Class History

Dear Diary:

The beginning of our history took place in 1937 when we entered the first grade in which we were taught our Three R's under Mrs. Esther Hamilton Fenner. We were namely: Glenn Burrer, Mary Jane Cashman, Donald Cunningham, Julia Dawson, Joanne Guadaynino, Marlene Hunter, Betty Hutchinson, Richard Lowery, Pat Moore, Janice Ramsey, Janice Rhine, Lewis Steele, Ronald Trauger, Bill Trauger.

During the second year we acquired one new student, Edna Myers. We also became more accustomed to school life under the guidance of Miss Helen Akers. Fond memories linger in our minds concerning the four corners of our classroom.

Our third grade teacher was Miss Grace Feikes, who started us on the path of multiplication and division. Our class, with one new pupil, Desmond Donnenwirth tried to be good little boys and girls, but sometimes the long banisters at the old grade school building were too much for us.

When we entered the fourth grade we made the acquaintance of Mr. Markin. During the middle of the term he left and was replaced by Miss Florence Passell. That year the school levy was passed and carrying our books, we marched down to the high school. There, much to our enjoyment, classes were held in the auditorium where high school students had study hall. This made us feel like we were growing up.

We were guided through the fifth grade by Foster Keinath. That year we acquired two new students, Roger Daron and Gwen Webber.

The sixth grade brought many new students, namely: Deloris Predmore, Louise Reber and Hulbert Metcalfe. We especially liked our teacher Miss Florence Danner. Each morning we would enjoy story time before classes started.

Lockers and changing classes were new to us, but under the guidance of our teacher Miss Josephine Miller, we soon became adjusted to our new way of school life.

During our second year of Junior High, we certainly had our trials and tribulations learning the Gettysburg Address and eighty-eight counties for the history teacher, Miss Bowman.

Freshman at last! We were a little awed at being able to choose what we wanted to study, but under the guidance of Miss Bethel, our advisor, we were able to select our course of study.

Time flew and our Sophomore year was at an end. That year we struggled through World History under the faithful guidance of Miss Violet Boyd.

The next year meant we were Juniors; also time for class rings. All of us were so proud of our new shiny rings. It also brought our first class play, "Introducin' Susan." That year we were taught more of the history of the United States under our history teacher, Mr. Roy Apple. We gained one new student, Henrietta Binion.

Here we are Seniors! We are namely: Charles Baldridge, Henrietta Binion, Glenn Burrer, Mary Jane Cashman, Donald Cunningham, Roger Daron, Julia Dawson, Norma Lou Ford, Joanne Guadaynino, Marlene Hunter, Betty Hutchinson, Richard Lowery, Hulbert Metcalfe, Patricia Moore, Edna Myers, Deloris Predmore, Janice Ramsey, Janice Rhine, Louise Reber, Lewis Steele, Ronald Trauger, William Trauger and Gwen Webber.

Class Prophecy

Listen my friends and you shall hear of an exciting trip of two of the Forty-Niners. My friend HENRIETTA BINION, now head dress designer of the famous magazine, Vogue, and myself, JANICE RHINE, private secretary to the Jeff Bradey Studios, decided to have ourselves a time. The most exciting thing we could think of was a plane trip to New York. We boarded the plane at Mansfield, where we found our pilot to be BILL TRAUGER, and our stewardess, EDNA MYERS, Edna asked why we didn't stop at Carnegie Hall to see JULIA DAWSON, who was appearing as concert pianist there.

On arriving at the airport in New York, we took a taxi to the hotel. The driver was none other than LOUISE REBER, owner and operator of the Red Cab Company. She told us about one of our old school chums who was in New York at the present time, NORMA LOU FORD, whose five boys had just won the State Championship in basketball. At the hotel we were greeted by the manager, HULBERT METCALFE, who escorted us to our room. On the way up to our room I happened to see a familiar face, RICHARD LOWERY, who was acting as hotel janitor. We stopped to talk with him and he told us DELORES PREDMORE was a chambermaid at the same hotel. He also told us that DESMOND DONNENWIRTH was operating a used car lot on Fourth Avenue, still trying to sell the "Green Hornet."

After we had freshened up a bit, we went shopping and ended up at Hearn's Fifth Avenue store where we found that CHARLES BALDRIDGE was the president of the company. Later in the afternoon we attended a baseball game between Cleveland and New York. We noticed that the shortstop for Cleveland was GLENN BURRER and the pitcher for New York was ROGER DARON. After the game we went to talk to the boys. They entertained us at Ciro's Niteclub, owned by MARY CARNAHAN. We were seated at our table by the hostess, DONNA EBY. Mary invited us to be her guests and she told us about a few of our classmates we had not as yet seen. She said ALICE DEVENY was a nurse at Saint Luke's hospital and MARLENE HUNTER was touring Europe on her honeymoon. We asked her what had become of BETTY HUTCHINSON and CARMELLA FENNER, and she informed us that Betty was Director of Admission at Wooster College and Carmella was a grade school teacher in Florida.

That evening while looking through the newspaper I noticed a few familiar names, KENNY DONATHAN, a new driver for Capital Bus lines, JANICE RAMSEY, criminal lawyer, and DONALD CUNNINGHAM and MARY CASHMAN, laboratory technicians at Manhattan Clinic.

The next day we took in Bordon's County Fair and much to our surprise found JOANNE GUADAYNINO was the announcer. We talked to her after the show and told her about the classmates we had been fortunate enough to see. She told us RONALD TRAUGER was now a big contractor and GWEN WEBBER, much to our amazement, had turned out to be a farmer's wife. We asked about PAT MOORE and found out she was selling perfume at Saks Fifth Avenue store, still looking for a husband. Up to now all but one of our classmates has been accounted for. Later we found out LEWIS STEELE was a television announcer. It seems everyone in the class of '49 has gone a long way since graduation.

The Sports Schedule

1948-49 saw Plymouth High Re-enter eleven man football competition. Efforts of various groups in the town raised money to buy equipment for a team. A schedule of seven games was arranged and played with the following results:

	WE	THEY
Norwalk St. Paul	6	25
Huron	13	19
Willard Reserves	20	6
New London	0	39
Carey	7	52
Shelby Reserves	25	6
Cardington	0	20

Plymouth High Basketball team fought hard and scored many baskets during the year. Des Donnenwirth became high point man in the county. In the tournament we dropped the first game to Lucas by a 47-40 score and were eliminated.

During the half of the Reserve and the Varsity game in the Lexington game the queen of Basketball was crowned. This year she was Henrietta Binion. The Queen was presented with a loving cup by the team.
