

'The most bucks!'

"Which of the candidates for governor will you back?" we asked an opinion leader, one of the movers-and-shakers, this week.

"The one that shows me he's going to get more dollars for this town than anybody else—I don't care a damn about his politics."

He was gone before we could explore the ramifications of that statement.

Hot air

This newspaper takes pride that its editorial comment adheres strictly to local issues. Leave it to the New York Times or the Cleveland Plain Dealer to comment upon international and national issues, even many state questions that affect Ohioans generally but seem to have but little significance to the Plymouth Local School district.

Only occasionally, and with what we consider to be good cause, do we depart from this notion, one that has served us well for nearly 32 years and which only last week obtained the prestigious recognition of the Osman C. Hooper Newspaper show judges in editorial writing.

In New Hampshire employees of a newspaper have complained to the Department of Labor that the publisher does not pay them for overtime. The department has joined them in a suit against the publisher to recover actual damages, in the form of pay that, plaintiff's contend, was and is due, and punitive damages for flagrantly defying the law governing time and one-half pay for more than 40 hours a week.

The publisher argues that reporters and editors are professional people who do work, or are expected to do work, that simply doesn't fit into a time space. The same task, he says, can be done on one day in less time than on another, by the same employee. And if a different employee is assigned to the same task, he may or may not complete it faster than the first fellow.

The department, in its brief submitted to the court, says this is pure buncombe. It says "there is nothing peculiar to the business of producing a newspaper that requires professionally trained help and these employees whose complaint lies before the court should be treated and deserve to be treated as common labor and paid accordingly, by time and one-half for more than 40 hours in a work week."

We met Secretary Brock once. He is a smart man. His family fortune, laid on candies, didn't grow to such size because a bunch of dummies runs it.

But in this instance, Secretary Brock is full of hot air.

We challenge anyone to walk in off the street and get out a newspaper, whether the defendant's journal in New Hampshire or this one, without some training. And the more particular the publisher is or may be about the kind of thing that he intends to be said in his newspaper, the more difficult it is for the untrained person to do the job.

On the matter of whether employees of a newspaper ought to be paid time-and-a-half for overtime we confess that we are not sufficiently informed to make a judgement. Anyone who thinks that this newspaper can be put out with a 40-hour work week has been smoking one of those weird cigarettes.

The obvious answer to that situation is to hire more help. And assuming that we could find some that would satisfy us and would be willing to put up with the problems of dealing with two sexagenarian parties whose way of doing things is pretty much established after all these years, how would we pay them?

The day when the community newspaper is the part-time occupation of the commercial printer is long gone. It is to be that he who could operate a linetyping machine, fix it when it broke down, run a hand-fed press and set type from the California job case was thought to be qualified to publish a newspaper.

As the man said, "Them days are gone forever."

And if Mr. Brock doesn't shape up his department, maybe he'll be gone back to Tennessee and his candy factory.

16 per cent rate rise set Apr. 1 by cable TV

A rate increase by Continental Cablevision of Ohio, Inc., will raise the basic price for cable service from $9.25 to $10.70.

It will go into effect Apr. 1. All other rates for additional service will remain the same. The company contends that additional expenses over the last two years are responsible for the rate increase. It says such uncontrollable expenses such as postage, materials and insurance have risen and the charges for satellite programming have increased.

The company's franchise with the village runs to Oct. 15, 2003, which was set by Ord. 19-82 enacted by village council Nov. 23, 1982.

Under the terms of the ordinance the company pays the village three per cent of its gross receipts paid by village users. This amounted to $3,078.52 for 1984. The payment for 1985 has not yet been received from the company.

The company also pays an annual amount of $775 for use of village utility poles.

Both sums are credited to the general fund.

Postema's brother, Wilford J., rural mail carrier, who is also a neighbor, called at the house Saturday. He found the front door open.

Entry was apparently gained by forcing an upstairs window, which was open and its lock missing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sir:

Again thank you for your letter of Jan. 13, asking me to define judicial accountability. I welcome the opportunity to clarify the special role of judge under the three-part form of government, with its separation of powers. For the third time I challenge you individually and in writing and to define for the public and my own understanding of your own accountability. Judges are like county commissioners and other members of the legislature, executive and judicial branch of Ohio government in that each must periodically stand for election and thus be accountable to the voters. Judges and county commissioners are thus equal partners in the checks and balances of local government. Beyond that, let me define the particular accountability that I have as probate judge. As a probate judge I am elected by the voters of this county, but 83 percent of my salary is paid by the Supreme Court of Ohio, and as a judge, I am under the supervision of that higher court. As such, the chief justice has authority to do from time to time have enough confidence in my ability, to assign me to hear cases in other counties. When on assignment, my expenses are paid by either the Supreme Court or that local county. Also, all my court decisions are reviewable and appealable to the Sixth District Court of

Probate judge challenges commissioners

Appeals, not to county commissioners.

As a public official I am also accountable to the General Assembly of Ohio in that I must follow the statutes they enact. For example, I am required to follow Ohio Revised Code Sec. 2161.10 by annually requesting such funds as are reasonably necessary in my estimation for the operation of the Court. That's not easy or pleasant but it is a requirement. A judge wouldn't be doing his job if he didn't request the resources necessary to carry out the Court's function. When I am acting as juvenile court judge, I have the ultimate responsibility, not only to decide if complaints about children are true but more difficult is that I must provide for the "best interest" of all children under the authority of the court. At best, this is an extremely difficult, but without adequate resources it would be impossible. When put in a position of either offending county commissioners or neglecting the needs of children, I hope I will always choose the best interest of children.

I anxiously await your individual written efforts to define your own accountability beyond your periodically standing for election. I know that will greatly expand public understanding and appreciation of county government. Very truly yours, Thomas E. Heydinger, Judge Huron County Juvenile Court

Village income tax forms must be filed Apr. 15

Village income tax reports for the late December to all individuals on the tax mailing list.

Failure of any individual or employer to receive or secure a form does not excuse them from filing or paying the tax.

Deadline for filing of these forms is Apr. 15.

All returns filed after that date will be subject to interest at the rate of six percent a year, one-half of one percent penalty a month or $5, whichever is the most. Any taxpayer who cannot meet the Apr. 15 deadline is encouraged to request an extension of time in writing, which must be filed by the deadline.

Many individuals in the village are not required to file an annual return or declaration because taxes are being withheld automatically from their paychecks. However, if they have other sources of income subject to the income tax ordinance, they must file a return.

All persons required to file by the Apr. 15 deadline include: self-employed individuals; individuals who have an earned income over $100 per calendar year; all businesses (except those that operate on a fiscal year basis); those who receive rental income. Those receiving compensation for babysitting services or those who render services in the nature of care-taking, housekeeping or house cleaning are subject to the income tax and must file a report. Residents of Plymouth who work outside of Plymouth who do not pay taxes are required to file and pay the taxes to the Village of Plymouth. If a person who works outside of Plymouth pays an income tax where he works but the tax is less than the Plymouth tax of one percent, then a report must be filed and the difference up to the one percent is to be paid to the Village of Plymouth.

Question concerning the Village Income Tax may be directed to the attention of the tax director available at village hall on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday from 9 a.m. to noon at 88-8871. If any individual is unable to make contact during those hours, he is requested to call the tax director at 887-0321.

Red swamps Roughriders, holds first place in loop

Plymouth ran the first seven points, allowed Western Reserve to score three and then ran 13 points to build an unsurmountable lead in a Firelands conference game that Plymouth won, 81 to 60.

It was the 12th consecutive defeat for the Roughriders.

For the Big Red it was the fifth victory over a northern division team, leaving Plymouth with a perfect season record outside its division and a certain lead in overall conference play.

The Big Red poured in 27 points during the first eight minutes, converting 11 of 18 shots at the basket and five of eight penalty shots. It held the Roughriders to just seven.

The second period was hardly the equal of the first, but if Plymouth can simply maintain its pace in the remainder of its slate it will not taste defeat. It scored with caused by melting ice jams. The Chinese are going to be there, the Russians, a bunch of Europeans and us.

With that mixture, think of the food! I hope the Iowa cooks dream up a night for each one of them.

That can be known as "how to break the ice".

Right now we have another holiday to think about, the Chinese New Year.

This is the year of the tiger, but pork is more popular with Chinese cooks.

Pigs take up less room than cows, will eat anything, and provide lots of protein along with being downright tasty.

You can cut up an assortment of vegetables, throw them in a wok, and stir fry, then toss in some meat, and stir fry some more.

You can also do a nice casserole that will be ready with no last minute toasting and stirring.

For about six, start with two pounds of lean pork, preferably loin. Cut into cubes and brown in a little oil with a large sliced onion.

With a slotted spoon, move it all into a casserole when it is nicely browned. Add four carrots, cut in half inch pieces, three ribs of celery, same size, two medium size potatoes, cubed, and green pepper cut in inch squares.

Meanwhile, have ready a mixture of a fourth a cup of soy sauce, a fourth of a cup of sherry, a teaspoon of sugar, a half teaspoon of chili powder, an eight ounce can of tomato sauce, three fourths of a cup of chicken broth and two peeled, flattened garlic cloves.

Pour it over the meat and vegetables. Stir well to mix it, and bring it to a boil, then turn the heat down, cover the casserole and simmer for about an hour.

To thicken it mix two teaspoons of water or cornstarch and stir in. Then drizzle a half teaspoon of sesame oil over it all.

This goes on rice, natch, and add some crunchy Chinese noodles.

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

What it all boils down to is that when an ice breaker plows through the ice and the water appears, it then freezes over again, and the idea is to break the ice and keep it broken.

The other problem they will go after is how to reduce flooding
