Footpads kicked down the door of the premises of Richard B. Shriver in Baseline road, Shiloh, and stole firearms and other chattels worth $2,785, Richland county sheriff's deputies were told by him Thursday. He said the entry occurred June 18 between 12:30 and 5:30 p.m. A clarinet worth $800, a $500 rifle and a $450 microwave oven were stolen.

A Shiloh boy was arrested as a juvenile Friday at 10:30 p.m. on complaint of Joseph Scott, 59, Route 61, on whose property near Jangle Five Points road the boy was shooting groundhogs without permission.

Deputies said they found the boy with a cal. 22 rifle. They said the boy told them he could shoot there and he did have a valid hunting license. Scott denied he had given permission. The boy, 15, was released to the custody of his mother.

The voice of The Advertiser —

It's wrong-headed, that's what it is!

The thrust of what Mrs. Bresson, the Democratic candidate for Huron county commissioner, has done is to interfere with the right, not to say the duty, of her opponent, the incumbent commissioner, James Westerhold, to make a living.

This is clear.

By refusing to accord him under federal rules a waiver to permit him to speak by radio to listeners in Huron county prior to the campaign about ordinary matters absolutely not connected, by any remote conception of the fact, with county political affairs, nor the regular business of the county government nor its agencies, Mrs. Bresson has said, in effect, "Go hustle up a living somewhere else."

She infers that by his investment in the radio station at Norwalk he will reap sufficient profit to keep him and his family from starving to death between now and the election. How can she be sure? After Nov. 4, she implies, the question will be moot because Mr. Westerhold will be a lame duck.

The reasoning is patently specious.

By her public statement, she implies that a commissioner should not have a private occupation, that his salary as commissioner is and by rights ought to be enough to support a family. If this is the kind of arithmetic she would employ if she should be elected, God help us.

It is the larger issue that disturbs us more deeply.

What the woman is saying is that there are some occupations that disqualify one from public service and one of these is to be occupied with the dissemination and/or interpretation of news and public affairs by one branch of the media or another. She openly states there is a conflict of interest.

The woman has simply not done her homework.

If she had, she would have grasped that the attorney-general of Ohio, in an opinion dated Sept. 1, 1971, No. 71-048 (his name was William J. Brown and he was responding to a request by the village council at Plymouth made Sept. 15, 1970) held there is no conflict of interest when a reporter for a local newspaper (and by extension, a local radio station) serves as a member of the legislative body thereof.

Some citizens of Ohio called to the Fourth Estate in one fashion or another have served with high distinction in legislative roles. The names of Dudge: White of Norwalk, Charles A. Mosher of Oberlin, Clarence J. Brown of Blanchester, Lebanon and Urbana, his son, Clarence J., Jr., and Donald J. Pease of Oberlin come quickly to mind. Certainly there are others.

The whole world knows that this newspaper has for a generation made a special point of encouraging women to seek public office, whether by election or appointment, and has been vigorous in its support of their efforts to make this a better place to live in, to work in, to raise a family in.

It's a pity this woman has been foolish.

What she did is not illegal. Not by any stretch of the imagination. It is just wrong-headed, silly, stupid, unfair, perhaps even immoral. If she planned on seeking our endorsement, she had better back off, confess her sin, correct it and go on from there.

ESOP visits PLW, considers funding

Will employees of Plymouth Locomotive Works, Inc., raise enough funds to buy the business for $5.4 million from Banner Industries, Inc.?

Functionaries of the Department of Economic Development at Columbus were here June 18 to look the place over.

They were accompanied by Paul White, Richland county commissioner, the only Democrat on the board of commissioners, who said about $1.5 million may come from state funds, $1.5 million in a loan from Banner Industries to the employee stock ownership plan, $1.5 million from the retirement fund of employees of PLW and the remainder from private lenders.

This pattern of investment is drastically different from that which was initially advanced. It was at first said that Toledo TrustCorp would advance 60 per cent of the $5.4 million price on the business, the state would be counted upon for 30 per cent, and 10 per cent, or $540,000 ($100,000 for attorney's and closing fees and such, the remainder exactly 10 per cent of the quoted cost of the operation) from investment at the rate of $5,400 from each of 100 participants in the ESOP.

Some likely participants in this plan, admittedly employees with relatively low seniority, intended to borrow against their pensions to meet their contribution, which must begin with a payment of $100 as "up front" money. Other employees, many of them with long tenure, must impressions about such likelihood. "Over my damned dead body," one of them told The Advertiser. "I'm only a year or so from retirement and I'm not about to go around buying a lame horse."

Another said, through a spouse, the intention is "to take the money and run. How much? Over $37,000!"

Infant boy succumbs at Akron

Interment took place Saturday in Hosteller family cemetery, Shiloh route 1, for Edward A. Troyer, four months, son of the Andrew Troyers, Shiloh route 1, who died in Children's hospital, Akron, June 18.

The boy was born at Ashland Feb. 14.

He is also by three brothers, Melvin, Emanuel and Perry, and two sisters, Mary and Esther, all at home, and his grandparents, the Menno Troyers and the Abraham Rabers, Shiloh route 1.

Tractor theft reported by Carter

A second theft of chattels of Roy W. Carter was reported by him to Richland county sheriff's deputies June 17.

Carter, who lives at 31 Bell street, said a 1967 John Deere 112 garden tractor and mower deck stored in a locked steel garage at his place in Willet road has been stolen.

An outboard motor was stolen from the same building, and under similar circumstances, a month ago.

Phyllis Reindle, 35 High street, Shiloh, reported Thursday an instance of criminal damage.

She told deputies a friend who borrowed the bicycle of her son did not return it. The bicycle, valued at $125, was found submerged in the brick pond in downtown Shiloh.

Robert D. Sponadler, Henry road, reported Thursday a golden retriever, a registered three-year-old male, named Sir Galahad, is missing. The dog was last seen June 8. He was wearing Tag No. 9460.

and Jerry Sloan, comprised of hourly employees of the blue collar stripe and some of the white collar salaried staff, has applied to the Ohio Department of Economic Development for fiscal aid.

White has been named by his colleagues, Republicans Terry Wolf and Edward Olson, as their liaison with the state. Olson swears "we are committed to keeping Plymouth Locomotive Works in Richland county and we want to be sure those 150 jobs stay there, even if it means we have to find the money ourselves."

The county has $60,000 in a revolving loan fund. Last year it loaned $65,000 to Mansfield Ferrous Castings so its employees and officers could fund a buyout from Ohio Brass Co. Its main cog has been here to speak to his counterparts in the Plymouth ESOP.

Why is the plant for sale?

Those who claim to know say there are three reasons:

1. Jeffrey Steiner, who bought Banner Industries from Samuel Krasney early this year, doesn't want to be in the manufacturing business. He intended all along to divest the firm of the manufacturing, of which there are two others.

2. The operation has been a steady money loser, in part because developments in the economy militate against sale of the prime products of PLW, in part because the relatively high value of the American dollar in foreign marketplaces precluded the quick sale of exports of all natures and specifically of capital goods such as PLW produces, in part because out-of-date equipment and methods prevent the firm from competing with others.

3. Forthcoming legislation affecting taxation rates and methods make it desirable to dispose of the business now, taking into account some of the devices applied, wholly within the law, to the sale by Harold Scott to Banner Industries and the sale of Banner Industries by Krasney to Steiner.

Villager asks $150,000 in damage suit

A Plymouth man seeks $150,000 in damages from the owner of a stray horse struck by the plaintiff in Bowman Street road on Aug. 20, 1985, at about 1:15 a.m.

David W. Endicott, 47 Trux street, alleges he was injured and his 1980 model vehicle damaged when it collided with the horse belonging to David A. Hignite, 2960 Bowman road, Mansfield.

Endicott charges Hignite was negligent in failing to keep the animal tethered or confined.

Balances for Nov. 5 reported —

Cost of victory high, for losers higher

Broad publicity accorded the enormous expenditure by both GOP candidates in the 19th Ohio Senatorial district, much of it contributed by persons and agencies outside the district, has all but obscured campaign expenses in Richland county.

Incumbent Rep. Frank Sawyer, D-Mansfield, seeking reelection as members of the General Assembly man from the 64th district, spent $448. He received $1,973, with only two contributions of more than $100. This leaves him with a balance of $10,065 for the November election. His GOP opponent, John F. Swartz, received contributions of $220 and spent $144. His balance for November is $637.

Republican Terry L. Kilgore spent $3,440 to win the party nomination to compete for domestic relations and juvenile judge. His opponent, Robert L. Konstant, spent $10,159. Kilgore has $470 left.

Paul Christ, successful Democratic candidate, spent $7,411, including $358 from a fund-raiser in Shelby and contributions of $100 from eight persons, including three of his family.

His opponent, T. Michael Dornier, spent $8,118, of which $920 was derived from a fund-raiser.

Paul White, Democratic incumbent commissioner, spent $55. The GOP candidate in November, Rick Sowash, spent nothing.

New coaches at three schools begin in August

Fans of schoolboy football will note some changes in the coaching ranks.

London and Western Reserve have appointed new head men.

The Wildcats will be led by Joe Studer, who succeeds Bob Haseman, who's contract was not renewed by Xavier university, last season. Studer comes to New London from Arcadia.

He is Barry Pickens, 29, physical education teacher in the middle school and head track and field coach. His assistant, a new appointee, is Jerry Morris.

Seneca East's head coach, Mike Covi, had enough of Attica and went to Fort St. Vrain as assistant under Dick Kidwell.

His successor is Joe Ziger, 37, who was offensive coordinator of the Tiger team last year. He played high school ball at Calvert and was graduated by Xavier university, at Cincinnati in 1970. His assistants will be Jerry Schlick and Frank Lamoreux.

Brian Slone smashed a triple and had two hits for the winners. He also fanned 17 Indians and walked seven while allowing four hits.

Ryan Hall and Howard combined to fan 10 Reds. They also issued 10 passes. The Reds had six hits.

Cory Vesterman contributed the defensive play of the season, an over-the-shoulder catch of a lone drive by Slone while closing on the outfield fence in the fifth inning.

Tell by how dressed? Forget it, says Auntie

By AUNT LIZ

There was a time when you could kind of tell what people were like by the way they dressed, even who they were.

No more. Now they all look alike. But you can tell who and what they are by what they read on airplanes.

They will all be wearing jeans or even shorts, which makes them all look alike, but just a quick peek at what the guy seated next to you is deeply engrossed in lets the cat out of the bag.

On my latest jaunt, I thought I was sitting next to a college kid. He looked it, but he turned out to be a neurosurgeon on his way to some big meeting.

Then there was another boy who looked for all the world like a professional athlete, and there he was reading a large book on art history.

A couple of years ago, coming back from California, a very blonde gal sat next to us. She looked like she could be the original bag lady with ratty looking jeans and a fur jacket that looked like it had been better days at least 100 years ago.

We started talking, and she turned out to be the part owner of a Roll Royce dealership in Palm Springs and had sold 40 of those cars the last year by herself.

That is when I decided she was wearing 1940 designer jeans and the jacket was sable.

Maybe it is all because people want to be comfortable and the back with how they look among strangers.

And this is the time to be comfortable in your kitchen and the heck with fancy, time-consuming recipes.

All you need is a good can opener to make 50 million tasty canes. This one kids will like.

Brown about a cup of diced cooked ham with some chopped onion and some raisins in a little margarine.

Add this to two cans (pound size) of baked beans gooped up with a little mustard and molasses.

Put it all in a casserole and bake for about a half hour, covered. Then take the cover off and arrange apple slices on top, brush with melted butter and bake a little more.

Some rolls and a salad, you have an easy meal, but it can be perked up a little more with a fancy glass of milk.

Try mixing a little jam, like strawberry, in the milk. Even mashed bananas with a few drops of lemon juice will make it a super deal for little ones.

Two collisions investigated: none hurt

Two non-injury collisions were investigated by Plymouth police this week.

On Monday at 6:47 p.m. Esther M. Moser, 27, Attica, backed from a private driveway in Riggs street and hit the front bumper of a car driven by Freda Goth, 38, 116 Trux street.

There were no charges filed because the collision occurred on private property.

On Tuesday at 5 p.m. Trent Snively, 26, Sandusky, was driving south in Plymouth street when Brian Christoff, 17, 276 Trux street, drove out of the car wash without yielding the right of way. Snively tried to avoid hitting the Christoff motorcycle and skidded over 58 feet, but the car hit the front of the motorcycle.

Christoff was charged with failure to yield.

Budget hearing set Tuesday evening

The 1987 village budget as prepared by John Fazzini, village clerk, shows a slight raise in expenditures for the police department.

The $5,365 increase is mostly in anticipation of salary raises. This year's budget totals $132,735. For 1987 it will be $138,100.

Another noticeable increase for general fund expenditures is the village's share for Richland county department of health costs.

Last month the county commissioners increased what each village and township pays into the department. In the past Plymouth paid about $815 annually. This will now be increased to about $1,700.

Unless there is a more substantial balance in the general fund this year than is anticipated, Fazzini has warned the council that because of the small balances being carried forward to 1987, at the end of 1987 it is likely the general fund will be in the red to the tune of about $8,000.

Lower income tax collections and lower interest rates are the main contributing factors.

Fazzini has told the council a reserve water fund must be set up in order to pick up the payments to the OWDA that will begin in five years for Plymouth.

The City of Willard under the contract signed May 1, 1981 agreed to pay the first 10 years of the $127,000 loan needed to install the water line from Willard to Plymouth. The second 10 years is to be paid by Plymouth.

Previous clerks and officials failed to set up such a reserve fund, which was called for by ordinance in 1981.

Fazzini has suggested that 10 per cent of water collections be put in this fund, which will leave a smaller amount for any capital improvements or those out of necessity.

Fire Chief Wayne E. Strine has put in a new ambulance in his budget. It would cost $50,000. If the new vehicle is approved for purchase, about $40,000 will have to be borrowed to pay for it. There is no explanation of why the back-up ambulance was stripped. The Advertiser can't find any written or verbal authorization to do so.

First woman school superintendent in Haron county and in Firelands conference is Mrs. Shirley Stahl, 61-year-old Shreveport mother of four, appointed to succeed the deceased Dr. Milton Levy as superintendent at Monroeville. Her contract, for $42,500, starts Aug. 1. She has been assistant superintendent of Forestville schools.

High drama: Evidence is evidence, proof is proof; defense to start its case

Evidence that James E. (Jamie) Young, Jr., 19-year-old of Monroeville, a few steps out of Monroeville, with and malice aforethought murdered his father and step-mother on St. Valentine's day last was advanced in testimony by witnesses for the prosecution throughout the first week of the trial, which ended Friday with no session.

Reason: The defense attorney, Jack Levin, Cleveland lawyer, had "personal" business to attend to. What business? His landlord seeks to evict him from offices he leased, verbally, in premises across the street from the Huron county courthouse at Newark.

Testimony during the latter part of the first week was, for the most part, perfunctory, having none of the color nor flavor of the evidence given by two young women, one of them an unmarried mother, in the first two days of the trial, in which Young, if convicted, could face the death penalty.

Each of these witnesses admitted to having frequent sexual relations with the deceased. The second, Barbara Cook, has been granted immunity from prosecution on three felony counts in return for her testimony.

But her direct evidence, in part worked by clever cross examination by Levin, was not so damaging, some old hand court watchers said, as that given by some sheriff's deputies who recounted what she and Young said to them after the crime was discovered and immediately before and after a charge was laid against Young.

Capt. Richard Sutherland, a rotund veteran of several years of service in the sheriff's department, engaged in a verbal fencing duel with Levin June 18. There were some who watched and listened who asserted Sutherland "is playing games with Levin, and he's holding his own, maybe winning". Sutherland swore that he thought Young was faking when he burst into tears and showed visible remorse during questioning on Feb. 15.

Was deputy playing games with defense lawyer?

ing games with Levin, and he's holding his own, maybe winning". Sutherland swore that he thought Young was faking when he burst into tears and showed visible remorse during questioning on Feb. 15.

Levin's principal opponent has been Dean Holman, a young assistant prosecutor, who is quick, distinct, strongly convinced of the justice of his case and anxious to make a good impression in the court where his protagonist is a seasoned, wily defense counsel with a thousand scalp of lesser lawyers dangling from his belt.

Holman, in the first seven sessions of the court, offered by one witness's account 192 objections, of which fully two-thirds were sustained. This fact appeared not to faze Levin, who apparently goes forward on the notion that the jury will make its decision on its impressions, not upon the written record of the trial.

"Evidence is evidence," one seasoned courtroom observer said, "but what counts is proof. And proof is what the jury says it is, or isn't. We'll never know just what the jury accepts as proof, only the general weight of the evidence when the jury announces its verdict."

Thrust of Levin's cross examination has been to evoke responses that tend to show that his client, the stoic Young, executed his parents while he was temporarily deranged, probably because he had been abused, and out of self-defense.

Levin seeking to show Young was "for all his life" abused by parents, whom he slew in fit of insanity or self defense.

The accused's close friend, Robert Zininger, testified on Thursday that Young saw to it that Zininger did not enter the garage when he called there on Feb. 14 around 10 p.m. Zininger said he and Young had worked on a car earlier in the day and he went there to see if Young might wish to go out with him. Young told him, Zininger, "not to go inside, his folks were fighting." And Young told him he didn't want to go out with Zininger, the witness said.

It is a contention of the state that Young slew his parents in order to rob them, and this is a specification in the indictment. Zininger under cross examination by Holman swore that earlier on Feb. 14 he had to pay for a soft drink "because he told me he didn't have any money." Later, on the next day, when Young was arrested, he was found to have $121 in his pockets.

Levin attacked Zininger's statement to deputies, which he sought to establish differed greatly from his testimony in open court. Zininger said he misunderstood the deputy, in an apparent effort to explain the divergence.

A prisoner in Mansfield Reformatory, Thomas Ross, 24, who shared a cell with Young for two weeks in February, took the witness stand Saturday to say Young admitted to him he killed his father and step-mother and laughed about it.

He said that Young changed his account of what transpired several times during the two week period and that the Young told him he did it for revenge and didn't really care.

Ross told Levin on cross examination he thought Young was deranged because of his conduct during his recounting of the events surrounding the slayings. Ross had told deputies, "That dude is weird."

Mrs. Kyle Shrader, a Norwalk housewife, whose husband worked with the deceased Young at a Lorain trucking firm, testified the dent on the wall of the Young home that Levin asserts derived from an altercation when Young, Sr., shoved his son's head into it did not occur in that fashion. She said she was told by the late Mrs. Young that her husband "back-handed" the boy after he was impudent to his step-mother and "when he hit James, his head went back and hit the wall."

Mrs. Shrader, who described herself as a friend of the family, said she never saw evidence that Young, Jr., has been abused.

The boy's great-uncle,

Frank Ashenfelter, Sandusky, testified he had seen no abuse by Young, Sr., than that he "cussed out" the boy a few times. He said Young, Jr., knew his father had taken out a life insurance policy in the amount of $150,000 because he overheard family discussion about it.

James, Sr., said if anything ever happened to him, Bev would never have to work again and neither would "that shithread there", Ashenfelter swore. The derogation was in reference to Young, Jr.

The prosecution intended to end its case Monday afternoon, leaving to Tuesday the parade of witnesses to be offered by Levin.

Under this timetable, the jury may get the case early next week.

The most damning evidence thus far was advanced by David Battles, a sheriff's deputy, who told of how, after four hours of questioning by him, Barbara Cook broke down and admitted that the story told by her and Young, which she later said he devised, was a complete falsehood and that Young had indeed slain his parents.

Short of direct evidence by an eye witness, this was the strongest presentation of the state's case so far.

Earliest sessions of the trial were attended by only a handful of spectators, most of them males, but as the news coverage of the most, celebrated recent trial in Huron county began to percolate to its borders, chiefly by printed media, the courtroom has been all but filled by spectators, many of them steatopygic women and a good many surmised, by their style of dress and apparent life style, to be friends of Young, Miss Cook and of the first witness, a comely, lissome brunette who obviously has incurred the disfavors of Miss Cook.

Battles gave his testimony in measured tones and Levin could not shake him.

Aim of the prosecution, now that Levin has admitted to the jury that the defendant in fact fired the bullets that killed his father and step-mother, has been to adduce testimony to prove premeditation.

The myriad of witnesses hailed by Prosecutor Michael Fegen, who addresses the witnesses in such a faint voice that, with the air conditioners whirring in the ceiling, is all but inaudible in the press row, is right out of Lewis Carroll. One almost expects a White Rabbit to come through the door leading out of the courtroom.

An electronic expert testified on Monday that he was asked by Jamie Young a full year before the crime to show him how to crack a safe. Chad Bottdorf, now residing in Columbus, said that in March of 1985 Young sought his help in opening a safe in the Young house. He swore that he knows Jamie Young well, having lived in Monroeville for seven years and having seen Young, Jr., daily for six of those years.

Bottdorf also swore he refused to cooperate, although he described generally how by means of sound detection a safe could in theory be opened by one who doesn't know the combination.

Levin went after Bottdorf vigorously. Why, he asked, had not Bottdorf come forward with his evidence immediately after Feb. 14 instead of waiting until June 20 or 21? The witness said he "didn't want to come down here and strike down a friend."

Mark Beekman, like Ross an inmate (he is serving six months in the county jail after having confessed to aggravated burglary), recounted statements he said were made to him by Jamie Young while the two shared jail cells. He testified Young told him his father "got what he deserved" and further that "when he got out of here, he would have a big, nice house to go home to and that he had a big insurance policy."

Beekman on Monday afternoon testified it was his opinion Young talked too much, that it was his mouth that got him into trouble in the jail. He recounted an incident in which Young was set upon by other inmates.

A school dropout, James Trooper, testified late Monday that he met Jamie Young in Morrow's market on the night of Feb. 14. He said Young was buying motor oil. They spoke, Trooper said. He said he saw no evidence of scars, marks or other signs that he had been beaten or abused. He swore that Young offered to sell him some radio speakers, for $25 each, because he needed money.

Levin, who went after Beekman as a cat after a wounded bird, was less emphatic with Trooper. He sought to establish the ephemeral acquaintance between the two. Trooper had testified that Young gave him a ride while he was hitchhiking and that Young came to his house on Feb. 14 at about 7:30 p.m. to invite him to go riding with him later on. Young did not appear for the later rendezvous, he said.

Some witnesses for the prosecution were brought to the stand to testify to material facts of the finding of the weapon and the cause and manner of death. These include Thomas Cowhick, Sr. and Dr. Shan Mohammed and Dr. Farid Said. Others were to establish premeditation. These include Diana Ferguson, the first witness; Gary Yontz, a Sandusky life insurance agent who came to the jail to see Young, apparently at Young's request, who testified to the nature of the insurance policies and that Jamie Young was in the room "but not a part of the conversation when Yontz discussed the policies with the decedents, and Mrs. Evelyn Cook, mother of Barbara Cook, who discovered the bodies and fled in panic to the Monroeville police station.

Levin promises that his witnesses will reveal a long pattern of abuse by the dead father and step-mother. Most observers think it certain that Jamie Young will take the witness stand.

Another week of Ohio v. Young, a case of aggravated murder in Huron county common pleas court that may take a turn this week.

High Blood Pressure? Me?

You Bet Your Life!

23 million Americans - young and old, men and women - have high blood pressure.

Like half of them, you could have it and not know it. You can feel healthy, be active and still have it.

Untreated, it can lead to stroke or heart attack. It's easily detected and can usually be controlled.

Don't take chances. Have your blood pressure checked, and follow your doctor's orders.
