Write it out best policy for village

A new administration will assume responsibilities for management of the village on Jan. 1, even though the greater part of the functionaries merely change chairs.

There is much to be done

This is a formal society. Whether it's business or government, you just can't get by with verbal understandings any more.

The complex business of administering any sort of business, whether private or public, demands that rules and regulations be reduced to writing, so that managers and employees can see them, study them, know what they're expected to do and what's demanded of them.

The greatest service any village administration can render the ctizenry is to perform this duty.

It's also the greatest boon to criticism-free administration, too. When the citizen knows what the rules are, what the policy is, he is less likely to carp about what's done.

We dislike the proliferation of paperwork as much as anybody and considerably more than some. We are now, and have always been, opposed to big government. We have no wish to build a mountain of

But it is high time the ordinances of the village are brought up to date, under one cover.

The rules governing the use of utilities need to be set down, once and for all, for the guidance of the user and of the board of public affairs.

Regulations applicable to the police, street and fire departments need to be written down for employees, supervisors, contractors with the village and the

To implement these recommendations requires but little expense. We are not promoting a printing contract, We would not be interested in any such contract at any time.

Services of technical personnel are not necessary, save for routine review. The rules and regulations should be drafted by elective and appointive officers of the village, They may even be submitted for a

But they need to be done. They need to be done

Correspondence for the military

Military personnel cherish letters from home. At Christmas time especially, they like to hear from oved ones, friends and neighbors and school chums

We're always gled to publish news items as to where these young men — and women — are assigned.

And we think they are entitled to some privacy. Which is why we state that Sergeant James Doakes is assigned to Co. A, 748th Tank Battalion, Ft. Hood. Tex., and no more.

Sergeant Doakes puts a much more detailed adess on his correspondence. This may, or may not, ssist postal locator personnel at his station.

But it also assists unscrupulous persons who do ot know Sergeant Doakes and have no care about im save to put his name on some mailing list, to end him promotional material, to try to induce him p pay for merchandise he doesn't want and didn't rder, to use his name, rank and serial number, oranization and station, to raise checks, pass bad hecks and otherwise cause him headache and heart-che.

We don't think Sergeant Doakes is entitled to uch treatment. And since we can't govern the char-cher or intent of those who may read, subscribe to or urchase the newspaper, we do what the military ays is right: we say where he is (and where mail ill reach him) but we do not reveal the specifics of formation that could be — indeed, sometimes is, ed to his detriment.

Those who are friends of the Sergeant may call family to obtain the detailed address if they at it. Correspondence addressed to him at "Co. A, ant it. Correspondence Library and the state of the state to 51 Johnny Appleseed con-ference win over Plymouth. It was a plain case of no de-fense against the big man. Phil Fletcher's, Hoyt's defend-er, measures 72 inches exactly. Hoyt missed as many shots as he scored. Even so, he sat out most of the second period.

At basketball it's 31. For 76-inch sophomore Bob Hoyt stuffed that many markers through the hoop at Butler Friday night to lead Clear Fork's Colts to a thumping 70

Erryl Eyster, with a marvel-ously light touch with a push shot, scored 22, the only other Colt in double figures.

FOR THEBIG RED. FOR THEBIG RED, which did not play at all well, Fletcher bagged 26 points. Plymouth got little or no help in any fashion from its back court men and Gunner Young had another bad night. It was the third straigth defeat for Plymouth, which rallied slightly to come within a point of the Colts after eight minutes but was never again close. For the Colts, the victory was the second against three defeats.
