On coaches

The latest brouhaha about coaches in the schools is distressing and divisive.

Anyone who's knowledgeable about what goes on in the spectator sports of the school well knows there have been reverberations of a nasty nature since the ee football season.

The latest charges, of misconduct and failure of leadership, are, if true, grave and perhaps permanently compromising. We believe there were and are better ways of dealing with them than by washing dirty linen in public, particularly in the the linen. The president of the school board was dead right when he said the dissatisfaction should have been brought to the notice of the chief administrators the superintendent and the high school principal - early on, rather than at the end of the season.

Where does the fault lie?

More importantly, what should be done to prevent recurrence of this lamentable development.

One assumes that those who engaged the couple in the first place screened the two of them carefully. We recall that a number of persons applied for the baskebtall job. The successful applicant apparently, like cream on milk, rose to the top. Nevertheless, it may be that our screening procedures need to be strength-

In this regard, it is wise to note that some superintendents, in a wish to rid themselves of difficult personnel, decline to make a full breast of the candidate's record under their supervision. If this is what occurred in this case - and we certainly do not imply that it did - one can hardly blame the screeners here.

In the absence of aworn testimony by the accused denying the charges against them, we are loath to convict.

But we offer some reasonable observa-tions that, we believe, ought to be considered by the board of education, school personnel and the public alike.

1. There is not, at any time, any excuse for the use of obscene language or gesture by any employee of the school system Which is not to say that a mild expletive, such as the sort of thing that one hears during prime time television, is inexcus able. Moreover, whenever such expletives are used, for whatever reason, they must never be directed toward persons, whether pupils or others. To direct them against events, or things, or failures of plans, is pardonable.

2. Leadership can hardly be taught. It can be learned, by watching the successful leader and adapting his or her methods to one's individual personality. The public that pays the bill has a right to expect decent qualities of leadership from those to whom it entrusts its children. Failures of leadership must be dealt with promptly and effectively, but with reasonconcern for the rights of him who

3. Coaching, with rare exceptions, is for the young. Coaches should not be burned out before their time by assigning them to multiple coaching duties. Young people make mistakes, notably in judgment of personality. One such instance, and the judge openly admitted his failure, occurred in the past season. We must forgive them for that. But coaches ought to realize that parents have an overriding interest in their children and will expect, even demand, prior consultation before severe or terminal action is taken. multiple coaching duties. Young people

4. Our system here is not perfect, far from it. But we pay enough for it that it should be nearly so. And we have the right to expect of everyone in it, down to the least paid employee, that he will exert his best efforts around the clock to discharge the noble task the people have assigned to him. Less than that is intolerable.
