Effect of this program is to limit the development of boys who eventually may play for Plymouth High school.

Some parents in the past have objected to the policies of junior high coaches, notably in basketball.

Should the coach cut play.

Should those who survive get to play in every game?

vive get to play in every game?

One parent told The Advertiser. "If my boy doesn't get to play more than seven or eight minutes of every game. I'll take him to Manafield where he'll get to play more. Needless to say, the boy is one of exceptional ability as a basketball player.

Another parent says. "By limiting participation to those who are advanced in their development, the program works against the late bloomer. Some boys do not mature so fast as others. They should be given an equal chance to participate." What may be wrong with the feeder program is that participants, whether boys or girls, do not receive much instruction in the rules of the or graw, so not receive much instruction in the rules of the particular game nor in its philosophy or tactics. Coaches here and elsewhere complain that ninth graders "don't have any fundamentals and they don't know the rules of the game, both of which should have been taught to them before they reach high school."

Morming Energy Savers
Starting tomorrow, take short showers.
When shaving, don't run hot water continuously. Fill the sink halfway instead.
If you use an electric razor you actually save energy, using less of it in a year than a hand razor and hot water uses in a week.
Whenever possible, use a toaster, toasteroven or a fry pan in place of the large oven or range surface units.

Never use the oven as a heater.
Place a pan on the surface unit before turning the heat on. Neating air is wasteful.
