the sides.

Fishing Expert Advises Care of Paraphernalia

So bear these things in mind: Probably the most expensive part of your truck is your body, and it therefore deserves special attention. Since it has most likely been lying around all winter, it may more likely be accumulating dirt than it is getting through cleaning is necessitated. Disassemble the outer housing by removing all exterior screws. Be sure to keep the screws together or to simply assemble them. The principal areas for consideration are the main gears, the line guide track, and in spinning reels, the shaft and the bail. Wash the entire light grease on the spool, and the

that is worn. If you have nylon backing, or monofilament, you needn't worry about rot, but this simply doesn't occur to any degree in those lines.

Make sure your plugs and lines are clean. Plugs are sharp, fasteners are tight, and in good shape. Touch up paint whenever needed, and tie down loose threads and bangles. This probably will do more to keep your truck looking like new and increase preservation. The fish will not notice it.

Scrutinize rod handle grips, since loose cork can be very annoying to the fisherman. Replace damaged ferrules and guides.

'Better Grass Needed,' --Stumps

Young Charles Stump farms 100 acres of the nearly 800 owned by his father, Tom, and right now he's fattening about 50 white faces.

From his experience on the farm, where he's lived nearly three years, he's concluded that a better grass is needed in this area before grass fattening of young steers will become really profitable.

"That's why we're going to sow birdsfoot trefoil this spring," says young Charles Stump. "They say it grows faster and it has more nourishment in it. The blue grass that is native around here kind of works like shredded wheat. The steers eat it all day and night, but you're lucky if you can put 100 pounds on a steer during the whole summer on grass."

The Stumps have never before tried to improve the grass crops by better seed. They've followed the usual rotation program and they've enriched the soil by manuring it heavily. "Folks say we manure too much, but we've never had a crop go down on us," says Mr. Stump.

Their feeder operation represents an investment of nearly $20,000 in young steers alone. They hunt them up in Virginia and Tennessee and find that it's cheaper for them to seek out quality steers in those regions and transport them to their Crawford and Huron county spreads than it is to buy them locally.

"Figure that a good young steer costs you $50 or $55, and you sell him after you've fattened him for about $200. That leaves about $150 over what you paid for him. Some $50 of it goes in vet care, cost of supplement feed and such, so you've got $100 a steer out of which you've got to pay yourself and your interest."

A steer will lose maybe 25 pounds in weight the first 100 miles he's transported, the young Crawford farmer says, and thereafter loss of weight is negligible. Particularly does weight loss occur when the steers have been lately taken off grass.

The wheat quota for the entire Stump holdings is a bit over 115 acres. "That's all we'd raise anyway, we never needed much more than that," says Charles Stump, pointing out that the wheat restrictions are more hurtful to the small fellow than the large one.

The entire operation feeds its own stock except for the amount of supplement needed to enrich the steers' diet. This includes special supplement meal and some cottonseed mix from time to time. "Alfalfa and clover around principal grass crops and we get three cuts a year on the alfalfa and some times three cutting a year on clover. You don't get a good grass crop - whether alfalfa or clover - just plain pasture grass, I don't care - unless you feed your ground. We figure on spreading 400 pounds of fertilizer an acre to enrich the ground, and besides which we manure heavily."

Since the Stumps have owned the place, which they bought from the Ed Berger estate, they've not done much to the house - it didn't need that much - but they've spent a good bit on the barn. Last year, they installed some eight-inch reinforced concrete to the tune of $600 as a splash basin from which to haul manure from the stock pens in the barn.

"This is our only barn without a concrete floor. Notice we've sorted out the fatter ones and have them on this side of the barn, and the thinner ones are on the other side, where they have more room to feed and roam around."

What prompts a man to sell his beef? "Mostly he needs cash," says Charles Stump. "Then too he may figure prices are up so high he'd better take advantage of it. Yes, you don't buy these steers to hold for a lifetime, and there's something about a steer you've got to remember: they're no good for breeding."
