

A decent standard

One whose judgment we have in the past trusted implicitly is wont to say, "Pride is what makes one town better than another. There is no better way to show community pride than to keep things looking decent."

A former mayor has stated in these pages that some of us have been deficient in keeping our places tidy, neat and in repair.

It is understandable in these times that some householders simply cannot afford the expense of some repairs. To paint a house these days costs four or five times more than it did 20 years ago. And where the householder of 20 years ago may have been able to do the painting himself, now he's physically unable to swing it. To hire it done is beyond his means.

Nevertheless, there is much that can be done by each of us to bring our town to a decent standard. Indeed, there is much that must be done, whether by one or two of us or by the entire community, to establish a decent standard.

One need only walk the streets and alleys of the village to see what needs to be done.

The community eyesore that splits us from north to south is a disgrace. That which divides us from east to west is only slightly less so, mostly because its use is smaller.

Some years ago, an ordinance was passed to prohibit the storage of disused cars on public or private property. When the ordinances were codified, so far as we are informed, that proscription was omitted. There are a number of offenders. They should be urged to comply.

The village has set two days early next month for the collection of trash. But trash should not be collected once or twice a year.

Time was when the householder could load his car with his trash and drive to the river in Base Line road or to the dump in route 61 or to that behind the sewer lagoons and dispose of it. No more. To do so now requires a trip of several miles to the county landfill and the payment of a fee. Does anybody here use the Richland county landfill? Does anybody know where it is? Our bet is that those who use a landfill at all drive northward to the Huron county site.

What was acceptable one or two generations ago is no longer acceptable. In a day where every marketplace depends for survival upon its impression to the prospective user, and particularly when everyone living in or near that marketplace has a substantial investment in it, that impression absolutely must be the best possible.

Some schoolboy or schoolgirl organization can make a lot of points for itself by offering at a modest sum a clean-up service to householders who cannot undertake it themselves. Washing windows, raking lawns, mowing lawns, trimming bushes, sweeping sidewalks.

The old picture of the small Ohio town with the idle sunning themselves in front of some business or other doesn't wash anymore. We can remember when women of this town objected to the location of a public facility on the grounds that the location forced them to walk through expectorant tinged with tobacco. And they complained of the exposure to inquiring and curious looks. Women have for the most part altered their usual attire to overcome that objection.

But the rule is clear: we must realize that this is 1983, we must put our best foot forward, the stakes are high, the survival of our marketplace is in the balance. We can help it to survive by cleaning it up, from the armory to the theater, from the river to the west end.

Taulbee to take post on council

Billy R. Taulbee has accepted the offer of his former colleagues to return as a councilman.

He will replace John E. Heden, who resigned last month because of being out of state during the winter and missing meetings.

This is the second time Taulbee has been appointed to the council.

He declined to be sworn in during the April 12 meeting because he is chairman of the village's zoning board of appeals, which is hearing its first request for a zoning variance Tuesday at 6 p. m.

He said he feels obligated to continue in his role of chairman until that request was decided.

Most likely he will be sworn by Mayor Dean A. Cline during the regular council meeting.

Mrs. Joseph McClure, president of the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce, invited the council to attend tonight's chamber dinner.

She said the mayor and Councilman G. Thomas Moore had already made reservations and that she sincerely hoped the others would as well.

She said she hoped the Chamber and council could work together for the betterment of the village.

"We need you and you need us," she said.

James C. Root, village administrator, told the council he has heard nothing from Willard about renegotiating the water contract, which would reduce the minimum gallonage for which the village is being charged and not consuming.

At this point, Moore spoke up. He said the coverage in a nearby weekly newspaper of Plymouth's request was uncalled for.

He vehemently denied that Plymouth had come "begging" for water, then came again "begging". He said he was part of the committee which had worked out the contract and at that particular time Willard had the water and needed the money and was pleased that Plymouth would purchase water.

Root said he doesn't believe anything will be done this year to make contractual changes because Willard has already set its appropriations and is planning on the set sum of money from Plymouth for the water.

Moore told the council the finance committee has been discussing raising the clerk-treasurer's annual salary because the work is more than full time.

The office now pays $7,500. Because it is an elective post, the holder does not come under the employee benefits for hospitalization.

The present clerk, John Fazzini, Plymouth's retired school superintendent, is covered by the school's retirement and cannot collect twice from the fund.

The council passed on its first reading a resolution to support the objections to the proposed landfill in northern Morrow county of toxic wastes.

Jean Manuel, a Plymouth high school pupil, presented a short memorandum concerning the dangers which prompted the councilmatic action.

No other legislation could be acted upon because of the absence of Councilman Keith Hebble, who is vacationing in Florida.

Root said plans are being made to flush the fire hydrants during the last week in April. The specific times for each of the village will be announced later so that housewives have a warning about when it is wise to do their laundrying.

He said the village will collect trash on the Huron side of the village May 2 and 3 and on the Richland side May 4 and 5.

Councilman Roy Barber complimented him on how well the Square looks since it has been cleaned up. Root has had extra help through the waste department to do the work. He said last year the village received $1,000 of litter control funds through Richland county. He thinks more will be forthcoming this year.

Only one week among 52?

By AUNT LIZ
So someone dreamed up what is called National Library week!

It is for the well-known birds. Just one week out of 52? It should be every week of the year.

Where would we be without libraries to use so freely? They really aren't that free, but most of us don't pay any attention to that. Public libraries are financed from the intangible tax, which is paid on dividends people receive from their stocks and bonds.

Someone in Ohio is trying to change all that. Frankly, I think it is a painless way to get the moola for our library system. Not everyone owns stocks, which means that a lot of people have the privilege of using the libraries completely free.

What really hits me between the eyes is that so many do not even walk into a library.

You can save a fortune by using one of us read a once, and that is it, so why try to gather thousands of volumes?

Years back some friends came to visit, and they were dear, old friends, but I was simply shocked when they started to brag about how much it cost to move their 3,000-odd books from the west to the east.

I just quietly thought, "How dumb can you be?"

A house without books (or pictures) is really not a house to me, and there are always a few treasured books you hang on to. I still have a history book on the origins of World War I that I used in school, and a generation later that book was used in two colleges by our kids and friends. No way would I part with it.

And don't dump your old books on the libraries. Ask them first if they would like them, and they will be very nice and frank. Most small libraries do not have the room for them, and they must keep up with current reading tastes.

Reading is a joy, and there is nothing better than reading a cookbook.

It is astounding what you can find in them, but some recipes work and some are grave mistakes.

This one isn't, but you have to be a little Oriental to love it.

First, buy a pound of lean pork, which you cut into cubes.

The rest of the ingredients you most likely have around.

Combine a tablespoon of shredded orange peel with a half cup of orange juice; two tablespoons of soy sauce; two teaspoons of cornstarch and a teaspoon of sugar. Mix.

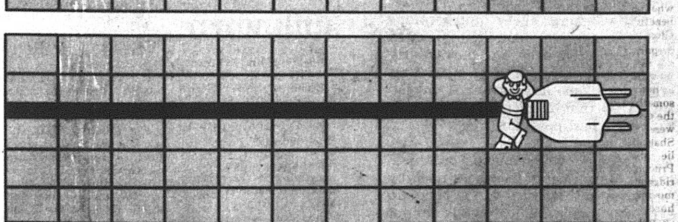

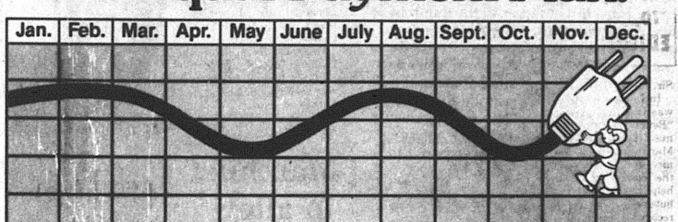

Either in your best skillet or a wok, if you have one, pour a little oil, then add two good sized carrots that are thinly sliced and a cup of chopped celery. Stir them around until they are slightly crisp. Then take them out with a slotted spoon, and put the pork pieces in the same oil. Cook them until they look done.

Add the first mixture of the orange juice, and cook until it thickens, then throw the vegetables back in.

This is all to be heated and can be eaten with rice or Chinese noodles, which are easier. All you have to do is open the can.

If you really want to splurge, you can throw in a few nuts like cashews or almonds, but no one will really miss them.

The Equal Payment Plan.

A convenient way to budget for your electric bill.

Some household expenses are fairly steady throughout the year. But your electric bill varies from month to month because your electric usage fluctuates with the changing seasons. The bill is usually higher in the winter. It dips a little in the spring months, then, for most people, rises during the air conditioning season, before dropping again in the fall.

We can't do anything about the weather, but we can help you smooth out the ups and downs of your electric bill. And that's by offering you our Equal Payment Plan.

With the Equal Payment Plan, we bill you a fixed amount each month based on your average yearly usage.

Your account is reviewed every six months to see that your budget payment is still as close as possible to your average usage. At the end of the twelfth month you'll receive a settle-up bill or a credit.

Many of our customers are already taking advantage of the Equal Payment Plan. If it sounds like a good idea to you, simply contact us. We'll take it from there.

We give it our best.

Township trustees reach accord with Shiloh on fire question

The classic argument of "what's ours is ours, and we want it spelled out" across Apr. 13 when trustees of Bloominggrove and Cass townships met with councilmen of Shiloh at Shiloh to discuss the fire protection contract.

John J. Snyder, Bloominggrove trustee, said the draft contract states that the village and the two townships jointly own a fire apparatus, whereas there are two such apparatuses. Frank Cline, president pro tempore of the Shiloh council, replied the argument is negated by the statement "and other equipment" in the draft. Whereupon Snyder said the draft contract refers to "other equipment is jointly owned", whereas the townships each own their own water tankers. And his colleague, Charles Bly, added, "We wrote to the prosecuting attorney to be sure there wouldn't be any problem with it stated that way when we actually own the tanker. We received a letter from his saying it could cause a problem with the insurance, depending on how the insurance is set up."

Considerable heated debate ensued. Cline finally said, "Even if one of our firemen was using another fire department's equipment, that fireman would be covered by the insurance if he got hurt."

At last, the wording of the draft contract was left as is. Trustees then inquired if Shiloh is willing to pay for one-third of the cost of the tankers, since Shiloh uses them also. Cline responded, "A long time ago there was a trade-off agreement made verbally that Shiloh wouldn't charge the fire department for the village water put in the tankers which is then used on fires in the townships."

Bly reported all townships in Richland county have united to buy group insurance. The council agreed to participate. A mutual aid contract with Butler township will be renewed but on new terms: $100 for a false alarm run, $225 for a fire run, $50 for an ambulance run. The old contract called for $50 for a false alarm and $50 for a grass fire. Butler township's approval is now required.

R. Harold Mack underwent surgery last week in St. Anthony hospital, Columbus. He expects to be home next week.

Raymond Babcock was admitted to Willard Area hospital Sunday.

Charles Myers was released at Willard Sunday.

Sir, In last week's paper there was an article on page 4 titled "Benefit set for '78 alumnae." It was the benefit for Martin McKenzie. It was a nice article expressing how the community wanted to help the McKenzie family, but one error was made in the recognition of "one person who has worked hard for the benefit". Mrs. James McClure did not work on the preparation of this event. I do not mind not getting credit for things I do work on, but I do not want to take credit for something I did not do, when the people that worked on it were not mentioned. Mr. Shannon Hamons, Mrs. Julie Metcalfe, Mrs. Cathy Pritchard, Mrs. Nancy Baldrige are the ones who got it moving. But since I did not have any involvement I cannot begin to list everyone who helped, because I do not know all of the names. However, they all did a super job and deserve a lot of credit. Respectfully, Mrs. James McClure

Red nips Edison with five in 6th

Plymouth scored five in the sixth at Milan Apr. 13 and upset the Chargers in Fire-lanes conference play, 10 to 8.

The Big Red outfit Edison, 12 to 11.

The home nine scored six times in the fifth to take a 7 to 5 lead.

Craig Thornberry was the hitting star for Plymouth. He belted two doubles, one of which scored what proved to be the winning run in the sixth. Rodney Hampton also had a double for the winners. Mark Reid hit for two bases for the Chargers.

Jeff Jackson allowed 10 safeties but Brian Vredenburgh, who pitched the last inning, collected the victory. The game was a Plymouth home game transferred to Edison because the local field was unplayable.

Polar Bears claw Big Red

Craig Gerhold limited Plymouth one hit at Castalia Apr. 12 and Margaretta's Pola Bears went on to win, 5 to 1.

But it wasn't easy. Rodney Hampton, Gerhold's mound opponent, pitched creditably but was the victim of shabby support, especially two critical errors by his catcher in the fifth. After Scott Rister singled to break home two runs and drive a 1 to 1 tie, Rister sought to reach second. An errant throw enabled an run to score from third. A moment later, Rister stole third, the catcher's throw went into left field and Rister scored.
