The Voice of The Advertiser - Bigger schools?

Why do small schools have to be defended, an educator asks.

He says it is a plain fact that large, "uncontrollable" schools have the large problems. As pupil numbers increase arithmetically, school problems increase geometrically, he says. Small schools do not spend so much per pupil as large schools, therefore they can't be more costly.

Small schools escape the added expense of vandalism, more police protection and more supervisory personnel, he says, so that what is spent goes toward education, not house-keeping.

Graduates of small schools, he claims, are competing successfully in college, business and industry with graduates of large schools. The pupil in the small school is made to feel secure as a person, the educator says, not as a number. This fact assures him identity and reduces problems for the small school system and for society as a whole.

Finally, the small school has a better attendance record than the large school because pupils are more closely checked.

What brings this all on is a proposal by Governor Gilligan to force consolidation of small school districts by reducing state aid per pupil by 10 percent in districts having less than 2,000 pupils enrolled.

We agree with most of his statements. We quarrel with that which implies that graduates of small schools initially compete on an even basis at the college level with graduates of large schools; it is simply not so, in our experience.

But we have news for the educator: Ohio's General Assembly is not about to buy trouble when it can find so much of it for free. There are too many legislators whose districts are peopled by electors whose taxes support school districts under 2,000 in enrollment -- indeed, more than half of Ohio's school districts fall in that category -- and they are certainly not apt to anger those electors by supporting a move that will inflame them at a time when the Assembly seeks to milk them of additional tax dollars. Even the leading figure of the governor's party in the Ohio senate, Oliver Ocasak, says so.

How small is small? Dr. Conant, the Harvard sage, once said the ideal school has 100 pupils a grade, in every grade. This means an enrollment of about 1,600 pupils, unless Ohio is willing to enact a new law requiring attendance of all children under age 18.

Happiness is cooking with gas... and not having to clean the oven.

Creative cooking is fun... when you have a range that cooperates with you. And that's one of the beauties of a clean, modern gas range. Gas lets you prepare a meal, that looks like you slaved over it... but you don't have to slave over it. About all you have to do nowadays is just turn it on. And it does that instantly. Then all the automatic cooking controls let you do something else. And you don't even have to clean the oven anymore... with automatic cleaning.

In short, a modern gas range is for people who love to cook... and for people who hate to cook. But mostly, for people who like to eat.

Kin of Foxes sixth in Ohio in general science

Nephew of Theodore Fox and grandson of the Proctor Foxes, Brent Fox, ninth grader, Fox, ranked sixth in Ohio among 1,005 pupils who took the final test in general science.

He placed second among Division II schools. He was first in the district both among Division schools and all schools regardless of size.

He is the son of the Richard Foxes, near Greenwich.

Picking up litter too expensive, Toberen says

Litter continues to be an expensive proposition, so far as Division 3, state highway department, is concerned.

Figures released by E. L. Toberen, division deputy director, show $11,244.72 was spent to collect litter along Division 3 highways during a five-month period, from June 27 to Nov. 28, 1970.

Medina county had the biggest bill while Huron county had the smallest.

Her is the breakdown by counties of the expenditures: Ashland, $2,442.04; Crawford, $2,186.20; Erie, $1,487.00; Lorain, $1,234.21; Way-Lorain, $1,236.29; Medina, $3,151.73; Richland, $1,243.21; Huron, $1,234.21; Wayne, $801.51.

The money spent on litter collection along the highways in our division could be better spent on the littering would cease," said Deputy Director Toberen.

He added, "if present trends continue, the cost will go up and the waste of money, manpower and machines will be magnified."

shortcakes which lack character, I saw one and was Simply go back to a really old time recipe for real shortcake.

This comes from one of my prized cookbooks, "The Settlement" Cookbook, in an edition probably published around World War I. It was a gift from friends after their mother died and they had to clean out her house.

It is an extremely good one and has to be kept together with a rubber band to keep the pages from falling out, so you can tell it was well used.

This is a plain, simple recipe. Mix two cups of flour with four teaspoons of baking powder, half a teaspoon of salt and one tablespoon of sugar. Work in a fourth of a cup of shortening with the tips of your fingers. Gradually add the flour in fourths of a cup of milk.

Pat rather gently, roll around and cut with a round cutter. A drinking glass dipped in flour does the trick.

Bake in a hot oven for a little less than 15 minutes.

Butter, fill with berries, and if you are lucky enough, top with real honest - to - goodness whipped cream.

NOW THAT GRADUATION time is near it is best that thought be given to what your buffet table will hold for all the guests. Since everything must be done ahead, and ready the minute you come back home, this punch recipe is ideal.

It can be mixed ahead. Start with two packages of a commercial powdered drink, one cherry and one raspberry, add one cup sugar, two quarts of water, half a large can of pineapple juice and one quart of ginger ale.

After you get it all in a punch bowl, you can figure out how full it is, and either double or triple the recipe, or make several batches in reserve and refrigerate.

dash to the freezer, and bring out raspberry sherbet. This is part of the ingredients, and at the same time chills the punch, which eliminates ice cubes which you never have enough of anyway. Add as much as you think it needs.

This also works quite well for June weddings. Just add a dash of champagne or even some white wine.

Since this is more or less the mating season - notice the birds and bees -- it has always been the season for some reason of people more or less going slightly out of their minds. Perfectly sane drivers during the rest of the year now go whipping around corners and too fast in the warm breezes. It is the season to catch rainbows, which has always been a romantic pastime. Dreamy things, yes, but the British have come up with a deal to catch bits of clouds.

They aren't even doing it for the pure romance of holding a piece of a fluffy white cloud in their hands. They have a purpose: to study to see what things cause rain.

Since clouds have been with the world for some time now, one would assume that it would already be discovered what they are, but no one really knows.

Maybe we just aren't as smart as we all think we are.

Red rally nips Fredericktown in JAC play

Plymouth scored twice in the fourth inning to erase a Fredericktown lead here May 19 for a 4 to 3 Johnny Appleseed conference victory, the second over the Freddie this season.

With two down, Richard Stover tripled over the shortstop's head into left center. Ted Rook lifted a pop fly into the infield. The defense stood and gaped as the ball fell safely, Stover scoring. Bill Fazio tripled Rook home. Plymouth got a run in the second when Don Foreman singled, went to second on the first baseman's balk, advanced to third on Mike Beard's single and scored when Jeff Fazio doubled.

The Big Red got another in the third. With one down, Rook singled and scored on Bill Van Wagner's single.

Bill Lybarger led off for the Freddie in the first with a homer over the centerfield fence. Curtis Reppart singled, Steve Doyle doubled and Reppart scored on Dan Hutton's single.
